ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1886.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

The overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 15th June; from Allahabad to the 13th June; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 12th June.

THE news from Upper Burma is again unsatisfactory, several serious encounters having taken place with the Dacoits.

A PRIVATE account says that the Kachyen expedition was a failure; that neither presents nor apology were sent by the Tsaubwa; and that the expeditionary column was sent back by the heavy weather and physical difficulties. The account adds that our troops were fired upon throughout the Kachyen country.

It is stated that a Burmose woman, twenty years of age, is leading the party of rebels in the Tounghu district.

THE late Consul-General for Italy at Mandalay has been granted £5,000 by the Indian Government for his services to Government prior to the outbreak of hostilities. Mr. Andreino, it will be remembered, exposed to the Government the French intrigues, and procured a copy of the treaty sent by Theebaw for the acceptance of the French Government.

SIR C. Bernard has arrived in Rangoon, but makes only a short stay, returning to Mandalay by river. He reports the country south of Myingyan quiet when he passed through, not a shot being fired. The villagers were ploughing peacefully or conveying cotton and paddy in bullock carts without any escort. The rains have sot in favourably, and good crops seem assured.

THE railway reconnaissance from Tounghoo to Nyingyan, a distance of ninety miles, has been completed, and the surveyors are now examining the country onwards to Yemethen.

THE officers of the Tibet Mission are still at Darjeeling, and a large encampment of sepoys and mules is on the Lebong spur. The date of starting has not yet been definitely fixed.

THE contract for constructing the thirty-three miles of the Indian Midland Railway from Bhopal to Bhilsa, a length of thirty-three miles, has, it is stated, been given to Sir Thomas Thompson, who lately completed the South Mahratta Railway.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL BROWNE has 27,000 men now working on the Hurnai Railway, which is making good progress. There is no cholera so far, and the health of the men is good, but the officers suffer a good deal.

THE Joint Afghan Boundary Commission arrived at Khamiah on May 30.

THE telegram regarding the arrest of Mr. Stephens, the bicyclist, in Afghan territory, is dated from Kassawi Kali, near Maimena. It is not said by whom he was arrested.

Our Resident in Kashmir, since he has been allowed to fly a flag, is also to have a military guard to protect it. A detachment, consisting of one havildar, four naicks, and thirty Sepoys of the 21st Punjab Infantry, have been sent to Srinagar from Rawul Pindi for duty at the Residency.

Messengers have been sent to the frontier assuring the Thibetians of the peaceful character of the mission.

THE town of Jhansi, which was recently transferred to the British by the Maharajah Scindia has been placed under the Lieut.-Governor of the N.W. Provinces.

THE gross forest revenue of the Bombay Presidency during the year ending March, 1885, was Rs. 27,74,750, and the net revenue Rs. 10,57,872.

A Cercle Litteraire has been started in Bombay for acquiring proficiency in the French language.

The imports of coral into Calcutta in 1885-86 amounted in value to nearly eleven lakhs. Prices were so unsatisfactory at one time that over a lakh's worth (5,475lbs.) was returned to Italy unsold. The only satisfactory feature of the trade is that no stocks have accumulated.

THE nct imports of gold into India in April amounted to 61 lakhs, and of silver to 155 lakhs. Against eight lakhs of silver coined in Calcutta, there were 55 lakhs of rupees turned out in Bombay.

PRINCE ESTERHAZY, who has been tiger-shooting in the plains, is now at Simla on a visit.

The recent Sikh emeute at Aurangabad formed the subject of a criminal investigation before the Chief Justice, Mir Akhal Ali, where thirteen prisoners were under trial on a charge of murdering the police Amin. Six of the prisoners were discharged through want of evidence, and the other seven were remanded, judgment being reserved.

It has been proposed to remove the Elphinstone College to the Sailors' Home, provision being made elsewhere for the sailors.

THE High Court reopened on Monday on the termination of the Midsummer Vacation.

THE Directors of the Bank of Bengal have raised the Bank rate to 8 per cent.

At a meeting of the Calcutta Turf Club on Friday thequestion of the assimilation of the weights for age of English and Australian horses was considered. The decision arrived at was to leave the matter over till the coldseason, when, in the event of any change being made, it would not interfere with racing arrangements.

A GARDEN sête, in aid of the funds of the Female Ward and Nursing Home of the Ripon Hospital, took place at the Viceregal Lodge on Saturday. It was a great success, upwards of Rs. 3,500 being realised.

THE death is reported of Mr. R. Porch, B.C.S., Magistrate and Collector of Poori. Mr. Porch joined the service in 1861, and would probably have retired next year.

COLONEL H. E. ELIOT, 4th Bengal Infantry, has been appointed to act as Political Officer in Manipur, for Major Trotter, wounded.

Plans and estimates are being prepared for barracks inthe Bori Valley, where one British Infantry Regiment and one Mountain Battery will hereafter be stationed, in stead of at Quetta, with some Native troops.

HERAT is reported quiet, and the defences have been practically completed. There have been some squabbles between the soldiers and the civil authorities at Kandahar, but nothing serious. From Kabul the Amir's health is reported to be slowly improving.

CAPTAIN HENRY MORLAND has been reappointed Port Officer of Bombay for a further term of five years, with effect from the 16th November, 1886.

Mr. H. FARRER, Bengal Civil Service, has been appointed Postmaster-General, Madras, in the place of the late Mr. Hutchinson.

CAPTAIN R. GARDINER, R.E., acts as Manager of the Eastern Bengal Railway, vice Major Boughey, proceeding on three months' leave.

Hotes of the Week.

A TELEGRAM from Bombay states that the Makarajah Dhuleep Singh has written a letter to the local press in which he protests against his arrest at Aden, and announces his intention of appealing for pecuniary aid to the Indian Princes. Should the British Government veto this, the Maharajah declares that he will transfer his allegiance to some other European Power. There is an old proverb which says that a wilful men must have his way, and the Maharajah seems to be choosing a way for himself which is likely to alienate all sympathy from him. That he has claims upon the consideration of the British Government will perhaps be generally allowed by all who have studied the history of our annexation of the Punjab; but no Government can afford to be threatened. An appeal for pecuniary aid to the Princes of India is not likely to have any substantial result. There might have been a chance of a few Chiefs giving him money secretly before this letter appeared; there is not the least probability of any doing it now.

THE Princes of India are not liberally inclined towards political outcasts. Like philosophers of a practical school they have little pity for unsuccessful men. Besides, the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh is in their eyes an infidel, who has denied the faith of his ancestors and accepted the salt of their foes. His recantation at the eleventh hour comes too late. His threat of transferring his allegiance to some other European Power is ridiculous. No other European Power wants him. Even Russia would not find him of any use for the amiable purpose of stirring up strife in the Punjab. He has tried that already and failed. He had far better return to England and trust to getting a fair hearing of his claims. He has not a bad case, but he has some bad adviser if it be only himself.

It is said that the Native soldiers who are with the officers of the Afghan Boundary Commission are greatly disappointed at the delay of the order to return to India. They do not care to be kept away from their homes for upwards of two years, and the Pathans especially, who keep up the custom of the Vendetta, are said to be much troubled in mind concerning the number of enemies which they may have to dispose of on their return, but who in the meantime may be disposing of their fathers and brothers in their usual domestic feuds.

SHAHDIAN, where the Boundary Commission will stay during the summer, is not marked on the ordinary map; but it is not far from Mazar-i-Sharif. The latter place is the capital of Afghan-Turkestan, and is some twelve miles east of Balk. Its sanctity consists in its being one of the reputed buril places of Ali, whose tomb of two lofty cupolas, built by Sultan Ali Mirza, nearly 500 years ago, stands to this day. The roses on the tomb, which are the most sweet-smelling Vambery ever, saw are said to have a miraculous power of healing the sick, who resort to this sacred spot, in great crowds, once a year. It was here that the Ameer Shere Ali died. Colonel Grodekoff relates the following legend regarding the shrine, which he heard from the Usbegs:—" When Ali died, his body was placed on the back of a white she camel, which was then let loose and allowed to wander whithersoever it chose. It was decided by the Musalmans to bury the Saint under the spot where camel stopped. For a long time the animal wandered about, and at length arriving at Mazur-i-Sharif, fell down exhausted. The camel was then pushed aside, and the body of Ali buried under the exact spot where it had fallen down." The Persians, who hold that Ali was buried at Kerbela, of course deny the correctness of this

IF all the reports regarding the state of society in Llassa be true, the high priest of the Theosophists, who is supposed to have spiritual control in those rogions, does not appear to exert himself much in the cause of morality. It is said that every Thibetan from babyhood upwards drinks spirits in some form or other, and that society delights to assemble at the Sakhangs, or local publichouses, for the purpose of jovial entertainment. Polyandry prevails, but the surplus of unmarried Thibetan ladies find consolation with male visitors from the adjacent countries. Illegitimate children are not murdered as in England, or sent to foundling hospitals as in France, they are "admitted" into the priesthood.

SURMISES are rife as to the cause of delay in the departure of Mr. Macaulay's mission. One reason given is that the presents ordered from Calcutta, which include toothbrushes and musical boxes, have not arrived, but this can hardly be a reason for the halt at Darjeeling until the passes are almost closed. Instructions from England may be considered as containing the correct solution of the mysterious delay.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(BY TELEGRAPH.) (Times Correspondents.) BURMA.

RANGOON, JUNE 26.
On the 19th instant Colonel Gordon, of the 28th Bengal In-On the 19th instant Colonel Gordon, of the 28th Bengal Infantry, attacked Bosweh's force at Maphe, and after severe fighting defeated and dislodged him from his position. Our loss amounted to several killed and twenty-five wounded. The enemy's loss is unknown. Bosweh then retreated with about 700 men to a position six miles distant; and Colonel Gordon halted, awaiting the arrival of reinforcements, with rations, under the command of Captain Holland, of the Royal Scots Fusiliers. General Gordon, commanding the division in Lower Burma, has sent a small force from Thayetmyo to protect the frontier and to attack Bosweh if necessary

Bosweh if necessary.

The loss sustained in the recent engagement with Bosweh was the heaviest that has as yet occurred, and the number of casualties exceeds that of General Prendergast's entire force during his advance on Mandalay. It is generally considered that a grave error of judgment was committed in refusing to accept some time ago Bosweh's offer to surrender.

The recent massacre of Chinese traders by Sepoys at Beelin continues to attract much attention. The Rangoon Times states

The recent massacre of Chinese traders by Sepoys at Beelin continues to attract much attention. The Rangoon Times states that eight Chinamen were shot, and that two were drowned while attempting to escape. The bodies of those killed were plundered. The thirty surviving members of the caravan were arrested by the local Burmese magistrate, and prevented from leaving the district. The arrest of the survivors seems to have been a wholly unjustifiable act.

The local Government has not yet received an official report as to the affair.

In my telegram of the 26th inst. I quoted the account given by the Rangoon Times of the unfortunate affair at Beelin. An official report has since been received from Captain Jones, of the 30th Madras Infantry, who commanded at Beelin, which differs materially from the reports published in the Rangoon news-materially from the reports published in the Rangoon newspapers.

Captain Jones reports that on the morning of the 22nd a Madras coolic rushed into Beelin and gave the alarm that a force of Shan dacoits was approaching to attack the town. The inhabitants were seized with a panic, and no one could give any information as to who the approaching men were. No civil officials could be found, and no one had heard that any trading party was in the vicinity.

The troops were paraded, and one party was told off to protect the town. A body of about twenty Sepoys, accompanied by the commandant, went forward to meet the approaching strangers, who were seen to be armed. Without orders the Sepoys opened fire, killing four and wounding three of the traders. As soon as possible the fire was stopped by the commandant, and the wounded were carefully attended to. The Chinese traders forming the caravan came from Yunnan, and no one could understand what they said.

The case is being investigated by the Assistant-Commissioner of the district. The Chinese merchants of Rangoon have retained counsel to appear for their fellow-countrymen, and the occurrence will be fully inquired into. The fact that a British officer of experience commanded the Sepoys is a sufficient guarantee that the reports which were published of barbarous cruelties and of the plundering of the bodies of the dead were exaggerated.

The Rangoon Gazette again refers to the ruby mines, and, replying to the statement made in the Allahabad Pioneer that the Syndicate formed to work the mines will not contain any

The official report of Sir C. Bernard on his recent tour from Mandalay, viá Yemethen, to Tounghoo, has been published in the Indian newspapers. He reports favourably on the condition of the country through which he passed, which, he says, is settling down. Sir C. Bernard's report was not communicated to the Rangoon newspapers, and its publication has caused much surprise here, as the report is at variance with all the information received by private persons from the districts through which he received by private persons from the districts through which he travelled. Sir C. Bernard's report seems also to be opposed to the views of the civil officers in charge of the districts. Immediately after his tour application was made to the Commissioner of one district through which he had travelled by a trading firm that the police might be directed to afford some protection to their foresters, as their elephants were being carried off in large numbers. The Commissioner replied that he was unable to afford assistance, as at the time in that district the police were fully occupied in protecting themselves. All other accounts represent these districts as being greatly disturbed. The insurgents are compelling the peaceably-disposed inhabitants to join them. All Europeans, except the soldiers, have been compelled to take refuge in the towns.

The Chindwin district is also extremely disturbed, and there

The Chindwin district is also extremely disturbed, and there has been much fighting. It is difficult to procure exact details of the condition of Chindwin, the military authorities having ordered that no telegrams from that district shall be communicated to the press. It is to be feared that Sir C. Bernard has taken elegration to a require a significant of the statement of the has taken altogether too sanguine a view of the condition of the

RANGOON, JUNE 29.

Detailed accounts have been received of the recent engagement with Bosweh's force. The enemy, who was strongly stockaded, resisted obstinately. Thirty rounds of shell were fired into the stockade before the fire of the insurgents slackened. The stockade was finally carried and the enemy driven out by a bayonet charge. Three men of the King's (Liverpool Regiment), three Sepoys, and one gunner were killed. Lieutenant Williams and 25 Sepoys and men of the King's (Liverpool Regiment) were three Sepoys, and one gunner were killed. Lieutenant Williams and 25 Sepoys and men of the King's (Liverpool Regiment) were wounded. Colonel Gordon's force, which attacked Bosweh, included some artillerymen with two mountain guns, 50 of the King's (Liverpool Regiment), and 95 men of the 2nd Bengal Infantry. The severity of the fighting is shown by the fact that nearly one forth of our force engaged were killed or wounded. Colonel Gordon has been reinforced by 50 men of the King's (Liverpool Regiment) and 50 Sepoys.

On the 24th inst. in a skirmish to the south of Kyoukhai with the forces of the Myentzein Prince, who was attempting to escape northwards, Captain Wilbraham, of the Prince Albert's (Somersetshire Light Infantry), was badly wounded, one corporal of his regiment was killed, and eight men, including privates of the regiment and Bombay Infantrymen, were wounded. Our force consisted of 70 of the Prince Albert's (Somersetshire Light Infantry) and 50 Sepoys. The enemy was charged with the bayonet and defeated, four gingals being taken.

Colonel Tilly, of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, stationed at Bhamo, has asked that his regiment may be relieved. The men have suffered much from hard work and exposure.

Major Hailes, commanding the Upper Chindwin district, with three British officers, 200 Sepoys and Ghoorkas, and two mountain guns, attacked on the 19th inst. a force of 1,500 insurgents, strongly stockaded three miles to the south of Tummoo. The attacking force failed to dislodge them, and, after some sharp fighting, retired. Major Hailes and three of the Ghoorkas were wounded.

A Government resolution published in yesterday's Gazette conveys the thanks of the Governor-General to the Telegraph Department, in connection with the advance into and the occupation of Upper Burma. Appreciation is expressed of the excellent services rendered in circumstances of much difficulty and danger, and the Governor-General eulogises the ready devotion to duty displayed in cheerfully accepting the hardships and risks involved in operations with an army in the field. The foresight and ability displayed by the Director-General are specially mentioned, and the Governor-General in Council gives cordial thanks to Mr. Cappel, Director-General, Mr. Brooke, Director of Construction, and soveral other officers of the department. and several other officers of the department.

Mr. Moylan has received the thanks of the Local Government for bringing to light a case of extortion by a policeman at Mandalay. The policeman has been prosecuted, and the money—

The scheme of railway extension in Upper Burma has been submitted to the Secretary of State, who will grant his sanction, provided the expense can be met from the ordinary Budget Estimates.

CALCUTTA, JUNE 27.

It is a somewhat singular coincidence that Scindiah and Holkar, the two most prominent representatives of the powerful Mahratta nation, men of almost exactly the same age, and who ascended their respective thrones in the same year, should have passed away within a few days of each other. The Indian Government announced each event in a special black-bordered edition of the official Gazette, but the terms in which the two Princes were commemorated show the different estimation in which they were held. Regarding Holkar, the Governor-General in Council merely says that the Indian Empire has lost in him one of the most capable and experienced of the Native chiefs. In Council merely says that the Indian Empire has lost in him one of the most capable and experienced of the Native chiefs. Scindiah receives warmer praise in these words:—"During the forty-three years which have elapsed since his Highness succeeded to the rule of the Gwalior State he has maintained foremost place among the loyal feudatories of the Crown. His Highness received only a few months ago a crowning proof of the trust reposed in him by Her Majesty's Government, and the Governor-General in Council grieves to think that he lived so short a time to enjoy the fulfilment of a long-cherished desire.

A month ago I telegraphed a summary of the speech delivered by the President of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, in which he attacked the system of the annual removal of the Government to Simla, and described it as a scandal to the administration and an imposition on the taxpayers. That speech, coupled with the persistent rumour that the Finance Committee intended to propose the permanent fixing of the official headquarters in the hills, has had the effect of directing general attention to the subject and it is believed that a public meeting will be held to project, and it is believed that a public meeting will be held to project, and it is believed that a public meeting will be held to protest against the practice.

Another rumour regarding the proceedings of the Finance Committee has lately become current, and has excited much discussion. It is said that it thinks of recommending the abolition, or, at least, a considerable curtailment, of the jurisdiction of the original side of the High Courts, and the substitution, in the whole or part, of an inferior class of tribunals as well as the importing into the Presidency towns of the heavy court-fees which form a crushing tax on the administration of justice in the provinces. This proposal, if it be indeed seriously entertertained, is certain to meet with strong opposition, not only from the High Courts, but also from the entire community in each Presidency town. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the Calcutta Trades Association, bodies which represent a great majority of the European inhabitants of Calcutta, have already taken the alarm, and addressed the Government on the subject. They ask whether there is any truth in the rumour, and request that they may be furnished with full details and all the papers, and be allowed an opportunity of expressing an opinion before any decision is taken in a matter of such importance to them. It will not be creditable to the Government if, while maintaining the luxury of a summer retreat on the hills, it proceeds to impair the quality and increase the cost of justice provided for the already heavily taxed suitors.

In connection with this question of the hill migration it may suitors.

The Goorkha regiments are so generally considered the model corps of the Indian army that somewhat undue importance is corps of the Indian army that somewhat undue importance is attached to certain marks of insubordination which have lately appeared among the 3rd Goorkhas at Almora. The facts appear to be there:—Some time ago General Gordon inspected the regiment, and after the parade went to the gymnasium. The Goorkhas then came flocking round him, greatly excited and clamouring about their grievances. When told that they could not be heard in such a manner and must make the proper representations through their officers, they calmed down and returned to the lines: On inquiry, it transpired that there were five or six classes lines: On inquiry, it transpired that there were five or six classes of rice, of which the Goorkhas eat the fourth; but for several years the men of this regiment have been receiving compensation years the men of this regiment have been receiving compensation for rice, as if they used the best. Some time ago they were given compensation on the proper scale, and hence the discontent. The Subahdar - Major, or principal native officer, and a company Subahdar have been tried by court-martial for not keeping the commanding officer informed of what was going on, and have been retired on pensions. The regiment is now reported to be quiet. The moral would seem to be that it is now time to abolish all allowances and compensation and to fix the Sanova' new at all allowances and compensation, and to fix the Sepoys' pay at the proper rate.

The managers of Lady Dufferin's Fund have published an account of the progress made in supplying female medical aid to the women of India. The dispensary in Calcutta promises to be a great success. The attendance is increasing rapidly. The North-Western branch association is establishing a female hospital at Allahabad, while the female medical school at Agra shows great vitality. More lady doctors are required at Lahore and great vitality. More lady doctors are required as Advisors. Delhi. Some of the Native States are also calling for lady doctors. A provincial branch association has been founded at Rangoon. The conditions on which the Queen's and Viceroy's medals are to be awarded will shortly be made public. The official report on the cyclone which swept over Orissa last September has only just been published. It appears that the Government estate of Birso, in the Balasore district, suffered most. The storm wave came over the sea embankment and saturated the land with salt water, destroying the whole of the crops and a great number of cattle. The Government granted a remission of the entire rent for the year, and made advances. The loss was very slight in other parts of Balasore, and no relief was necessary. Three hundred persons are reported to have been killed in the Cuttack district by falling trees and houses. No traces were found of the remains of houses at Hookeytorlah, or traces were found of the remains of houses at Hookeytorlah, or of the treasure chest of the port department. ### ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE OF INDIAN ART.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Papers read before the Society of Arts on Indian Arts and Indian Art Manufactures are as plentiful as theories on the authorship of the letters of Junius or the still more frequently discussed topic of the letters of Junius or the still more frequently discussed topic of the authorship of Shakespeare's plays. But when a paper on this subject coincides with the opening of an Exhibition of these same arts and manufactures, and when moreover, the special purpose of its author is to treat Indian manufactures "from a practical point of view," we regard the contribution as excep-tional, and under certain circumstances we might welcome it as tional, and under certain circumstances we might welcome it as valuable. Mr. Baden Powell, in giving to the subject the benefit of a considerable Indian experience, evidently intended to help the interests of India at the South Kensington Exhibition, and if any considerable portion of those who will pay their shilling to pass into the "Colonies" in these summer months could be got to read his admirable account of so many of the art products of this country the Exhibition would be the more profitable alike to those who visit it and to those who contribute to it.

It was a familiar story which the lecturer told when he described how the conservation of the Indian handicrafts had been scribed how the conservatism of the Indian handicrafts had been broken in upon by methods borrowed from Europe. The awful anilines have invaded the purity and strength of the dyes of the country, showing well on the trading returns, in which they now figure at an annual value of about a quarter of a million sterling, but showing badly in the "strivings of tawdry yellow with dirty r.d." the faded jejune aspect of garments that would have been right and pure in tone but for the English dye-makers and their cheap and nasty aniline inventions. And with aniline dyes much else has come which grieves those who would be conservative of all the good things of Indian craftsmanship. Mr. Baden Powell has a sad tale to tell of skilled native furniture makers who haved the kneet to the disconnections. has a sad tale to tell of skilled native furniture makers who have bowed the knee to the dii penates of the Tottenham Court-road Pantheon, and no longer follow their own patterns and employ their own ornaments. Half the woodcuts in the catalogues of that great furniture mart are now being reproduced for the English bungalow, with this, however, to distinguish the copies from the originals, that the workmanship gets worse and worse. Now this may be very true and very interesting, but these little dissertations upon the influence of Tottenham Court-road upon Indian Cabinet Ware have no necessary place in a survey of "Indian manufactures from a practical point of view." It is mainly when the Native workman, with no right guidance, stumbles along the bypaths of English design that these woeful minglings of the bad things of Eastern and of Western Art are seen. A Native cabinet maker who has a Tottenham Court-road catalogue thrust into his hand can scarcely help going wrong. catalogue thrust into his hand can scarcely help going wrong. But if Mr. Baden Powell inferred from his experience of the results of European misguidance that Native craftsmen are best left to themselves the inference may very fairly be challenged. There are whole branches of Indian art which can be rescued There are whole branches of Indian art which can be rescued from puerility and worse only by the guidance of European hands. Take, for instance, Cutch silver work, the bulk of which is in execution alone more crude, more careless, more reckless of form and finish than the easiest efforts of an English tinker's apprentice. Or, again, though one may carry in the memory happy exceptions, what is to become of those cotton prints of the Lahore district, with their wild pictorialisations of unthought-of things, unless somebody from outside the Native print room shall come and tell the craftsmen that right drawing is of some imcome and tell the craftsmen that right drawing is of some importance in textile decoration, that it is as well that borders should fit at right angles, that patterns look none the better for being blurred or for running into one another?

The most practical way, after all, of dealing with the question of Indian manufactures is to ascertain what part of them are likely to gain and hold a place in the European market. Those which have had a footing there merely for novelty's or oddity's sake ought scarcely to be included in the schedule. The English public are, for a time, amazingly tolerant even of ugliness and bad workmanship if only these are allied to the bizarre. But they have been somewhat laughed out of this by their more cynical neighbours, slaves to bon gout, who think no better of an ugly thing because it comes from the far East than they would think of it if it came from their own village. For any permanent place that the products of the Indian handicrafts are to have in the English market they must rely entirely upon their own merits of workmanship and design. People will not be per-suaded by the fact that it is Cutch work to buy silver ware that might have been chased by a blacksmith with a horsenail. When Mr. Baden Powell says that only a little care is needed to obviate the defects in the work most frequently met with he takes a very cheerful view of the matter. It took a good deal of training and of very watchful supervision on the part of the masters in the Bombay School of Art to ensure that the Native art workmanship exhibited in the carved stone capitals at the Bori Bunder Station should be sound work, free from suspicion of scamping; and there is a mass of so-called art workmanship in India which is in need of precisely the same severe but salutary discipline. The improvement of the quality of the work being a condition precedent to ensuring it a place upon the market, some of Mr. Baden Powell's suggestions with the latter object seem somewhat premature. We recognise to the full the truth of all that he says as to the commercial qualifications under which the peculiar habits of Native craftsmen place them-their dilatoriness and their strange habit of working without regard to the ascer-tainment of a reasonable remuneration for their labour. But this is of less importance than those constructive vices of which Mr. Baden Powell seems to have been conscious when he admitted that "roughness and ill-fitting of parts is already marked enough." His error is that he seems to regard this as an accidental rather than an essential obstacle to the growth of a foreign trade in the art products of the country.

THE MADRAS SCANDALS. (Times of India.)

The future Government of Madras is a serious problem which must occupy the attention of the Supreme Government. Scandal follows scandal with painful regularity in that unfortunate Presidency. If a man announced in Bombay that the Collector of Poona had bribed some villagers to beat a Member of Council of Poona had bribed some villagers to beat a Member of Council on his return from Mahableshwur, the gentleman making the announcement would certainly pass the remainder of his days in the Colaba Lunatic Asylum. But, in Madras, a precisely similar statement has not been regarded as the product of a diseased brain. It is also a little startling to be told that a Member of Council tried to sell through his son an estate worth Rs. 60,000 Council tried to sell through his son an estate worth Rs. 60,000 for Rs. 1,25,000. If this statement be true, and it is given in a contemporary as a fact, the Supreme Government ought to insist on the official ceasing to be a Member of Council. Members of Council ought to be, if our Empire is to last, like Cæsar's wife, above suspicion. We fear the discovery of gold and the value of land for tea and cinchona planting has had a baneful influence on those who administer Madras. Mr. Grant Duff has not been sufficiently strong to grapple with a very painful state of affairs. Mr. Foster once said that there was no discontent in Ireland, because the Castla people told him so. Mr. Grant Duff has not believed in there being evil in Madras, because the Ootacamund clique has informed him all was correct. He has closed his eyes and shut his ears, and the result is that the present condition of and shut his ears, and the result is that the present condition of and shut his ears, and the result is that the present condition of the Madras Presidency is a disgrace to our rule. But Mr. Grant-Duff's tenure of office is near its close. Who is to be his successor? A strong man is wanted for the pest. Sir Richard Temple, if we could suppose for a moment that he had become tired of the House of Commons, would be admirably fitted for it. The first Collector who was insubordinate would command our sympathy. The Member of Council, who explained to him his land jobbing transactions, would spend a pleasant half-hour. But Sir Richard Temple is not likely to desert the field of politics. Sir Theodore Hope is also admirably fitted for the task Sir Theodore Hope is also admirably fitted for the task of governing Madras. Few men have a more minute knowledge of work, and Surat was a model district when he was Collector. The state of discipline was perfect. Six months after reaching Madras every wound would be probed and the knife applied with no sparing hand. To appoint an English politician to be a successor to Mr. Grant Duff would be a grave blunder, and must lead to some scandal even greater than those which have already arisen. The next Governor of Madras must be a strong civilianacquainted with India, and, therefore, not dependent on any clique for advice or guidance.

INDIAN SILK. (Pioneer.)

It is a curious fact that Indian sericulture, while it is one of It is a curious fact that Indian sericulture, while it is one of the oldest industries of the country, and one which raised great expectations in the minds of the first English residents, is at the present day one of the most backward. More than a century ago the Indian Government offered special inducements to Native cultivators to grow the mulberry in Bengal, by offering them exceptionally favourable terms as regarded the rent and tenure of their lands. The result was a rapid development of the silk industry, and in 1785 Bengal silk drove all competitors, except the silks of China and Italy, from the English markets. This progress seems to have been fairly well maintained until 1837, when all the silk factories were given over to private manuprogress seems to have been fairly well maintained until 1837, when all the silk factories were given over to private manufacturers. In the following year, indeed, Government wasted considerable sums, or permitted an Italian (Signor Mutti) to waste them, in endeavouring to galvanise the industry into life in the Deccan; but since the failure of this experiment, its assistance has been mainly confined to the inexpensive method of issuing Resolutions on the beauty of the Indian silkworm.

In 1879 the Indian Government issued a Resolution stating that "there is at least as great a demand in the European markets for the cocoon of the eri and muga as there is for that of the tussar." Yet nothing practical was done to encourage this branch of the industry, and the consequence is that although the facilities for cultivation are almost limitless, the cocoons are either not procurable at all, or are so at a price which is prohibitive to European manufacturers.

All this is not as it should be. It is absurd that with such facilities for the development of a silk industry India should still be dependent for a great part even of its raw silk on foreign countries. All the other great trades of the country—the cotton trade, the tea trade, the wheat trade—have received plentiful encouragement from Government and the benefits of European capital and management, with the result that they have attained a success beyond the most sanguine expectations. In the case of the silk trade, on the other hand, beyond a small donation to the exhibition of cocoons which was started at Berhampore two years ago, Government has done nothing, or almost nothing, nor do the reports of its agents in the various provinces show an adequate recognition of the importance of the subject. Mr. Wardle suggests that Government should rear a limited quantity of cocoons, from which a careful selection of seed only should be made. This is the first step towards re-establishing the reputation of the Bengal silk, and it is to be hoped that the suggestion will not end merely in correspondence, as did that about the importation of fresh eggs from China two years ago. There are many other ways in which encouragement might be given. Special inducements might be held out to ryots in the Punjab, Bengal, and Assam to extend and improve the cultivation of the mulberry. This was done more than a century ago by the East India Company with excellent results, and there is no reason why it should not be tried again. Some one should be specially charged to investigate the capabilities of the various districts for the rearing of the different species of silkworm, and authentic reports published, analogous to those of the Superintendents of Government Farms on the cultivation of cotton and wheat. It may be no part of Government's duty to supply capital for the development of particular industries; but it is its duty to make known as widely as possible the natural resources of the country it rules, so as to facilitate and enco

BENGAL.

It is proposed again to provide a swimming bath for the European population of Calcutta.

CAPTAIN R. GARDINER, R.E., acts as Manager, the Eastern Bengal Railway, vice Major Boughey, proceeding on three months' leave.

More Mass Meetings.—A native paper in Calcutta says that on the 6th June at Singhur, a great meeting of over 20,000 ryots was held "praying for the reconstitution of the Legislative Councils, the repeal of the Arms Act, the abandonment of the Putwari Bill, and the admission of Natives to Volunteer Corps."

"STATESMAN" LIBEL CASE.—This case ceme up for hearing again in the Calcutta Police Court on Wednesday last, and was formally committed to the sessions. The defendants pleaded not guilty, and reserved their defence and cross-examination of complainant's witnesses. On the application of Mr. Orr, who appeared for the defendants in the place of Mr. Birrow who has conducted their case hitherto, the Magistrate ordered the defendant, Mr. Robert Knight, to be released on bail on his own recognisances of Rs. 10,000 and two sureties of Rs. 2,500 each; and the defendant, Mr. Barlow, to be released on his personal recognisance of Rs. 1,000 and two sureties of Rs. 2000 each; the bailees to be the same in the case of both the defendants.

AGITATION IN ASSAM.—Another public meeting has been held in Assam—at Jorehat—to protest against the Land and Revenue Regulations. The meeting was held on the 2nd June, and it is said that upwards "of ten thousand people of the town and subdivision" were present. The Land and Revenue Regulations were not the only subjects discussed, for we find that in the fifth resolution, the meeting recorded its full sympathy with the object of the national conferences recently held in Calcutta and Bombay regarding the introduction of the representative element in the Legislative Councils; the repeal of the Arms Act; the retrenchment of expenditure by the larger employment of Indians; the Civil Service question; and Lord Kimberley's despatch thereon; the separation of judicial from executive authority in the administration of justice; and the reorganisation of the police.

MADRAS.

THE MADRAS POSTMASTER-GENERALSHIP.—The Madras Mail says:—Mr. S. Sullen, Presidency Postmaster, Madras, having been appointed to officiate temporarily as Postmaster-General, Madras, in addition to his own duties, received charge of the atter office from Mr. M. Hammick, on the 13th ult. It is umoured that a young Civil Servant in Bengal is to have the absurdly easy post that Mr. Hammick has vacated. We hope, however, that the Government of India will give the provisional arrangement a fair trial, for, if it succeeds—as we believe it will—the appointment of a uscless Postmaster-General in Madras may be abolished, and a saving of Rs. 20,000 per annum may be effected, after having given Mr. Sullen a modest increase."

WHITEFIELD KAOLIN.—The discovery of kaolin at Whitefield promises, says the Bangalore Spectator, to make the fortunes of that little Eurasian colony, which, so far as agricultural success is concerned, has always been doubtful. "We believe that Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., of Madras, have made some very handsome offers to Mr. White, the President of the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association, with regard to working the kaolin beds and turning them to profit. In the first place we understand that the firm in question offered to buy up the beds for a good round sum. This the Association, we believe, are not prepared to accept. The other offer made by Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., we are told, is to work the kaolin for the Association, and give the latter a fair share of the profits. Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. are prepared to lay out a very large sum of money, get out plant and experienced workmen from England, and work the thing on a large scale. We should certainly say that the Association could not do better than to close with these terms."

BOMBAY.

Mr. W. C. FURNIVALL, the Agent and Chief Engineer of H.IIthe Nizam's State Railway, goes on leave to England next week. During his absence Mr. Pendlebury will act as Agent.

THE REV. J. H. MACKAY, M.A., Junior Chaplain, Church of Scotland, Poona, has been appointed to act in the same capacity at Kurrachee, during the absence of the Rev. James Henderson, who has been granted three months' privilege leave.

THE REV. F. L. SHARPIN, M.A., has been confirmed in the appointment of Archdeacon and Commissary, with effect from the 1st inst., in succession to the Venerable S. Stead, M.A., who has been compelled by the continued unsatisfactory state of his health to retire.

Mr. W. H. MIDDLETON, District Traffic Superintendent G.I.P. Railway, Bombay, leaves by to-day's mail steamer on furlough to Europe for eighteen months. Both as a railway official and as a captain of the G.I.P. Railway Volunteers Mr. Middleton has been universally respected by the railway subordinates and the merchants who have had business relations with him in connection with the railway. Mr. H. H. Swan, Goods Superintendent at Bombay, will act for Mr. Middleton, in addition to carrying on his own duties.

Mr. W. Martin Wood writes to us regarding the decease of that valuable public officer, Sir George W. Kellner:—"My first acquaintance with Mr. Kellner, then little known, but highly-appreciated accountant, was so long ago as 1865, when he was sent round to Bombay, to report on and revise the financial system of the Indian guaranteed railways. From that period his rise was continuous, for the Government of India came to find that his peculiar and exceptional abilities were beyond price as an investigator of tangled accounts and an organiser of financial arrangements. No more striking proof of this could be adduced than his appointment—though an "uncovenanted" man—to the high and responsible post of Military Accountant-General of India. It was before he had obtained that notable promotion that I had the fortune again to meet him on his return from England (about 1876), where he had been specially deputed to convince the India Office of its obstinate misapprehension in rofusing to compromise the rapidly-accumulating claims of the officers of the Indian armies, whose guaranteed rights had been ignored on the (financially) disastrous amalgamation scheme. His Grace the Duke of Argyll, then Secretary of State for India, can, I daresay, recall the patience and lucidity with which Mr. Kellner refuted the conclusions of General Pannynton, the India Office actuary, in which the Duke and his predecessors had too long confided. The signal service subsequently rendered by this Indian accountant in clearing up the perplexing financial muddle at Cyprus is sufficiently known, and was suitably recognised in his being knighted. The Times omits to mention the peculiarly arduous work done by Sir George in revising the accounts of several of the Crown Colonies, more especially those of the West India. It is much to be desired that he may have left his own notes of that protracted financial campaign, which, if combined with the results of his observations of American and Canadian systems of public book-keeping, would form a volume of

LETTERS AND DESPATCHES OF HORATIO VISCOUNT NELSON, K.B.

Few persons better exemplify the ingratitude of an inconsiderate nation than Horatio Viscount Nelson. True his splendid services gained him splendid rewards; true his name is adored and his memory revered by the countless thousands who flock year by year to the Victory at Portsmouth to take a glance at the spot on the deck where England's hero received his mortal the spot on the deck where England's hero received his mortal wound; but none the less it must be avowed, and it is a deep and imperishable blot on the escutcheon of Britain's glory, that his last wishes were disregarded—his one and only request rejected. "I leave Emma Lady Hamilton, therefore, a legacy to my king and country trusting that they will give her an ample provision to maintain her rank in life. I also leave to the beneficence of my country my adopted daughter, Horatia Nelson Thompson, and I desire she will use in future the name of Nelson only. These are the only favours I ask of my king and country at this moment when I am going to fight their battle." And how did his "King and country" discharge their obligations to the dying warrior, who a few hours after these words were penned was shot down at the moment of victory? It brings a blush of shame to every honest patriot to recall to mind that Lady Hamilton was allowed to die in abject want and poverty in a humble and barely decent to die in abject want and poverty in a humble and barely decent lodging at Calais—that Horatia Nelson never received a single penny from the State, and lived and died a standing reproach to penny from the State, and lived and died a standing reproach to the country which neglected its charge, and the nation which disregarded her adopted father's one and dying request. "England expects every man to do his duty." Yes, and in Nelson's case right nobly did he respond to the call. What has she to say as to her part in a transaction which haply stands well-nigh unrivalled in the annals of black ingratitude and shameless want of consideration.

It is well, therefore, for the nation to be at times reminded of its sins, and the "letters and despatches" which Mr. Laughton has given to the world will serve their purpose, if they produce has given to the world will serve their purpose, it they produce even transient feelings of remorse and passing pangs of conscience; but it may be feared that the good effect they are calculated to create will be considerably marred by the haphazard, random mode in which they are presented to the public. Nelson is like a dog in a fair, here, there, and everywhere; at one time we find him in England, at another off the coast of Sicily; at one page find him in England, at another off the coast of Sicily; at one page he is Captain Nelson, at another Sir Horatio Nelson, and lastly Viscount Nelson; but when and how and why all the changes occurred are left to the imagination of the reader. Yet obviously if the latter knows everything about Nelson, if his acquaintance with the history of the period is so minute and accurate that he can follow all the kaleidescope transmogrifications in which the letters abound, there is little necessity to waste time in perusing a twice-told tale, and in the absence of such knowledge the mind is left in a state of hopeless chaos and irremediable bewilderment. Take, for instance, one example, the proceedings of Nelson in the Bay of Naples in 1799, the misrepresentation in regard to which says Mr. Laughton, 'strikes at his character as a man of probity and honour, and demands a closer investigation.' Admitted; but surely the letters on the subject, while left to Admitted; but surely the letters on the subject, while left to speak for themselves, ought to have been prefaced by some slight account of the affair explanatory of the whole state of the case. The public could then have drawn their own deductions from the evidence put before them; but as matters stand no one can find what really happened, or why, indeed, anything happened at all. The mind is left perplexed, and it needs a reference to a life of Nelson to ascertain the ins-and-outs of a proceeding which a few lines would have made clear. Then again, as to personages. Now and again a footnote tells the rank and office of the individual to whom a letter may chance to be addressed; but in the great majority of instances the imagination is left to fill up the void. That Mr. Laughton should have put any explanatory matter in his volume indicates in itself that in his opinion somewhat was needed; but we contend that this somewhat is not enough to enable the public "to form a more exact appreciation of the genius of our great hero."

We should advise our readers to refer to their libraries, dislodge Southey's "Life of Nelson" from its time-honoured shelf, eruse once again the charming tale of the great naval defender of England's honour and fair name, then examine what has been told by the sober volume of fact which Mr. Laughton places before you, and if in some cases your opinion of the man is modified you will in the end hold fast to the conviction that Horatio Lord Nelson was a hero of whom his country may well be proud, the very incarnation of truth and plain dealing, a man to whom a mean action or a dastardly device was unknown and impossible; courageous to an unexampled degree, yet withal vain as a woman; well versed in the intricacies of his profession, considerate to those around him, beloved by his comrades, dreaded by his enemies, and neglected by his country. This was Horatio Earl of Nelson and Bronte.

ORIENTAL PENMANSHIP.*

The great and deserved reputation of the late Professor E. H. Palmer will ensure respect to all he wrote and all he left behind. The volume, therefore, which he had compiled before his death, explaining the mysteries of "Oriental penmanship," will be sure to receive respectful consideration, more especially as he professes to have discovered the principles which underlie the perplexing "shikasta," or current scrawl of everyday life in the East. But it may be doubted whether he would have subscribed to the observation which Mr. Pincott, the joint collaborateur in the work before us, has been bold enough to record. "It may securely be anticipated that they will remove all difficulties from the path of the learner." Verily, this is a "big bill!" To understand the "whys and wherefores" of a thing is, of course, highly desirable, but it needs a lengthened experience to decipher hieroglyphics, which is most correspond upon an intelligible rule but which, in most cases, are not formed upon an intelligible rule, but merely reflect, as "Sam Weller" would say, "the taste and fancy of the speller." Take an instance. At page 29 are given a few of the more common shikasta forms; compare these with the practical application of them to be found at page 37, and we venture to assert that their own mother would not recognise such a transmogrified offspring.

None the less, an intelligent understanding of the groundwork None the less, an intelligent understanding of the groundwork of an art is an absolute sine qua non as regards eventual proficiency, and this is the real value of Professor Palmer's "Oriental Penmanship," a value which, as it is apparently designed for use in India, is increased possibly by the circumstance that nearly all the plates give specimens of Indian caligraphy, which differs materially from that adopted by the subjects of the king of kings, who sits on the throne of power as Ruler of Persia.

THE ASIATIC QUARTERLY REVIEW.+

Sir Lepel Griffin, whose article occupies the first place in this number, continues his interesting notes on Native, as contrasted with British, rule in India, and, in the present paper, deals mainly with the Chiefs; introducing us to them "in their own homes, where the local colour is harmonious, and where no constraint' (contrast) with nineteenth century civilisation makes even splendid barbarism grotesque." Of Chiefs we are given every specimen—the Ruler educated under British tutelage, another, about to study on the spot the art of Governments understood in England, the Prince who "sins against light and knowledge," the Rajah who, "with kindly, careless hand, rules the people in simple patriarchal fashion," all alike are placed before the reader with a few clear and well-defined touches; the article being closed by a lucid exposition of the system adopted by us when directly managing a Native State. As an instance, the marvellous results produced in the important Bundelcund State of Rewah, since, at the formally expressed wish of the late Rajah, we undertook the administration, are fully set forth. A warm, we undertook the administration, are fully set forth. A warm, we undertook the administration, are fully set forth. A warm, and well-deserved, recognition is given to the excellent administration of Native ladies, doubly remarkable in a land where their seclusion is so general. The whole paper will be found most interesting; we must not fail in adding the expression of our entire concurrence in the writer's suggestion that some honorific reward should be given to Chiefs, of all grades, for continuous good government. It has, we believe, been suggested, that heraldry might help us; but from that resource we seem to be debarred by the preposterous farms enacted at Delhi (well that heraldry might help us; but from that resource we seem to be debarred by the preposterous farce enacted at Delhi (well exposed at pp. 8, 9), where we borrowed for the cognizances of the Chiefs, the "mythical monstere," whose existence Mr. Gould has "revendicated." An increase to the personal salute of a deserving Ruler is an obvious alternative; the institution of an Order, Pour le Mérite, is advocated by Sir L. Griffin as another, and as the most "powerful stimulus of good Gonoroment" Government.'

From the Essay above noticed, relating to those parts of India which have least "assimilated" Western notions, to that on the which have least "assimilated" Western notions, to that on the primitive state of the country, before the Muhammadan conquest, is not a violent transition. "Native India" is perhaps most itself where Moslem habits have prevailed least. The delineation of the country, of its inhabitants, of their social customs—including caste divisions, which Megasthenes plainly, though erroneously, enumerates—(see pp. 1035)—by Greeks, Chinese, and Persian travellers, is well rendered by Mr. Hutton, and is both interesting and suggestive interesting and suggestive.

A very important Indian social question, the early status of women, which is only touched on by the last-named contributor, receives very full and enudite investigation at the hands of Mr. H. H. Risley. Rightly pointing out the entire freedom of Hindu women up to the time of the Musulman conquest, and the reasons which thenceforth led to their comparative seclusion, the author shows how far the artificial limits within which, and outside which, marriage could not, and, subject to certain modifications, cannot now, take place in various tribes, operate in restraint of the natural tendency to selection in person or by proxy: the principle being, that (p. 89) "all the Indian people (? peoples), with exceptions so rare as not to be worth mentioning, must marry within their own tribe (or caste, as the case may be) and may not marry within their sept or section." This rule does not, of course, apply to the aboriginal tribes (Kols, Oraons, Sonthals, &c.): nor is it observed by the remarkable caste called Bais in Bhagalpur. The whole subject is, from an ethnological point of view, deserving of far more attention than it has received. The mere addition of a few details to the bare appropriate on the part of enumeration betrays a very inadequate conception, on the part of the authorities, of the wealth of information which might be obtained from the decennial Census. Sir W. C. Plowden, as Census Commissioner, long since pointed this out. But, except in Bengal and the N.W. Provinces, ethnological inquiries seem to have received no impulse from his very important and suggestive representations.

Sir Louis Jackson's Retrospect of Bengal will remind many a qui hye of his own recollections as a "writer," and is written pleasantly, as well as from a sensible point of view. In particular, many of the fallacies of the school of Blunt, Cotton, and Co. (such as the compulsory dismounting of Natives when meeting a civilian on the highway) are (p. 115) very summarily disposed of.

We regret to see our often-expressed apprehension that the Civil Service has not been improved by competition, shared by so competent a judge of this matter as Sir Louis.*

Mr. Boulger's forecast of Afghan politics deserves, as does everything which emanates from so capable a writer, close attentions of the street of the s tion; and the value of the article would be lost were any attempt made to compress it. Ishak, of the possible pretenders within, Ayoob, of those without, Afghanistan, are indicated as being the most dangerous; and Mr. Boulger justly remarks that, if we are to pay Persia £12,000 a-year for the internment of the latter, we ought to presume the second states and the second states are the presume to the latter, we are the presume to the latter, we ought to persuade the Shah to remove him to a more secure place

The author of the "Lays of Ind" will hardly thank Sir R. L. Playfair for "knocking the bottom out" of one of his best stories, that about the occupation of Perim, which is here done from Sir Robert's own knowledge as the late Sir W. Coghlan's Assistant Resident at the time. Still, what the well-known story loses, history gains, by the actual facts becoming known.

The India Office Records contain a mine of information which will yet yield much to systematic research. In the previous issue (Vol. I. No. 2) of the "Asiatic Quarterly," we had an account of John Company's dealings with Sumatra; and here we read, excerpted from the records of the factory at Gambroon, some details, interesting in spite of the marvellous spelling (Ophgoon and Augwaun for Afghan, &c.), of the woes endured by the Company's "factors" at Ispahan (Spahaun) and Gombroon, during the Afghan conquest of Persia in 1722-23, in the course of which "Thomas Cocley Caun," afterwards Nadir Shah, makes his appearance. The notes to those curious letters are adequate to their object, and indicate one or two errors in Malcolm's "History of Persia." of Persia.'

The usual thoughtful summary of the events of the past three months, so far as they affect Asiatic matters, closes what may fairly be pronounced an excellent number of this valuable

WARM CORNERS IN EGYPT.+

If aught be, more gloriously uncertain than the chances presented by racing and by cricket, it is the chances of "service." Many men in former days grew old in the service without having had the privilege of smelling hostile powder; others "made" every campaign, and never got through it without encountering an enemy's missile. The "warm corners" which fell to our author's lot were not only of a warlike character; he had to carry on a campaign against cholera. He was in Alexandria immediately after the massacre, having been warned by an Arab in Cairo that something hot was in store, there also, for the in Cairo that something hot was in store, there also, for the "Franghis." "It is very hot weather in Masr, but it is cool and pleasant in Skinderieh (Alexandria); . . . it is better you should go." Severity was the order of the day in Alexandria; and our author had full opportunity of comparing the relative merits of the kourbash and the "cat." He gives his judgment in no uncertain language. The kourbash, so roundly abused, he regards as almost a farce, applied as it is to feet hardened by constant treading on the ground. "For real cruelty," he says, "give me a cat o' nine tails." That the culprits, to a man, deserved what they got, we make no doubt; but one's sympathy is nevertheless aroused by the conduct of an Arab, who, being offered, after his punishment, a pannikin of water, put it aside, with the simple explanation, "Ramadan," the fasting month (p. 40). Even in that extensity he obayed the law of his (p. 49). Even in that extremity he obeyed the liw of his prophet. How many Christians would have been as steadfast to their own creed? The writer does full justice to the wonderful energy and ability of Lord Charles Beresford, who was "here, there, and everythere, doing everything, and everything well....

Never," he says, "did I know what an organiser could be until I first met Lord Charles" (p. 44).

Our author's experiences as a "medicine man" naturally afford

Our author's experiences as a "medicine man" naturally afford him material for not a few anecdotes, many of them entertaining enough. That Orientals of all races look for quantity rather than quality, and above all things, for strong flavour, in medicines, is nothing new; their inveterate habit of eating, instead of swallowing, pills, being doubtless due (. 99) to a disbelief in the efficacy of any medicine which is not "tasty." Especially popular was the administration of seidlitz powders, or, as the people called them, sherbet. The "Sisters" at University College Hospital would be not a little amazed at the kind of tone adopted to "nurses" in Egypt. "If he does not get well, comah adopted to "nurses" in Egypt. "If he does not get well, conah Rassak" (look out for your head!) was the threat—accompanied, however, by a promise of reward on the patient's recovery—addressed by the witer to his servant's "nurse" (p. 186).

The language difficulty of course cropped up; and our author had to learn his Arabic à la Ollendorff (Mr. Prendergast's excellent "Mastery" system not having, so far as we are aware, been as yet adapted to the Arabic language). "It is bad," says our author, "to command men whose language you cannot speak, and is bad for men to receive crders from their officers in a tongue with which they are absolutely unacquainted. This is true in commanding Egyptians speaking Arabic, but much more so when commanding Turks, no three of whom speak the same thing" (p. 175). All the more credit is due to the British officers of the Egyptian army for the way in which, in spite of this and other obstacles, they have brought their troops into so high a state of efficiency.

Our author gives (p. 238) a painfully interesting account of Baker Pasha's unsuccessful attempt to relieve Tokar, and of the manner in which his force was cut to pieces by the victorious Hadendowas. SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS has issued a General Order, strongly impressing upon the attention of Cavalry and Artillery officers the vital importance of saving troop horses as much as possible. The order quotes Colonel Barrow's memorandum on the good work done by the Arab horse used by the 19th Hussars, during the campaign on the Nile for the relief of Khartoum; and concludes:—"Sir Frederick Roberts feels confident that all officers under his command will appreciate, as much as he himself does, practical hints which that distinguished soldier, the late Colonel Barrow, has left as a memento of his own brilliant achievements; and they will carry out in an intelligent manner the suggestions His Excellenev now offers to the vital importance of saving troop horses as much as possible. intelligent manner the suggestions His Excellency now offers to them. They will reap their own reward in the increased efficiency of their regiments and batteries, and in the more satisfactory way their horses will be enabled to undergo the fatigues and trials of a lengthened campaign."

In view of the expected visit to the Exhibition of thousands of working people from all parts of the country during August and September, the Prince of Wales, as Executive President, has established an emigration inquiry office, which was opened this week. Intending emigrants can here obtain useful information and advice for their guidance. This room is situated in the south promenade. A broadshect has been prepared which will be distributed in thousands among the working classes. It contains a very complete description of the Exhibition and a statement of its general objects. It gives a bird's eye view of the Exhibition building, a key to the Inner Circle line and its connections, and a portrait of the Prince of Wales. The Royal Commission has completed advantageous arrangements with the whole of the railway companies of the United Kingdom, whereby parties of twenty-five and upwards can, from August 9 next, obtain, at greatly reduced rates, through tickets from their starting point to the entrance of the Exhibition. The number of visitors to the Exhibition for the week ending June 26 was 171,899; total since the opening, 1,298,101.

MR. J. R. ROYLE, upon whom Her Majesty the Queen has just conferred the Order of the Indian Empire, is a son of the late Dr. I. Forbes Royle, the well-known Indian botanist. Mr. Royle was educated at King's College School, London, and at the Royal Indian Military College, Addiscombe; he entered the Indian Army (Bengal Infantry) in 1861, and was subsequently transferred to Her Majesty's 107th Regiment, and retired from the service on a pension owing to ill-health. He has held different appointments in the India Museum and in connection with the Indian Department of International Exhibitions, such as:—1873, Vienna Exhibition, Secretary to the Indian Commission; 1883, Amsterdam Exhibition, Executive Commissioner for the Government of India; 1886, Colonial and Indian Exhibition, Assistant Secretary to the Royal Commission and Official Agent to the Government of India. Mr. Royle was appointed to the Statistics and Commerce Department of the India Office in 1879.

NATIVE PRESS.

INDIAN BOYCOTTERS.—The Jame - Jamshed, in discussing the question of bi-metallism, says that the Natives of this country should unanimously resolve not to purchase English or foreign articles so long as the same could be procured in the country. Such articles may sometimes prove costly, but it must be remembered that the money instead of being drained into a foreign country will remain in and add to the prosperity of our country. The Bengalee Baboos are said to have formed an association to carry out such a resolution, and the Jame hopes that the inhabitants of this Presidency will follow in their foot-

NATIVE EDITORS.—The Kaisar-i-Hind regrets that the editors of the Native newspaders in Madras, Bengal and North-Western Provinces should overstep the bounds of moderation, and indulge in all sorts of exaggerations against the British Raj. Such class of writers, the paper says, do more harm than good to those whose interest they are bound to serve. All wise and prudent Natives discard such immoderate writings.

BIRTHDAY HONOURS.—The Gujrat Mitra congratulates Mr. T. C. Hope, who was for a long time collector of Sarat, on his being made a K.C.S.I. The paper says that the inhabitants of Surat are so glad for the honour done by Government to their late collector that their hearts may be said to overflow with joy and rapture. The inhabitants of India, on the other hand, are sorry to see Mr. Pritchard being favoured with a C.S.I., whose very name is sufficient to frighten one out of his wits.

GOVERNORSHIP OF MADRAS.—The Bombay Samachar says that GOVERNORSHIP OF MADRAS.—The Bomody Samachar says that an English daily suggests the advisability of appointing a strong man like Sir Richard Temple or Sir T. Hope as Governor of Madras on the retirement of Mr. Grant Duff, who has proved a big failure. The paper says that the Native public will never like the idea of a Civil Servant of India being appointed to such a high post. A new arrival from England will answer the purpose much better than the post being offered to men of local prejudices. It might be said that Mr. Grant Duff was a man sent out from England but he has proved an exception to the rule. England, but he has proved an exception to the rule.

REWARDS of £100 for proficiency in Arabic, Russian and Turkish will be granted to a limited number of officers, but no second reward will be granted to the same officer.

THE Pioneer says :- "The storm that has been brewing over the Jummu Court has broken, we are informed, and with considerable violence. On the 31st ultimo the two junior Princes, Umur Singh and Ram Singh, who have been associated with the Maharajah in the administration since the death of Ranbhir Singh, announced in public durbar their determination to resign and to quit the Maharajah's territories at once. The dismissal of the old officials of the State and their replacement by newa process which has been going on very rapidly of late—is chiefly to account for the friction which has brought about this rupture.

COLONEL W. F. B. LAURIE has, under the new rules for writers, been retired from the India Office, after nearly fifteen years' service, or forty-four years in India and England. The following is a list of his most important works and services. Works. -1. "Orissa and the Temple of Jagannath," London, 1850 (chiefly from articles in the Calcutta Review on British connection with from articles in the Calcutta Review on British connection with the Temple of Jagannath, &c.; documents furni-hed by order of Lord Dalhousie), patronised by the Court of Directors. 2. Various contributions to the Calcutta Review, 1845 to 1848. 3. "Rangoon: a Narrative of the Second Burmese War, 1852-53." 4. "Pegu: a Narrative to End of War, 1853." 5. "Sketches of some Distinguished Anglo-Indians, London, 1875." 6. "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," London, 1880. 7. "Ashé Pyée, the Eastern or Foremost Country, 1882." 8. "Burma and Tonquin, 1884-85." He wrote also on the French in India 1845-46, and again (in a published Letter to his Grace the Duke of Argyll) in 1872 on the French Possessions in India. War services: Lieut-Colonel (Coloncl) W. F. B. Laurie served with the Ungool Field Force, and was at the taking of the stockade of Hurrithputtaghur on the 23rd of January, 1848; was employed with the second expedition to Burma, and served at the naval operations against Rangoon and Dalla; present during the naval operations against Rangoon and Dalla; present during the skirmishing subsequent to the capture of the White House Scockade on the 12th, and at the attack on, and capture of the Stockade on the 12th, and at the attack on, and capture of the Great Shoé Dagoung Pagoda, Rangoon, 14th April, 1852, under Major-General Godwin, C.B.; marched with the Martaban land column in January and February, 1853, under Brigadier-General Sir W. Steele, K.C.B.; and present at the affairs of Kyouk-yédoung on the 14th, and Gongoh on the 18th January (Tonghoo reached for the prst time by a British force on the 22nd February, 1852), and with a full force to Manukhla on the force of the 1853); and with a field force to Myoukhla, on the frontier of the Pegu Province, in February, 1854, in command of a detachment of artillery; medal for Pegu. Staff appointments: 1. Commissary of Ordinance, 1857-58-59.

2. Inspector of Schools, British Burma, 1865-66. 3. Superintendent of Army Schools, Madras (India), 1867-68.

THE NEWS FROM BURMA.

THE latest news from Burma will not be pleasant reading. to Englishmen at home. With all our pretended hatred of war we are the most pugnacious nation in the world, and the one which can least bear tidings of defeat with equanimity. Failures in diplomacy we are accustomed to. and we are seldom surprised, however much annoyed, when our politicals at home or abroad blunder or befool us as a nation. But we do not like to hear of reverses or checks to our fighting men-for we still cling, and very properly too, to the old idea that success and victory should always wait on the British arms. Unfortunately the latest tidings from the East are those of a discouraging nature in this respect. There has been some severe fighting in Upper Burma, attended in each instance with considerable loss of life upon our side, and in more than one case with practical, if temporary, repulse. Attacks made by British troops have not been successful, and to those who know the power of the often ridiculed word prestige in connection with our name in the East, this will be recognised as a serious matter. The annexation of Upper Burmah was, perhaps, carried out as Mr. Grant Duff boastingly alleged, with all the neat finality of an epigram, but its pacification seems to require a much more serious description. It is now plainly evident that "someone has blundered." Opinions are, of course, divided upon this point. The civilians blame the military, and the military blame the civilians. But the fact which is patent is that the country which we have so easily annexed continues to be in a state of disorder, as bad as in the days of Theebaw, and confusion is becoming "worse Our past experience of Burmese wars confounded." appears to have gone for nothing, and although, so far as numbers are concerned, we have a very formidable force in the field, the insurgents-dacoits or patriots, according to contending opinions-appear to be holding their own with remarkable tenacity. Whether the Madras Sepoys are unfitted for the work upon which they are engaged in putting down this insurrection, as their Bengal and Bombay detractors say they are, it appears certain that there is a want of European officers, which-better late than never—is now being supplied. The Burmese have always fought well from stockades, and Sepoys are not adepts at carrying stockades until the enemy has been driven out of them by shell or rocket fire. But it is difficult to understand, considering the force we have in the country, why now there should be any stockade-forming or serious fighting at all. Our former Burmese wars cost England and India a great deal in money and valuable lives; the present business has been made a theme of congratulatory official reports and afterdinner oratory. "The world is getting old," said Mr. Grant Duff, at the Birthday Banquet which he gave at Octacsmund on the 24th of May, "and those of us who read history have got a little tired of the battles of the warrior 'with confused noise and garments rolled in blocd.' On my taste, at least, that kind of thing has rather palled, but there is a military success of a far higher order where everything has been carefully planned in silence, and where success comes to the outer world with We have had the the suddenness of a lightning flash. great success of our arms in Burma."

INDIAN AND COLONIAL RECEPTION AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

HOUSE.
The splendid randeur of the mightiest Empire the world has ever seen, and the glorious majesty of the most colossal kingdom which ever unfurled the flag of monarchy beneath the canopy of Heaven, find worthy expression in the superb and princely hospitality of England's capital. Doctrinaries may sneer, and zealcus reformers may clamour, but as long as human nature is human nature the festivities of the Mansion House, or the gaieties of Guildhall, are a right good-fashioned English way by which the citizens of London express appreciation and record approba-tion. It was most right and proper then, in these circumstances, that a reception should be given to such persons of distinction as happen to be on a visit to our shores in connection with the Indo Colonial Exhibition. When, too, we remember that statesmen but a few brief summers ago were raising the cry of "Perish India, and let the Colonies take care of themselves!" when we call to mind that the selfish doctrine of "England for the English!" not long since bade fair to imperil a State and ruin an Empire which the sum never sets it is a happy angure that the not long since bade fair to imperil a State and ruin an Empire upon which the sun never sets, it is a happy augury that the nobler instincts of the Anglo-Saxon race are once again in the ascendant, and the mother country is becoming alive to the fact that she has duties and responsibilities towards these outlying possessions, of which the destinies are inseparably linked with the fate of Britain's sway. Yes, in spite of eccentricity in high places, Imperial Federation is the order of the day. The dream of the orthwise times who seminates of the archiverent in new the semination of the archiverent is new the semination of the archiverent in the semination of the archiverent is new the semination of the statement and the semination of the semination of the statement and the semination of the sem of the enthusiast is now the aspiration of the statesman, and the nation looks forward with bright anticipations to the time when England and all her sons, wherever and whoever they may be, shall be knit together with bands of friendship and sympathy as snail be knit together with bands of friendship and sympathy as one nation, one people, and one race. And who can say how far the splendid reception at the Guildball may not have cast seed which in due time will bring forth good fruit? Results are not always dependent upon mighty actions or great deeds, and is it not possible that the memories of the hour may linger in many a bosom when the numerous representatives of England's distant lands are scattered to their homes, and thousand of miles and leagues of distance separate those who, on this festive occasion, joined hand in hand, and linked heart to heart. Destiny is not always perceptible to the eye, fate is not always apparent to the

The reception on Friday evening was in every way worthy of the cecasion and of the distinguished company assembled to do honour to India and the Colonies. On entering the building the passage was most tastefully decorated with flowers, while a back-ground of foliage plants, selected mostly, if not entirely, from the various descriptions indigenous to the Antipodes, lent to the Hall a charm which must have been seen to be appreciated. Numerous corridors, some rich in carved oak, but all resplendent with colour and radiant with beauty, converged to the library, where a select body of leading personages in the city—headed, of course, by the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs—received the guests or course, by the hord Mayor and Sheriffs—received the guests and extended the hand of fellowship to the string of visitors who in never-ending sequence flocked to make their "salaams" to their generous hosts. This ceremony finished, the rest of the evening we selevoted to dancing in the Grand Hall—grand in spite of modern renovations which have, in the opinion of some competent judges, sadly marred the venerable effects which time had become the selection of the second particular that the second parti brought about ere the hand of the reformer lent to the walls the "modernism" and neatness of the new Half. Still, in spite of chops and changes," there is much which is beautiful; the bog oak ceiling, the panel at the end of the room, composed of the same wood though lighter in colour and loss combres in office same wood though lighter in colour and less sombre in effect, the noble statues of Pitt, Nelson and Wellington, are one and all charming; and if to the inherent attractiveness of the room be added the charm of lovely dresses and the still more lovely sirens who were them, the picturesqueness of the various uniforms, military, civil, diplomatic and foreign, with "decorations" of every sort, description and size, Eastern costumes with their rich colourings and picturesque quaintness, the fascination of exquisite music and vigorous dancing, the scene, it may well be imagined, was of a nature not likely to be soon forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to be present.

If persons were on the look-out for notabilities there was, oo, no lack of material. In one corner might be seen the Hero of Abyssinia, a fitting representative of the band of warriors who during the terrible struggle of 1857, when India's Empire tottered in the balance, lent to their country the prowess of mighty deeds and heroic actions—a peer, who as Lord Napier of Magdala, field-marshal's baton in hand, has crowned a career Magdala, field-marshal's baton in hand, has crowned a career of glory which first gave token of greatness when Major Napier battered the gates of Delhi, and lent his aid in capturing the capital of the Mogul dynasty. Elsewhere might be noticed Sir Samuel Browne, whose armless coat and starred breast betokened the gallantry of a veteran and the courage of a soldier. Sir Richard Pollock's familiar face recalled the time when on the North-West Frontier he was one of the knot of officers who were proud to own as a chief whom they adored the greatest of Indian heroes, Sir Henry Lawrence, of Punjab fame. Colonists, too, in the persons of Sir George Bowen, Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Saul Samuel, Sir Victor Houlton, Sir A. Galt, and many others, served of the bloodless victories of England's children on Oceana's shores—the triumph of civilisation, of industry, and of enterprise. There were present, too, a goodly array of England's proudest aristocracy, interspersed with successful administrators, distinguished many of eight and letters and letters. distinguished men of science and letters, and persons of high station and exalted position, to name whom is impossible; the catalogue would be inordinate, the list overwhelming.

Nor were creature comforts left neglected. In various crypts and ante-rooms "the feast of soul" flowed free and unrestrained. and ante-rooms "the feast of soul" flowed free and unrestrained. The struggle was not to find enough wherewith to refresh poor exhausted nature, but to get sufficiently near to the profuse array of goodly dishes and "goodlier" bottles, under which the tables literally groaned. And when all this good cheer was ended there were such delicious little rooms where chit-chat could run on so smoothly, heated brows and flushed faces could recover their normal state of blissful serenity, dresses could be touched up, hair be smoothed, damages to costume be repaired, and last, but not least, poor aching limbs be rested after the "crush" for pleasure. And so whirling, heating, "icing," sitting, talking, wondering, the hours flew on as if Old Father Time were anxious to get the evening over and himself retire to the land of nods, till, as it were, in the twinkling of an eye the small hours of morning as it were, in the twinkling of an eye the small hours of morning came and did obeisance. Then this merry and weary crowd filtered home, happier for as pleasant and successful an evening as ever was chronicled in the annals of the most ancient corporation in the civilized world.

There is a good story afloat of a battery of Mountain Artillery when ordered to Burma, which had been selected for its efficiency and serviceability, condemning its guns after arrival at Calcutta for embarkation. The guns were the Armstrong seven-pounder Mountain breech-loaders, and had only been about eight years in use. They were reported to be unsafe, and that the first discharge from the guns would blow the muzzle pieces away owing to the connecting screws having become worn; but the best of the story is that the Ordnance experts report them to be as good as when new. and the screws perfect new, and the screws perfect

A MEDITATION ON A MUCK-HEAP;

OR, SELF-GOVERNMENT IN INDIA.

It weltered by the roadside; laying hold of the nose with a pungent insistence of stench that arrested thought and compelled attention. Many months must have gone to the develop-ment of its proportions—to the widening of bosom and base—to the buttressing of its flanks and the consolidation of its body. The May sun smote it on the crown, and Memnon-like, it answered, not with "rivers of melodies" but with renewed and abominable savours. Obviously it was no work of mine to cart it away. Would the gentleman from Bengal in the open work stockings, the lacquered shoes, clad in snowy cotton, and stepping daintily under a pea-green parasol—would be turn his hand to it? Assuredly not. He journeyed to the safe haven of Government employment. The books under his arm attested the fact, and even now the Public Works Department waited his coming. What conceivable business had he with much the fact, and even now the Public Works Department waited his coming. What conceivable business had he with muckheaps? Would the gentleman in the indigo waist cloth, stripped to the middle, whacking the reluctant steers who bore the reversed plough on their yoke—would he, laying aside the ponderous brass and leather hookah, devote one short hour to the holy toil? How could he? He was on his way to the moist black fields behind the river, there to plough till the evening; and on the galled shoulders of his beasts rested the prosperity of himself, his wife, his wife's aunt, his uncle's cousin, his grand uncle, his widowed sister, and her son and son's wife, besides many children. What was the muck-heap to him, seeing that it did not lie on his own land? Would the sweetmeat-seller do anything? He had arranged his wares for the day, and sat lazily waving the palm fan over the sticky julabies, since flies are many and customers few. His concern was to sell, if God so pleased, as much as lay in the basket, and then to stroll through the twilight towards the liquor shop, the twangling wire stringed music there and the lady in the pink saree who saw to his creature comforts. This was the whole twangling wire stringed music there and the lady in the pink saree who saw to his creature comforts. This was the whole duty of the sweetmeat-seller. Would the Municipal member with the fair round belly, the well-tended moustaches, and the rickety-rocking buggy, descend for a moment and take notice with a view to amendment? Whose dog was the Municipal member to do sweeper's work? Were there not tens of scores of menials specially budgeted and estimated for this particular end; and, if half the sweepers in the Municipal member's ward were in the Municipal member's field hoeing the Municipal member's potatoes, had this facts anything to do with the sublime principles of the "inestimable boon" which enacts that the ignorantly unclean shall poison their betters? What had the ignorantly unclean shall poison their betters? What had the Municipal member to do with the muck-heap? Nothing, and less than nothing. If a chabutra obstructed the roadway, he would, unless the owner paid him, order its instant demoli-tion; but nobody owned a muck-heap, and without a bribe he would not stir.

Then came a pig-a lavender-hued beast with long camellike legs, and he appointed himself an Executive Committee of one, and sat upon that muck-heap. But his labours were prompted by nothing higher than a ravening appetite, which the muck-heap failed to satisfy. He went his way grunting sorrowfully, having only rooted out several new smells. To him succeeded an outcast dog, also with an appetite, and with naralyzed hind quarters. She serratched as an exercicled was the paralysed hind quarters. She scratched as energetically as the pig had rootled, and her search, save in respect to smells, was just as sterile. So she dragged herself wearily down the hot road, and the muck-heap was left alone with the midday sun

There was one other spectator, but he had lost interest in the things of this world, and but for the fact that the gurrah above him had broken and the rain had cut away the head of his grave and brought his bald pate into shameless publicity, he would not have looked upon the muck-heap at all. However, since Fate left him no choice, he peered forth, and smiled cynically with unshaded brows through the blinding heat.

"To-morrow," said the Municipal member, as he returned from his inspection of a chabutra with two rupees eight annas tucked into his waistbelt.

tucked into his waistbelt. "To-morrow," grunte "To-morrow," grunted the lavender-hued pig with the ravening appetite, as he trotted back from profitless inspection of a dozen other muck-heaps.
"To-morrow," yelped the paralysed dog from her dust bath an the shade of an old wall.

The only other spectator was silent. He had passed over into to morrow, and knew what it would bring forth.—Englishman.

THE TRADE OF BRITISH INDIA.

The accounts of the trade of British India in a complete and corrected form arrive in this country, although of late years with most creditable promptitude, yet necessarily some time after the close of the period to which they relate. Monthly accounts are, however, regularly received at the India Office, which suffice to present a general view of the features of the trade, but the figures are subject to correction. It has been thought that the publica-tion of a rough sketch of the general comparative results for the financial year 1885-6 might be acceptable. The values are, for the sake of convenience, stated in pounds, which, however, really represent sterling tens of rupees:—

"VOICE OF INDIA.

A MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

INDIA.

THERE Are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with case and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and consorvative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throught together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. JOHN FARLEY LEITH, Esq., Q.C., Chairman. | W. N. NICHOLSON, Esq., Deputy Chairman.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.

The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reductions by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "Universal" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

-Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stimulated to be paid. tract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the Yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 22nd June; from Allahabad to the 20th June; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 19th June.

THE news from Burma is again serious, and there are unmistakable signs that with the advent of the rains the dacoits have increased in audacity, and that it will take a much larger force than is at present available to pacify the country.

MAHABAJA HOLKAR died on Thursday, after having occupied the Gadi of Indore for over forty years.

THE VICEROY, on receipt of the news of Holkar's death, at once sent a telegraphic message of condolence to his Highness's family.

In a Gazette Extraordinary the Vicercy states that he feels that the Indian Empire has lost in him one of the most capable and experienced of Native Chiefs.

THE MAHARAJA SCINDIA died on Sunday evening at

THE KHAN OF ZEYDAH, in the Peshawur district, who rendered good service to the British during the late Afghan War, is dead.

THE Ameer of Afghanistan is still very ill.

HE has expressed the wish that in the event of his death his son Sarwar Khan shall succeed him.

THE Crown Prince of Mysore is ill.

Mr. T. De Burch Miller, the Joint Manager of the Burdwan Raj, is dead.

HE was one of the chief prosecutors in the pending Statesman's libel case.

THE paper now states that its charges against him were unfounded.

THE cost of the Tibet Mission will be charged to the Political Department, the Military Department ultimately bearing all expenses ordinarily provided for in the Military Budget.

It is understood that the Indian Medal given in 1354 for the Burma Campaign of 1853 will be issued to the troops who have operated in British Burma.

THE report of the Medical Women for India Fund shows that very satisfactory work has been done during the past

THE REV. F. L. SHARPIN has been installed as Arch-deacon of Bombay.

Mr. A. E. Gough, of the Bengal Educational Department, has been appointed Principal of the Muir College, Allakabad.

THE Siamese portion of the Rapeng-Moulmein telegraph line is expected to be finished before the end of this

MR. FURNIVAL, C.E., has been permitted to retire from Government service in order to take the managership of the Nizam's railways.

THE Secretary of State has telegraphed to the Government of India regarding Government scholarships at home, that only free passages to England have been sanctioned, and not £100 passage-money.

THE great heat of the last few days in the plains has climbed even to the Himalayas. In Simla the highest temperature registered during six years was recorded on Sanday last—viz., 89.3 degrees. The absolutely highest ever recorded was in May, 1879, when the thermometer showed 94.4 in the shade.

A notorious dacoit, named Mardan Singh, who has taken a most conspicuous part in the perpetration of various violent crimes in British and Gwalior territories, has at last been apprehended by the Gwalior Durbar troops after a sharp encounter. Sir Lepel Griffin, on hearing of the capture, sent a congratulatory telegram to Sir Ganpat Rao for the zeal and energy he has exercised in the prevention and detection of crime.

Owing to financial pressure, the Sind-Pishin Railway will stop at Shah Ahmed, instead of being carried as far as Chaman on the Kandahar side of the Khojah.

THE SIND-SAGAR strategical frontier railway is making rapid progress, ninety miles having been laid from Shere Shah, opposite Mooltan, on an alignment parallel with the left bank of the Indus. The rails have been laid at three miles a day, the ground being very easy.

It is intended to lay a line of telegraph at once from Hurnai to Sungawi, a village on one of the southern passes leading into the Bori Valley, to facilitate rapid communication with the troops to the north of the Hurnai Railway line.

THE main portion of the field work on the Kalka-Simla Railway, namely, preliminary surveys, pegging out centre line, and longitudinal section, will be completed by the end of the current month.

Notes of the Week.

Truth hears that it is in contemplation to make Prince Henry of Battenberg an honorary colonel of one of the Indian cavalry regiments "as a way of solving the difficulty of his having only a Volunteer uniform to appear in at State functions," and in view of the "very proper" opposition which it is hinted at that the Household Cavalry would make to his being gazetted to that body. Why "very proper" opposition? The husband of a daughter of the Queen of England ought not to be looked upon as a person likely to lower the "tone" of the officers of even the Household Cavalry, and the idea of saving their aristocratic sensitiveness by gazetting him to an Indian regiment is one born of snobbism. The Prince has shown his appreciation of the honour done to him by the Volunteer battalion which has chosen him as its honorary colonel by wearing the uniform on public occasions, and there is no grounds for presuming that he wishes to exchange it for a more gaudy one. And he no doubt has also the sense to know that in England, at least, the finest feathers do not always adorn the finest birds.

Those well-meaning reverend gentlemen who, on Exeter Hall and other platforms, speak of the abolition of the Zenana as the only means of speedily giving to India the full blessings of the civilisation and Christianity of England would do well to look at the list of divorce suits and cases of conjugal differences published during the past week, and ask themselves whether "the poor Indian of the untutored mind" is so foolish after all in keeping his ladies in a little seclusion. The zealous missionary who some time ago told an English audience that "forty millions of Native women in India are prisoners for life through the operation of an Eastern usage which is only a "gilded slavery" ought to have explained whether the "prisoners" would care for the freedom he would give them. They might, perhaps, be of opinion that they are safer where they are—however constrained. The sailor in Dibdin's ballad congratulates himself and shipmates on being at sea during a tempest instead of on shore. It is a matter of idiosyncracies.

The Central Provinces have a troublesome gentleman of lawless proclivities to deal with in one Tantia Bhil, who is harassing the police and harrying his neighbours. He outs off the ears of their buffaloes, he has assisted at many burglaries, he has frequently robbed Her Majesty's mail, he has set all Deputy Commissioners at defiance, and has saddled the Central Provinces with the burden of a special dacoity department all for his own behoof. But so far as official knowledge goes, he has never murdered anybody—at least with his own hands. As he declines to be caught, it has been suggested that he should be amnestied and coaxed into respectability by the present of a village or two, and one Indian journalist recommends that Government should open negotiations with the offer of a C.I.E. It might simplify matters and save the police of his district worry (which they dislike) if he could be induced to come to England, and, as a "distinguished" Indian visitor, submit to be personally conducted by the Reception Committee of the Exhibition. The C.I.E. or an "additional" C.M.G. might then follow as a recognition of merit.

DR. W. HUNTER'S lecture on "Aurangzeb," which he found time in the midst of his laborious duties at Simla to give before a brilliant and appreciative audience, has been highly spoken of throughout the Indian Press. The peroration was eloquent and impressive, and the warning lines which he quoted at the end showed that the learned Doctor was fully conscious of the value of that "modest humility" which Schiller says is "a hidden thing, and shrinks from its own power":—

And ye, that read these Ruines Tragicall, Learne by their losse, to love the low degree; And, if that fortune chaunce you up to call To Honour's seat, forget not what you be; For he, who of himselfe is most secure, Shall find his state most fickle and unsure.

As praise from Sir Hubert Spencer was said to be "praise indeed," such advice tendered on Olympus to the gods by one of themselves, and that one Dr. W. W. Hunter, must have had a powerful effect, and have been listened to, as the reporters say, with "rapt attention."

But why this melancholy reminder of the fickleness of fortune? Have possible "coming events" (connected, perhaps, with the deliberations of the Finance Committee now sitting at SimIa) been casting their shadows over the pleasant paths that lead to those heights where the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock the scoffers in the plains who blaspheme that the gods or the mountain are playing the fools with the time? Can it be that the "annual Exodus" may be forbidden, or honourable members' salaries reduced to meet the ever-growing deficits of India? When Shelley wrote "in dejection near Naples," he gave substantial reasons for his despondency. He said that he had neither "hop3 nor health, nor fame nor power," but all these things have been given to the brilliant lecturer and honourable member of Council who insults the sweet sunshine of Olympus "with this untimely moan." Pethaps, however, it is not untimely. Dr. Hunter is possibly more far-seeing than others, hand inscia ac non incauta futuri. And he knows how to meet changes of circumstances.

ANGLO-INDIAN inventors have hitherto received little encouragement at the hands of either the Government of India or the Government at home, but one of those inventors has by sheer force of ability and perseverance won his way to well-deserved public notice. Mr. Richard Morris, who, after many years of hard work in India, succeeded at length in getting the authorities there to adopt his simple and economical method for refilling cartridge cases, and whose aiming drill apparatus and tubes have been accepted by the War Office and Admiralty as the best means of instructing military and naval recruits in elementary musketry practice, has scored another success in his "Safety-Shooting Sheds," which are now to be seen in full working order at Wimbledon. By this invention open ranges are made perfectly safe, and no accidents can occur from careless firing, from ricochets, or from any other cause. The Standard says of this invention:—

No doubt the system will be very largely used in time to come over various parts of the country, and will avoid such costly waste as the nation has been put to by the efforts of the Royal Engineers to show how "not to do it" at the Wormwood Scrubbs Range, Had Mr. Morris's plan been called in at first at that place some thousands of pounds in money and a vast amount of annoyance and worry might have been saved, while months instead of years might have represented the time for making them secure.

The Punjab Government has decided to bridge the Chukki and other rivers that are crossed by the Kangra Valley cart-road. This decision, too long delayed, will be a great boon to the districts affected, as well as to all visitors to Kangra, Kulu, and regions beyond; and the improvement of the road for traffic should bring grist to the mill of the Amritsar-Pathankot Railway. The work is to be taken in hand at once, and Mr. Wallis, executive engineer, is now at Pathankot engaged in preparing the necessary surveys and designs. Amongst other results of the work, it will enable a tonga service to run between Pathankot and Dharmsala, adding considerably to the eligibility of that small hill station.

THE Canny Scot has become proverbial for ubiquity; and some people playfully assert that when the North Pole is discovered an enterprising representative of North Britain will be found to have already settled down there. This reputation for getting in out-of-way places seems to be fully deserved, and the latest account concerning a wandering Scotsman possesses a great deal of the romantic element. According to a Bhamo correspondent, the band of one of the regiments stationed there was discoursing sweet strains to the admiration of a crowd of Natives, and affording a rendezvous for the officers to indulge in social amenities, when an individual clad in Chinese attire, and mounted on a tired and travelled stained steed, made his appearance. His arrival caused no little curiosity, while he, in turn, was somewhat astonished to find himself in the centre of a group of Englishmen of whose occupation of the country he had only heard dim and hazy accounts; and it was not until he had an affirmative reply to the question, "Are you Englishmen?" that he felt assured that he was the victim of a disordered imagination. It was then ascertained that he was a missionary who had just made an adventurous journey from China. Possibly he may have gone over a portion of the ground that will be used in opening up a trade route between Burma and China; but, in any case, he will doubtless be able to give information which will be of great service in establishing commercial relations between the two countries, and the trader will once more be indebted to the missionary as a pioneer.

countries, and the trader will once more be indebted to the missionary as a pioneer.

"A LITTLE LEARNING IS, &C."—He is a rash man who tampers lightly with the patient East. The amiable Messrs. Blunt, Keay, Slagg, and others have spoken despitefully of her; and their ignorance has fallen heavily upon their own heads. This time it is the Pall Mall Gazette which jauntily writes of India, with the capital I.—as it would write jauntily of anything on the earth or in the gutters thereof. The Pall Mall interviewed Mr. Charles Duval—the gentleman who went with a show through South Africa, and thereafter toured round the world. Whether Mr. Duval, disgusted with the attention, set himself deliberately to hoax the intelligent interviewer, or whether the latter evolved the whole interview out of the wealth of his wonderful brain, will never be known. Certain it is, however, that between the two of them they contrived to hatch out many curious statements which will, by the untravelled Englishman, be accepted in all good faith. To begin with, Mr. Duval was escorted into the presence of the Nizam of Hyderabad, between rows of "fierce-looking gentlemen whose bosoms bristled with blood-stained weapons." Again, a Nawab of Hyderabad gave a reception to the showman, and provided a "band of lovely Amazons in khaki uniforms." From Bombay Mr. Duval went on to Culcutta "which was not a good pitch, from a theatrical point of view, as the theatre-going people live on Malabar Hill, and dinner is not over till half-past nine, after which people are too lazy to drive in." Now, if an Englishman in India, half crazed with the summer heat, and forgetful by reason of his long exile, were to write that it was impossible to sleep of nights at Esling because of the incessant thunder of the traffic in Cheapside, his sanity might fairly be questioned. What can we say then, of a man who, beneath a cooler sky, well fed, unvexed by mosquitoes, surrounded by his friends and kin, sits down deliberately in the abandon of his insular pride to tangle conf

CALCUTTA, JULY 11.

The preliminary ceremony of the installation of his Highness Sivaji Rao, better known as Bala Sahib, the elder son of the late Maharajah Holkar, as Maharajah of Indore, took place on the 3rd inst. amid great rejoicings. At noon the Prince took his seat on the throne under a Royal salute, and addressed the assemblage

"It has pleased Almighty God to call me to the throne of Indore. I will try my utmost to discharge faithfully this sacred trust. I hope that my father's old servants will continue to support the Administration. My first thoughts will be to promote the welfare and happiness of my people. I desire to see my younger brother, now seated beside me, treated and respected as my equal. My first act of charity is to establish on a grand scale a house for the poor and destitute in this city. My a grand scale a house for the poor and destiture in this city. My second act is to abolish the Byaj Manoti tax from to-day.

The last announcement was received with great acclamation, the Byaj Manoti being a most unpopular impost. Sir Lepel Griffin, the Governor-General's Agent, was expected to arrive in Indore yesterday with the Viceroy's Kharita, or letter of investment, and it is stated that he will perform the formal ceremony of investitive to morror.

Before leaving Gwalior, Sir L. Griffin received numerous private visits from the leading nobles and officials, and made particular inquiries of each regarding the existing Administration. The invariable answer was that the management of the State by Sir Gunput Rao should not be disturbed. State by Sir Gunput Rao should not be disturbed. The Maharanees personally requested Sir L. Griffin not to disregard the last wishes of their husband, to which the Agent replied with the required assurance. Sir L. Griffin and Sir Gunput Rao together inspected the offices, gaols, schools, &c., and found everything in admirable order. Sir Gunput Rao appears to have shown great care in the selection of officials, and there is every reason to believe that the administration could not be intrusted to better hands during the minority of the young Maharajah.

The despatch of the Indian Government to the Secretary of State on the subject of the silver question dated February 2.

The despatch of the Indian Government to the Secretary of State on the subject of the silver question, dated February 2, and the reply of the Lords of the Treasury, dated May 31, have been published here, and have attracted much attention. The danguage and suggestions of the former document afford a further answer to the critics who charge the Indian Government with doing nothing, and show how fully it is conscious of the dangers of the situation. The present state of affairs is described by it as an intolerable financial position, and the despatch goes on:—

"It is affected from day to day by the continuous fall in the rate of exchange. Forecasts of probable expenditure are no sooner completed than they prove worthless; and the best considered arrangements may be upset at any hour by a telegram regarding the probable action of political parties in a distant country, with which India has but slight political or commercial connection. The fall in the exchange within the last year has involved a loss of Rs. 2,000,000, and the Government has no guarantee that this will not be more than doubled. ment has no guarantee that this will not be more than doubled within a few months.'

The despatch then points out that this state of affairs would be an evil of the greatest magnitude in any country, but that in a country like India it is pregnant with danger. The Home Government is strongly urged to take up the matter seriously, and try and arrive at an understanding with foreign countries. A hope is expected that even should there appear no prospect of immediate success the question may still be raised, with a view to the formation of a body of public opinion sufficient to enforce a final settlement.

The greater portion of the reply of the Treasury is devoted to a review of the results of the International Conference of 1878 and to the opinions expressed since then by various authorities. Their lordships say that they are anxious to consult the interests of India, but they must first be satisfied what those interests really are. Although the fall in the value of silver has caused a loss of revenue to the Indian Government and much inconscripted to persons who have to remit money from India to venience to persons who have to remit money from India to England, yet they say many experts believe that great counter-vailing advantages have accrued to the trade and people of India. It is obvious, they add, that the Ministry can take no measures for the summoning of a new monetary conference until they have previously determined what policy they should initiate or assent to; and they conclude by saying that the whole subject is now under the consideration of the Royal Commission on the Depression of Trade.
The Calcutta branch of the Indian Silver Association is circulating for signature a petition to the Vicercy calling attention to various evils resulting from the fall of silver, and praying his lordship to move the Secretary of State to take measures for

The Sheriff of Calcutta, in compliance with a requisition signed by a large number of leading European and Native citizens, has called a public meeting for next Wednesday, for the purpose of discussing the question of the annual removal of the various administrations to the hills. The subject is warmly taken up by the local Press, which displays unanimity in condemning the existing practice—a view shared by the majority of the newspapers in other parts of India. The opinion generally expressed is that while there is no objection to the Viceroy and his immediate surroundings spending the hot months in a cooler climate, the removal of the entire machinery of Government from the centres of population and trade is detrimental to the efficiency of the administration as well as indefensible on the ground of economy administration, as well as indefensible on the ground of economy. A striking illustration of the unsuitability of Simla as a capital is supplied by the fact that for two or three days last week postal communication with that station was interrupted, and that it is likely to be seriously delayed for at least a week longer, heavy floods having breached the North-Western railway between Suharunpore and Umballa, and rendered the line impassable for a distance of twelve miles. The last homeward mail able for a distance of twelve miles. The last nomeward mail steamer was detained at Bombay for a day to enable it to take the Punjab mails. Temporary arrangements have now been made to pass passengers and letters over the break, but there is still a delay of several hours in the journey, and it is not definitely stated when the line will be open for trains.

Cachar is also threatened with damage from floods. A telegram received on Thursday stated that the rivers had nearly attained the height which they reached in 1883, when much injury was done to the district. The absence of further news during the last two days leads to a hope that the floods have subsided without doing harm.

The 3rd Ghoorks, the 21st Bombay Infantry, and one regiment of Madras Infantry have been ordered to Burma.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council in Simla, last Wednesday, Sir S. Bayley introduced a Bill providing for a more speedy trial of prisoners in Lower Burma. He said that owing to the recent disturbances the gaols were overcrowded. Fifteen hundred persons had already been arrested, and the local judicial officers were overtasked in dealing with these cases under the ordinary law. The Bill would allow the Local Government to appoint specially selected magistrates as sessions judges, with power to try cases without previous committal, subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the Judicial Commissioner. The Bill would extend only to the disturbed tracts, and have force only till the end of the current financial year.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JULY 7. Desultory fighting is reported from Upper Burma, which continues very disturbed. The Alougpra Prince, with a considerable force, has taken up a position about forty miles north-east of Mandalay, and sends small detachments to harass our outposts near Mandalay. On the 27th ult. an attack was made on Lanian, and the set of Mandalay has bedy to shout near mandalay. On the 27th ult. an attack was made on Lanian, a post about ten miles north-east of Mandalay, by a body of about forty Shans, who had no firearms, and were armed only with dahs. The Shans rushed past the sentry, cutting him and others down, and completely surprised the sepoys, who occupied the post. Captain T. E. Reston, of the 12th Madras Infantry, commanding at Lanian, who lived some distance from where the sepoys were posted, rushed, sword in hand to meet the Shans. He was immediately cut down receiving five degrees would. immediately cut down, receiving five dangerous wounds. A jemadar, a sepoy, and two followers were killed, and three sepoys and two followers wounded before the Shans were driven sepoys and two followers wounded before the Shans were driven out. Lieutenant Ayers and a small force of Bombay Infantry, while surveying near Mingoon Pagoda, about four miles north of Mandalay, were attacked by insurgents. Lieutenant Ayers and his subadhar were wounded. The result of the recent engagement near Yewoon, in the Kyouksai district, with the forces of the Myentzein Prince, was not decisive. When the troops returned to Yewoon the insurgents occupied their previous position and sent defiant messages to Colonel Pemberton, commanding at Yewoon. Colonel Pemberton signalled to Mandalay for reinforcements, and Colonel Knox and some troops of the for reinforcements, and Colonel Knox and some troops of the Somersetshire Regiment, with two guns, some Madras cavalry, and mounted infantry, were sent to his assistance. General White has been ill at Mandalay since his return from the expedition up to Myetuge and Panlang. On the rivers southward of Mandalay the troops are suffering severely from operating in the jungle during the rainy season. At Bhamo 30 per cent. of the force were in hospital. Much sickness also prevails at Yemethen, in the Toungoo district. Mr. Bernard still continues ill at Mandalay, but is improving. Three small columns have been sent against Boh Shwe. One of these columns, despatched from Thayetmyo, consists of 200 Europeans and three guns. This column suffered greatly from the heat, and some of the men succumbed to heat apoplexy during the first six miles they marched. Incendiary fires continued in the outskirts of Mandalay, but the rainy season prevents their attaining serious dimensions. In the Chindwin District, Captain Raikes, Deputy Commissioner, with a very small staff, is doing very good work indeed. He has 14,000 square miles of territory to supervise. The condition of Lower Burma is still unsatisfactory. Dacoits recently burnt two villages near Singway, in the Prome District. The blazing villages could be seen from the railway. Steps have at length been taken to provide an adequate civil staff for Upper Burma. Four commissioners, all experienced officers. at length been taken to provide an adequate civil staff for Upper Burms. Four commissioners, all experienced officers, will be appointed to the following districts:—Mandalay, Bhamo, Mingyan, and Chindwin. Mr. Burgess, Commissioner of Aracan, and one of the ablest civil officers in Burma, has been appointed Commissioner for Mandalay. This is an excellent selection, and the best results may be anticipated. The very serious condition into which Upper Burma has drifted is undoubtedly largely due to the disgraceful state of affairs which prevailed in Mandalay. The discontent in Mandalay affected the whole province. The Burmese had little reason to support British rule when they saw the condition of the inhabitants of Mandalay. At Henzada sixty two dacoits surrendered to Captain Butler, Deputy Commissioner. They appear the only considerable body who have availed themselves of the amnesty offered by the Viceroy.

RANGOON, JULY 10.

No intelligence has yet reached Rangoon from the troops sent against Bosweh.

Another insurgent leader, Bohcho, has a strong body of men between Myingyan and Pagan, and is harrying the country. He has looted and burnt near Pagan several villages which had submitted to us.

mitted to us.

On the Upper Chindwin, Hlao, who heads the insurgents in that district, has a considerable following. Captain Raikes holds a strong stockaded position at Kendat, and our force at Tummoo, higher up the Chindwin, is also safe.

The country about Mandalay is very disturbed. The Flotilla steamer, Kadoe, while descending the Myiltuge, was fired on by the insurgents, and one of the Sepoy guard was wounded. The Myentzein Prince holds the country to the south-east of Mandalay, and his forces are said to be increasing. Until the Myentzein Prince is captured, or driven from the field, there is no prospect of a pacification of Upper Burma. All the other insurgent leaders profess to be fighting in his interests. Much surprise is felt that more vigorous measures have not been taken against the Myentzein Prince. Myentzein Prince.

In Lower Burma the hills between Tounghoo and Prome are occupied by large gangs of dacoits. Karen levies will be sent against them, both from Tounghoo and Prome. Only Karens can travel in the hills this season.

Three hundred invalids from Upper Burma arrived in Rangoon yesterday, and eighty more are on board of the steamer which is to arrive to-morrow.

As soon as the rains are over two additional regiments of cavalry will be sent from India to Burma. With these and the three additional regiments of infantry expected, the troops in Upper Burma and the armed police will reach a total of 30,000 men. It is not believed that the insurgents actually in arms in the upper province number 20,000. General White, although enjoying the local and temporary rank of major-general is the the upper province number 20,000. General White, although enjoying the local and temporary rank of major-general, is the junior colonel in Upper Burma. He has three brigadiers under him, and commands the largest force that has ever been entrusted to an officer of his rank. Owing to the large dimensions which the Burma force has now reached, it is believed that some general who has already commanded in the field will be appointed to the chief command. The names of Sir Evelyn Wood and of General Brackenbury have been favourably received.

AFGHANISTAN.

The following items of Afghanistan news were received last The following items of Afghanistan news were received last week:—The Ameer was again suffering from gout. The accounts of the spring harvests in the Khyber-Bozdar Valley and Bara were unfavourable. Wheat is now selling in Cabul at one rupee for six pounds. The Governor of Herat has established a system of passports for persons passing through that province. Each passport is printed, and a fee of 2½ annas is charged.

Colonel Lockhart is returning to India from Zebah in Badakshan, leaving Colonel Woodthorpe in charge of his party.

BELOOCHISTAN.

The Civil and Military Gazette states that the Indian Government is considering the advisability of incurring a further outlay on the petroleum works near Sibi. The borings were commenced about two years ago, and oil has been frequently struck at a depth of about 500 feet, but the supply seldom lasts more than a few weeks. The question is now whether a boring should be continued to the depth of 1,000 feet in the hope of obtaining a steady flow

THE POLICE IN UPPER BURMA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

But numerically insufficient as is the police, its more serious defect is the want of European officers. The tendency of all Natives is to abuse authority, and this can only be checked by constant and efficient supervision. Already we hear Natives is to abuse authority, and this can only be checked by constant and efficient supervision. Already we hear grave complaints of the newly raised Punjabi police; and no wonder, for we are told that these men, new to the country and unacquainted with the language, have been sent up in batches one hundred and more in steamers from Rangoon unaccompanied by a European officer. Constant squabbles have been the consequence. If we desire to make our new subjects contented, and want Upper Burma to pay its way as soon as Lower Burma did, we should largely increase the number of European officers under the grade of District Superintendents; so that the Native policemen may be speedily brought into a state of efficiency, and in the event of their being guilty of any oppression towards the people of the country, the latter may always have someone near at hand to whom they may go for redress.

people of the country, the latter may always have someone near at hand to whom they may go for redress.

It may be argued that men acquainted with the Burmese language are not to be obtained in sufficient numbers. To this we would reply that, while fully admitting the great advantage of a knowledge of Burmese, still it is not everything. How many of the men appointed to perform civil duties after the annexation of Pegu could speak Burmese? In so far as having at his disposal English officers who can speak Burmese, Sir Charles Bernard is infinitely better off than was Sir Arthur Phayre. It must not be forgotten, too, that there are now in Burma many fairly well educated young men, the sons of Englishmen by Burman mothers, who are well adapted for employment as Inspectors of Police. educated young men, the sons of Englishmen by Burman mothers, who are well adapted for employment as Inspectors of Police. Again, too, it should be remembered that, by the annexation of Upper Burma, we have been brought into contact with tribes speaking languages with which none of the officers of the Burma Commission are acquainted. Although Mr. Moylan has signally failed to substantiate the charges he brought against Head Constable Moung Myat, relative to the death of Nga Hmay, that gentleman is not alone in believing that disgraceful oppression is practised on our new subjects by the Burmese policemen in our service. Without proper supervision our Punjabi and Hisdustani policemen will be equally oppressive. The remedy lies in abandoning our present system of ill-judged economy, and largely increasing the number of European officers in the police, by the appointment of young men of good education and sound constitution, who would soon learn to speak the language. By the last accounts from Mandalay we hear that the rains have commenced. It is usual for dacoity to cease during the rainy season; so if we accounts from Mandalay we hear that the fains nave commenced. It is usual for dacoity to cease during the rainy season; so if we do not hear of any dacoity during the next few months, we must not delude ourselves into imagining that dacoity has been stamped out. We should take advantage of the lull to organise a thoroughly efficient force of police, so as to set the troops free to carry out their legitimate work immediately after the conclusion of the rains.

THE INDIAN NATION. (Madras Mail)

An Indian nation is a chimera. In only one way could that consummation be achieved, and that is by the apparition of an Indian Napoleon, probably a Mussulman, who, gifted with an extraordinary military genius, and a power of command—aided, of course, by quite exceptional opportunities—should temporarily grasp in his hand the thunderbolts of every State and nationality grasp in his hand the thunderbolts of every State and nationality in the peninsula, and, turning upon the foreigners, should hurl them headlong from the land. We may leave this particular contingency out of our purview, and rather consider what might happen were a second Gladstone to be sent on earth to complete the dismemberment of the British Empire, its Colonies, and dependencies. Radical sentimentality might not be averse from encouraging the agglomeration of an Indian Confederation, preparatory to the withdrawal of the British garrison. In that case we might look for a revival of the Sikh Khalsı, the restoration of Scinde to the Ameer, the resuscitation of Rajasthan, the reorganisation of a Mussulman dominion stretching from above Delhito below Pains, the establishment of a Republic in Lower Bengal including Orissa, and the erection of a third Mahommedan including Orissa, and the erection of a third Mahommedan Power in the eastern portion of the Gangetic Delta, inhabited by over twenty millions of Mahommedan converts from Hindooism. On a second line we would expect to see the kingdom of Guzerat, Holkar redivivus, Scindia triumphant, and a new State carved Holkar redivivus, Scindia triumphant, and a new State carved out of Central India. More to the south we would come upon the Mahrattas, with Poona as their capital, and Bombay as their seaport, and the aggressive kingdom of Hyderabad overshadowing and threatening the Hindoo Raj in Mysore. The destinies of the extreme south would be, of course, entrusted to the enlightened guardianship of the ruler of Travancore. Crossing the Bay of Bengal, posterity would be confronted with the kingdom of Ava, until such time as it may suit the French Government of that day to occupy the waters of the Irrawaddy, and endow the entire peninsula from Singapore to Mandalay with the blessings of Parisian civilisation. Of Assam we have made no mention, for it may be safely assumed that the Nagas and other fierce tribes would take very good care that chaos shall come again. tribes would take very good care that chaos shall come again. How long, we may ask, would the Pax Indica prevail in this mighty confederation of eight Hindoo States, five Mahommedan States, one heretical Hindoo, and one Buddhist State—in all fifteen States comprising a population of over 250 millions, speaking various tongues, and professing four different and hostile religions? May it not be expected that Peshawur would soon prove a bone of contention between Afghans and Sikhs, and that the contest would be finally settled through the interested intervention of the Russians! The Nizam of that day will have greatly changed from his ancestors if he refrains from molesting greatly changed from his ancestors if he refrains from molesting Mysore, or making a dash at the Carnatic. And do the Bengalese hope to escape from the evil eye of some great covetous European Power, anxious to develop its maritime and colonial influence? Could Germany resist the temptation of entering the Hooghly, occupying Calcutta, and settling on the plantations abandoned by degenerate Englishmen? Might not the Italians find Bombay a convenient entrepot, preferable, for instance, to any port on the Red Sea? Where then would be the "Indian nation"?

ENGLISH RULE.

A Muhammadan writes to the Times of India:

"Allow me, in the name of justice and gratitude, to express my condemnation of Mr. Amrita Lal Roy's article in the North American Review, extracts from which you have given in your issue of June 2. Your remarks led me to read the article itself, issue of June 2. and I do not remember having read for a long time a more foolish production, or having known a baser use made of the education and liberty of opinion given to Natives by the British Government. No one can be more sensible than I am of the short-comings of the British rule in India. But everyone who knows anything about that rule knows also that the shortcomings are incidental to the British Government being a Foreign Government, and that that Government is sincerely desirous to remedy them as for so lies in their power.

"Nor do I overlook the overbearing and high-handed conduct of individual Englishmen towards Natives. At the same time I know that that conduct is often the result of misunderstanding, and occasionally of provocation on the part of my countrymen. We cannot expect every Englishman in India to be a philo-spher.

"All this arises from one great cause—viz., the British Government of the British Governm "All this arises from one great cause—viz., the British Government is foreign, and the Europeans employed in carrying it on are foreigners, between whom and the Natives there is no social sympathy and fellow-feeling. But is that Government tyrannical, or are its servants tyrants, as Mr. Roy wishes the American public to believe? This question can only be answered comparatively. Mr. Roy himself institutes a comparison between the British and Native rule very much to the advantage of the latter. I know a great deal of the British rule, and also of the administration of some Native States. We know what the political, moral, and material condition of India was before the British rule. Does Mr. Roy pretend to say that there were good laws, that there was protection of person and property, that there poor had any remedy against the great and the rich, that there was liberty of action and opinion, that there was peace, that education was provided for the people?

"The administration of many Native States in India has considerably improved of late. But to whom is this improvement due? Surely to the British Government and their political siderably improved of late. But to whom is this improvement due? Surely to the British Government and their political agents. I personally know that in certain States even such improvements as good communications, efficient police, equal justice, removal of oppressive taxes, opening of a few schools, and so on, were adopted by the chiefs after years of pressing from the Government and its agents, and at last they were adopted only to please the British Government. Mr. Roy ignores all this, if, indeed, he knows anything about it.

"It is true that the masses of the people in India, both in British India and in the Native States, are poor, ill-fed and ill-clad. But who can say that this is due to the British rule? Their condition was never better; it was, perhaps, worse before."

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AND THE LONDON EXHIBITION.

(Pioneer.)

To knock a man down and kick him for falling is a course of To knock a man down and kick him for falling is a course of action which may have its merits as a practical joke, but cannot be approved as embodying any really wholesome principle in application to public affairs. The treatment of India by the authorities at Home in connection with the Exhibition at South Kensing ton must, therefore, be recognised as unsatisfactory, even though it may have been playful and amusing. Our special correspondent has already described how the Royal Commissioners originally applied to the Government of India for a representative collection of everything that India produces, and how the tive collection of everything that India produces, and how the India Office ordered compliance with this indent, and at the same time directed that no money should be spent in carrying it out. The problem was solved in the end as we already know by the annexation of the articles collected for the Bombay Exhibition, and by denying the Government of India the privilege of sending Home agents qualified to set out the goods to advantage and interpret them for the benefit of the British public of traders and consumers. The Indian part of the Exhibition has been managed altogether by the permanent officials of South Kensington; and now the results are examined by a writer in the Times of the 19th ultimo, who shows so much intimacy with the whole subject that he is clearly no ordinary newspaper writer, but a representative of official eatheticism in its highest circles, and his comment practically completes the resemblance between the treatment the Government of India has received in this transaction, and the lively process we referred to just now which schoolboys are sometimes put through by high-spirited seniors. The Indian Exhibition was knocked down by the India Office when the Government here was forbidden to spend any money upon it, and now the Times gives a "deliberate verdict" upon the collection displayed which is in some particulars so unfavourable" that the writer thinks it necessary to guard against misunderstandings at the outset by devoting a great deal of enthusiastic commendation to Sir Philip Cunlifie Owen and Mr. l'urdon Clarke for the wonderful success they have achieved with the means at their disposal. This is all the more creditable to them, it seems, because of the "severe This is all economy with which the Indian section has been organised," which accounts for the absence of any "sumptuary objects," and also perhaps for the falling-off in artistic excellence of the carpets, "for after all it may be purely accidental and due to the Government not having been able with the money allowed for the exhibition to buy any but the character artistic excellence." hibition to buy any but the cheapest carpets of private manufacture in which most unfortunately the aniline dyes are being every year increasingly used." The Exhibition, moreover, is "overburdened with gaol-made carpets apparently from every public gaol in India," which further indicates in the writer's opinion that the collection must be looked upon as cheap and nasty.

Certainly, it would be very cheap if it were literally true—as the Times writer puts it—that "Sir Philip Owen's success ... has been achieved at a total expenditure from Indian revenues of £10,000." But there is a great deal to be taken into account before one can honestly say what the Exhibition has cost the revenues of India, and it is evident that the statement just quoted rests upon the India Office theory as to the expenditure it has sanctioned. The Secretary of State, we believe, has grown attached to a belief that the proper sum for India to be supposed to have spent upon the Exhibition would be a lakh of rupees. This pleasant doctrine of his has in reality been the cause of so to have spent upon the Exhibition would be a lakh of rupees. This pleasant doctrine of his has in reality been the cause of so much that has gone wrong in connection with the Indian part of the Exhibition. Of course, the Government of India had nothing resembling a spontaneous wish to lay out money just now on any enterprise of that kind. But when compelled to concern itself with getting up an Exhibition, it would have preferred to get up something worthy of the country and calculated to do good, and so recoup India for the outlay indirectly. When the Secretary of State first set his one lakh theory afloat, he was frankly told, we believe, though in due phrases of official respect, that it was pure nonsense. The Government of India would never have pretended nonsense. The Government of India would never have pretended to be able even to stock the required South Kensington bazaar for the wholly insufficient sum suggested. The cost at which it estimated the establishment of a proper Exhibition in a proper way under the superintendence of its own officers was about five lakhs; and when the one lakh theory asserted itself, the Government of India would simply have withdrawn from the hopeless ment of India would simply have withdrawn from the hopeless undertaking, but for the somewhat tricky compromise invented about the exhibits collected for the Bombay Exhibition. These are treated as "borrowed," though of course Indian credit is pledged for their cost in exactly the same way as it would have been pledged if the Government of India had frankly taken the things over for South Kensington; so running up its avowed outlay into the neighbourhood of the original estimate. But the borrowing theory by one bold stroke keeps the cost of all the expensive pairs of the collection out of the open and above board accounts which of the collection out of the open and above board accounts which relate to the undertaking.

The annoying part of the transaction is that while India is practically burdened with as heavy a cost as it would have had to bear in setting out a really good Exhibition in a creditable way, the authorities at Home seem to plume themselves, first, on having done with immense genius what by all accounts seems to have been done in a very unsatisfactory way, from the point of view of the bond fide Indian experts; and secondly, on having kept down the wicked extravagance of the Government of India in the interests of the poor taxpayer; so that the results have been accomplished in presence of severe economy by South Kensington skill altogether. The truth of the matter appears to be that the skill altogether. The truth of the matter appears to be that difference between what has been done and what would have been done if the Government of India had enjoyed a thoroughly free hand has simply been this: the same money roughly speaking, has been spent that would have been spent in the other case, but "the poor taxpayer" has got no indirect advantage out of it as he might have obtained if the Exhibition had been one of a kind calculated to give a genuine stimulus to the trade of India in artistic manufacturer. The undertaking has, in fact, been brought to grief by the jugglery of the Secretary of State in pretending that he was keeping tue expenditure within £10,000, and by the surrender of control over the arrangements on the spot to the authorities of South Kensington. In both matters the India Office is wholly and solely to blame. It was natural that the South Kensington authorities should like to get an important part of the Exhibition altogether into their own kends. The Colonial Courts Exhibition altogether into their own hands. The Colonial Courts were each under the absolute direction of its own Commissioners. The Royal Commissioners would have been cyphers in their own show, if they had not had the Indian Courts to arrange. But, at the same time, if they had had to deal directly with the Government of India over that matter—with the organization, that is to say, primarily interested in the result and responsible for outlay, they would never have been allowed to take those arrangements into their own hands and keep out all the men who would have into their own hands and keep out all the men who would have been properly qualified to make them. It was only, in fact, by invoking the hidden power of the India Office—controlling the Government out here as no Colonial Government is controlled—that the original knocking down was accomplished in the manner that paved the way for the reproving kick now administered by the "deliberate" and "so unfavourable" verdict of the Times.

CAVALRY INSPECTIONS IN INDIA. (Bombay Gazette.)

One of the principal features in the administration of Her Majesty's Army, British or Native, at home or abroad, is the "Inspection" by general officers commanding. There can be no question as to the advantage derived from thorough searching inspections such as one made by an energetic and competent general officer. Even if a commanding officer is disposed to be general omeer. Even if a commanding omeer is disposed to be slack (which we trust is now very rarely the case), and to let things slide along easily, the knowledge that he is to be inspected keeps him perforce up to the mark, or, it should rather be said, induces him to keep his regiment up to the mark. All branches of the Service do not undergo the same number or kinds of inspection. Let us begin with the infantry, the backbone of the Army. The only inspection, other than the colonel's regimental inspection of companies they have in the course of the year is inspection of companies, they have in the course of the year is that of the general officer commanding, and this is quite sufficient for all practical purposes. The cavalry in England have the inspection by the general officer under whom they are serving, but as a special branch of the service they are also inspected by an officer entitled "the Inspector-General of Cavalry in Great Britain," who, of course, is a cavalry officer and always commands the Cavalry Brigade at Aldershot. Artillery are much inspected. Batteries undergo an inspection at the hands of the officer commanding Royal Artillery in the district or division. They are inspected by the general in whose division they are, and again, as a special branch of the service, they are inspected by "the Inspector-General of Artillery." Now there are very good and sound reasons for having special inspecting officers of the same branch of the service for cavalry and artillery. The large proportion of general officers commanding are infantry soldiers; this of course, is only right and proper, as the infantry represents such a very large proportion of the Army, but it is quite impossible for any infantry-general, however distinguished, experienced, and able a soldier he may be, to have that knowledge of the interior inspection of companies, they have in the course of the year is able a soldier he may be, to have that knowledge of the interior arrangements, equipment and regimental or battery drill, of cavalry and artillery, which would enable him to make a minute and searching inspection. Of course he is able to tell as well as any one whether the regiment of cavalry or battery of artillery drills steedily, whether the more arms turned out smart and elegating the dilly whether the more arms turned out smart and elegating the dilly whether the more arms turned out smart and elegating the dilly whether the more arms turned out smart and elegating the dilly whether the more arms turned out smart and elegating the dilly whether the more arms turned out smart and elegating the dill arms and the dill arms are turned out to the dill arms and the dill arms are turned out to the dill arms are turned ou any one whether the regiment of cavalry or battery of artillery drills steadily, whether the men are turned out smart and clean, whether the horses are in good condition, and whether the harness is clean and smart looking. But although he may be able to see if they drill steadily, it needs an expert to always be able to tell if they drill correctly, if the orders of the drill of that particular branch of the service are being correctly carried out. It must be a very exceptional infantry-general who could tell after a regimental word of command if the squadron and troop leaders were riving their right words of commands and with a battery whether giving their right words of commands, and with a battery whether the subalterns in charge of divisions and non-commissioned officers in charge of sub-divisions were doing the same. In the same way with the appearance of the men and their equipment it would be difficult for him to tell if all the detail was absolutely correct, and this is especially the case with artillery, where there is such an enormous amount of material on parade.

This is recognised in England by the appointment of an Inspector-General of Cavalry and an Inspector-General of Artillaspector-General of Cavalry and an Inspector-General of Artilery. In this country it is partially recognised by the appointment of an Inspector-General of Artillery, but why, in India, is there no Inspector-General of Cavalry? This is a question which has occurred, we are sure, to every Cavalry Officer out here belonging either to the Native Cavalry or British Cavalry. There can be no question about it, that such an appointment would be attended with most beneficial results, and we are sure that most officers commanding cavalry regiments that is if they that most officers commanding cavalry regiments, that is if they are smart keen soldiers, would welcome such an appointment, and be glad of the searching inspections to which they would then be liable; and if we may be allowed to say so, such inspections would be of untold benefit to the Native Cavalry. India is proud and justly proud of this branch of her Army, but there is nothing so good that it cannot be better, and we venture to say that every Native Cavalry regiment would very soon feel the benefit if such inspections took place. The Cavalry-General inspecting a regiment knows exactly where to look for faults and irregularities; ment knows exactly where to look for rautes and integrations, this the Infantry-General cannot possibly do, and unless a man had been the greater part of, if not all, his service in the cavalry, he could not do it, however good a soldier he might be. What is our force of cavalry in this vast peninsula of India? There are throughout the three Presidencies nine British cavalry regiare throughout the three Presidencies nine British cavalry regiments in Bengal—six in Bengal; two in Madras; one in Bombay. Of Native Cavalry there are in Bengal seventeen regiments of Bengal Cavalry; four regiments of Punjab Cavalry; and the Cavalry of the Guides; in Central India, two regiments of Central India Horse. The Cavalry of the Deoli Irregular Force and of the Erinpura Irregular Force, under the Government of India, may also be included in the Cavalry belonging to Bengal. In Bombay we have seven regiments of Native Cavalry, and in Madras there are four of Madras Cavalry and four regiments of the Hyderabad Contingent. This gives a total force in India of nine regiments of British Cavalry, thirty-eight of Native Cavalry, and the Cavalry of the Guides, the Deoli Irregular Force and Erinpura Irregular Force, some 650 sabres in all. This is a very large force, and worthy of the best being done for it that can be done. What the total expenditure on the Cavalry arm of the done. What the total expenditure on the Cavalry arm of the service is we are quite unable to say, but it must be very large, and the appointment of a General Officer as Inspector-General on some Rs.2,500 a month, with a Brigade Major (as the Inspector-General of Artillery has) would make no very great difference in the total cost of Cavalry in India. We believe that such an appointment will eventually be made, and there can be no doubt that it would be an unmixed benefit for this most limportant arm—the arm which in warfare is aptly termed the eyes and ears of an Army.

BENGAL.

The recent examinations held by the Punjab University, says the Civil and Military Gazette, are to furnish at least two interesting cases for the law courts. One young gentleman seems to have passed the Mildle School Examination under some one to have passed the Middle School Examination under some one else's name, having passed on a previous occasion in his own. This, of course, may be nothing more than a gratifying proof that Sir Charles Aitchison's educational policy is bearing good fruit; and that students will go up and pass examinations two or three times over for the mere pleasure of the thing. Or the candidate may have been animated by less creditable motives. There is another case, we believe, in which a student will be charged with sending a representative to be examined instead of going himself; a proceeding which certainly shows no zeal for education. a proceeding which certainly shows no zeal for education.

THE divorce case of Surgeon-Major R. S. Buchanan versus Mrs. Buchanan and C. W. Craddock, W. Mumford and Lieut. J. L. Kayes co-respondents, came on before Mr. Justice Plowden in the Chief Court of the Punjab on June 15 for settlement of issues which were heard, and the 8th of July has been fixed for the hearing of the petitioner's evidence.

The Madras Journal of Literature, in January, 1839, attributed to Lieutenant Warren, of H.M.'s 33rd Regiment, the discovery in 1802 of gold in Colar. The Journal stated that "he found it in the small nullahs, or ruts, or breaks in the ground at Warrigum, a small village four miles and a-half S.W. of Battamungalum; also on the banks of the Palar river, and the Ponian near Cargory; from a load of this earth near the last he obtained three sparkles of gold. He found gold also at Marcoopium, three miles south of Warrigum; here there were mines worked by the Natives. Tippoo had worked them also, but desisted on finding that the produce just balanced the expenses." Warrigum is now known as Ooregum, and Marcoopium is the name still used by the Natives of the neighbourcoopium is the name still used by the Natives of the neighbour-hood when alluding to the spot where the Mysore Company is now at work.

It is probable that Monsieur Richaud, the late Governor of Pondicherry, will be appointed to the Governorship of Cochin-China, which is the best appointment in the French Colonial Service. The pay is 200,000 francs per annum, whilst a regal establishment is provided at the expense of the State.

BOMBAY.

THE moonsoon in Bombay has been attended with an unusually heavy downpour of rain, over twenty four inches having fallen within forty-eight hours. Traffic in several parts of the city was impeded, and some damage was done to property.

An idea would seem to be abroad that Hyderabal is a promising field for the flour mill industry. No less than six applications for permission to establish such mills are now before Government-all, strange to say, by Bombay folk.

MR. NUSSERWANJEE DORABJEE BHADA, an engineer employed in the Bombay Municipality, has been elected an Associate member of the Institution of Civil Engineers, London.

INDIAN SPORTING NOTES.

WE believe it probable that General Parrott will offer his customary purse to the Lucknow Stewards this year, hoping that the latter meeting being more central than Umballa or Meerut, will attract a large field of his youngsters. It will suit the Lucknow authorities, too, for they have only five races for the first day and no country-bred event among them. We presume the terms will be as usual, and distance a mile.

Mr. Gideon C. Sconce, Chief Judge of the Calcutta Small Cause Court, is inclined to fancy himself a bit of a wag. In a late case before him, in which Messrs. Milton and Co. sued a welknown legal luminary, the learned Judge gratuitously gave the public his idea of a horsey man as follows: "I believe a horsey man is commonly one whose apparent knowledge, as exhibited by the way in which he feels a horse's legs, is in exact proportion to his absolute ignorance of what he is feeling for." Not bad for Gideon this.

THE little English jockey Dnnn had a day's outing at the last Simla sky races, winning three out of the five events on the card; but in the case of Myrtle he was disqualified for going the wrong course, so Billet Doux wins.

MR. MACKLIN, the well-known horse importer, does not intend returning to Australia this year, but remains in Calcutta, having still several of his last season's importations to dispose of. That good all-round horse, Sir Patrick, who is quite of the Palmerston class, if not somewhat better than the son of Panic, is available at a not unreasonable figure, and racing men would find him a really good investment. really good investment.

AUSTRALIAN versus English interests seem to be producing a AUSTRALIAN versus English interests seem to be producing a very pretty stir among the Indian racing community. For many years there has been much apathy shown by all Turf Club men not actually on the Committee as far as a study of racing matters is concerned, but they seem to have roused themselves like warhorses at the trumpet call over Mr. Apcar's sensible and well put proposal. We have already expressed our views on the subject and are now perfectly willing to open our columns to the arguments on both sides. All we wish to see is the question coolly and impartially discussed without favour to any party. Nor do and impartially discussed without favour to any party. Nor do we in the least advocate working it up into a personal one. It is absurd, if the verdict is to rest merely on whether Australians as represented by Mr. Apcar and his supporters, or English horses as represented by Lord William Beresford and his followers, can by the use of the wire or by written proving obtain most veter. by the use of the wire or by written proxies obtain most votes.—

NATIVE PRESS.

LADY DUFFERIN.—An English lady personally initiating and carrying out a patriotic and humane work in India for the benefit of the womanly masses is a circumstance which has not been hitherto noticed in the annals of Hindustan. Not even a been hitherto noticed in the annals of Hindustan. Not even a European administrator has yet undertaken a beneficent work of this stupendous character. Our English conquerors have never been able to sympathise with the complete character and failings of the people, and have thus only touched the fringe of the national evils and depressions existing in India. Our countrymen have themselves not cared to cast off their immovable patience, conservatism and lethargy. To this may be partly attributed the slow progress made by European rulers in a thorough mastery of the sentiments, traits and conditions of their subjects. At last, we have been visited with a fair and happy messenger from the far West, and that messenger belongs to the kindlier and nobler of the two sexes—the embodiment of the Empress herself. As some tribute to the painstaking and widespread exertions of the Countess of Dufferin, we may record this event as denoting a new era in the history of India, fraught with mportant conditions for the social welfare of the Native communities. The value of the national example set by the Countess cannot be too widely known, nor too much estimated.—Gujerat Mitra.

THE INDIAN ADMINISTRATION.—Our Hindoo friend the Shetkya Kaiwaree, or the Agriculturists' friend, in a long article calls upon his countrymen to be up and alive. The writer would have a general fund, called the Indian constitutional agitation fund, raised. Amongst other suggestions he makes the following:—A deputation of ten Natives should be sent to the House of Comdeputation of ten Natives should be sent to the House of Commons to humbly pray for a change in the constitution of the Government of India. The office of the Secretary of State and Council should be entirely done away with. The Viceregal and the Presidency Councils should be reconstituted, the number of the members increased, and half the number should be able and learned men of pure Native origin. The Native members should be elected by the people and they should be paid members. The formality of passing the Indian Budget by the House of Commons should be dispensed with.

THE cost of the Tibet Mission will be charged to the Political Department, the Military Department ultimately bearing all expenses ordinarily provided for in the Military Budget.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Commander-in-Chief having recommended the grant of marching batta to a Native regiment entitled to such batte for three days previous to departure, and three days after arrival at destination, on all occasions on which it leaves its station, the Government of India have sanctioned it.

THE following change in the payment of British officers has been made:—Officers quitting India on return to England, except when proceeding on furlough, will be settled with by the India Office from the date following that on which they ceased to be entitled to pay and Indian allowances to the date preceding the arrival in port of the vessel in which they return to England.

The India Office will issue the furlough pay of officers whilst on The India Office will issue the furlough pay of officers whilst on leave from India.

It is anticipated that the Transport and Commissariat Departments will shortly be amalgated. Colonel Clifford of the Transport is expected out soon, Captain Yaldwyn meanwhile carrying on his duties.

MAJOR TROTTER, Political Officer, Manipur, who was severely wounded in the skirmish beyond Tommu, is now considered to be out of danger. He had to be taken forty-two miles on an elephant to Manipur, and nearly died of exhaustion on the way, while blood-poisoning afterwards set in and made his state a very critical one.

The story goes, says an Allahabad paper, that the Rajah of N—recently ordered eight thousand rupees' worth of goods from an European firm, and not only refused to pay for them, but peremptorily ordered the traveller who called for the money to leave his State. A representation was made to the Government of India, who referred it to the Lieutenant-Governor, on whose advice the tradesman again interviewed the Raja with no hetter result. Another Prince obtained several hundred rupees' better result. Another Prince obtained several hundred rupees' worth of goods during the Rawal Pindi Durbar, and also declined to pay for them. There may be some redress in the former case, but there is none in the latter, as an action to recover the money cannot be brought in our Courts. Angl:-Indian firms would do well to be on their guard against gentlemen of this ilk.

Annual Dinner of the Printing Firm of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co.—This event came off on Saturday last at the Bridge Hotel, Chertsey, and was a great success. A glorious day, a most recherché repast, and a most pleasant meeting between employers and employed, are happy facts to be chronicled. Mr. C. E. Johnston, the senior partner of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., occupied the chair, and was supported by his junior partner, Mr. Heathcote. The vice chairman was, of course, Mr. F. Pincott, who has good reason to be proud of the admirable corps which he led to pleasant duty on this occasion. Majors Elliott, Fenwick, and Mr. Charles Marvin represented the visitors. After ample justice was done to the excellent dinner, which Mr. T. Bloomfield superintended as steward, the National Anthem was sung, following the toast of the "Queen Empress" given in felicitous terms by the chairman. Other toasts followed—the "Army, Navy, and Volunteers," elequently responded to by Major Elliott; the "Firm," which was drank with the utmost cordiality, and coupled with the names of Mr. Johnstone and his partner, was given all the honours. The with the utmost cordiality, and coupled with the names of Mr. Johnstone and his partner, was given all the honours. The "Press," the "Visitors," and last but not least the "Steward" followed, and were warmly received and acknowledged. Some excellent songs were sung by Messrs. Pincott, Hogg, Walsha, Geary, Brooks, Jose, Munro, Stirling, and Lovett, Mr. B. Redfearn presiding at the piano. A remarkably clever recitation by Mr. Heathcote took immensely. The speeches were wisely made "short and sweet," and very properly gave more time to harmony. Altogother a most enjoyable day was passed—a "red-letter" day amongst the few holidays which fall to the lot of the toilers of the Press.

MEMORIALS OF THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF MAJOR-GENERAL SIR HERBERT B. EDWARDES, K.C.B, K.C.S.I.*

India is a land of heroes: of the number was Sir Herbert Edwardes, whose memoirs have recently been presented to the public. Fortunate as was the soldier-civilian in respect of the public. Fortunate as was the soldier-civilian in respect of the opportunities afforded him of doing good honest service, perhaps he was more fortunate in meeting with "a helpmeet for man," who not only cherished him during life, but on his death has produced one of the most charming biographies within the whole range of Anglo-Indian history. As a wife, Lady Edwardes, of course, possessed the sine qua non of "hero worship"; but the feelings of regard are never allowed to pervert the soberness of judgment and calmness of intellect, which alone can save a writer in such cases from mere fulsome adulation or satiating praise. This is the rock upon which so many biographers have wrecked the frail vessel of success; but in this instance the current of common-sense has saved the ship. Clear, concise, polished in language and consecutive in narrative, the work portrays the man as he was before the world, with just sufficient glimpses of life in the sacred circle of home to show that his outward actions were a reflex of the noble instincts of his inner soul. The statesman, the Christian, the soldier stands before us a living being, sketched with the loving hand of a wife, who seems as it were to invite society at large to admire him whom she admired, to adore him whom she adored; nor, we venture to think, will she be disappointed. Not a reader but will appreciate her efforts, and as the volumes are laid aside will wish it were fated to know ersonally a lady who has left on the pages of her husband's personally a lady wno has lett on the property and biography an image so honest, so gentle, so tender, and so

It is scarcely necessary to sketch Sir Herbert Edwardes' career. With the exception of a few short months he served the whole of his time in the Punjab—first as aide-de-camp to Sir Hugh Gough, and subsequently, in a civil capacity, as Assistant to the Resident at Lahore. What he did and how he did it is the reader's privilege to discover: there is, indeed, a rich banquet of information. First and foremost we see Sir Henry Laurence, the most illustrious of an illustrious band of brothers. Gentle in the most illustrious of an illustrious band of brothers. Gentle in soul but iron in will, indomitable in energy and untiring in zeal, he might none the less have quailed at the task of pacifying the Punjab, peopled as it was with turbulent and fiery Sikhs, to whom war and plunder were the very breath of their nostrils. As years foll on we see him, too, stemming the tide of mutiny in Lucknow. Fearless, intrepid, undaunted, he died a hero's death, shattered by a merciless shell from the traitor's camp.

The mantle of Sir Henry fall upon his brother Lahn.

The mantle of Sir Henry fell upon his brother John. Stern, persevering, straightforward, honest, he did good service as an administrator; but as a statesman he was dogged, obstinate, and difficult to convince, the very embodiment of the Puritan of the Middle Ages. None the less, at the great crisis of 1857, he threw himself with indomitable energy into the work of rolling back the tide of bigotry and religious frenzy on the North-West Frontier of the Empire, and in the fulness of time he stood forth as the saviour of India. Not a child, indeed, but knows the history of John Baron Laurence, but few, perhaps, are so familiar with the traits of his character which Lady Edwardes has placed before

Then there is Montgomery, who still lives, as Sir Robert Montgomery, to enjoy the honours and dignities which a grateful country poured into the lap of an administration, of whom it may be said, and it is no small modicum of praise, that alike as a man and a statesman he was a worthy successor of him at whose feet he learned the lesson of life—Sir Henry Laurence. Able and resolute, as were the band of assistants who looked up to this latter, not one in after life achieved a more brilliant reputation, a more successful career, than him whom to know is to love, to study is to admire—him whose lips are free from guile, and whose tongue speaketh no evil—Sir Robert Montgomery, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

There each and every one stand forth in all their glory, their careers intermingling with the scarcely less illustrious Sir Herbert Edwardes, the story of whose life is the subject of the work before us. And what is the verdict of posterity in his case? He, too, was a man endowed with those qualities of head and heart which in those days made the Punjab the nursery of heroes. Energetic, zealous, undaunted, he was no mean competitor in the race of life. Even judged by the standard of results his career would bear comparison with that of the most illustrious of his comtemporaries; but if he be regarded as the possessor of a well-nigh unrivalled faculty of attaching those around him to himself, Sir Herbert Edwardes towers far and above any of England's many sons, whose memory is venerated, and whose recollection is adored by teeming multitudes unknown to fame. He lives in the hearts of all who knew him; his monument is the precious testimony of human breasts and inward souls. But where, perhaps, the man shines forth most resplendent was as regards his fearless championship of the faith which was in him; and it is not a little singular—let sceptics sneer as they will—that in the great Revolt of 1857, when the very existence of the Empire was at stake, when England's sway in the East tottered in the balance, the men who did best service, the men on whose efforts a blessing most visibly rested, were the devout Christian band of heroes, who had learned to know that piety does not consist in the mere outward observance of external duties, but in the inward cultivaoutward observance of external duties, but in the inward cultiva-tion of those nobler instincts which leaven the mind and purge the soul. In these days of levity and indifference to all that concerns man's brighter destiny, Lady Edwardes's work will have done good service if it does no more than draw the attention of a giddy world to the story of the Punjab, and bid mankind learn a lesson at the tomb of her husband, Sir Herbert Edwardes.

THE RUSSIAN STORM-CLOUD; OR, RUSSIA IN HER RELATIONS TO NEIGHBOURING COUNTRIES.

Although some few portions of this book have been anticipated Aithough some few portions of this book have been anticipated in the author's letters to the Jupiter of Printing House-square, these, read in their present connection, come before us in a fresh light, while the volume, as a whole, can hardly be perused by the least careful reader without adding considerably to his store of knowledge. Everything which "Stepniak" writes comes to us, as it were from "superior authority." He is the accredited spokesman of the Russian revolutionists: and we may take his utternaments at the general according to Nihiliam.

man of the Russian revolutionists: and we may take his utterances as the gospel according to Nihilism.

Except in Ireland, priest and rebel have always been at daggers drawn; and it cannot be expected that "Stepniak" should have a word to say for the priesthood, or for the idolatrous travesty of Christianity which they are supposed to inculcate, and which reminds an Anglo-Indian not a little of the Hindu Pantheon. reminds an Anglo-Indian not a little of the Hindu Pantheon. "The priest is the only possessor of the secrets of propitiating all the heavenly powers by certain ceremonies: St. Vlas, the cattle preserver; St. Elia, the rain giver; and St. George, whom the wolves obey" (p. 15). One can hardly wonder that our author, speaking for the Nihilists, should say "Such religions, of course, we had no interest at all in destroying."

Russia, may, in good sooth, be said to be the Oriental country which lies nearest to us. No one can ca'l it really European, and no book on the country can be profitably read, without bearing in mind, that Muscovite civilisation is the merest veneer, and that very little scratching is required to find the Tatar. In the ing in mind, that Muscovite civilisation is the merest veneer, and that very little scratching is required to find the Tatar. In the indifference to human life and suffering, in the plurality of deities worshipped (as above adverted to) under the name of saints, in the constitution of village communities, in the patriarchal form of family life, as well as in many other respects, you find the Oriental in every Russian village.

Or iental, too, are the matters which chiefly bring us into political contact with Russia. The diplomatic correspondence between the Courts of St. James' and St. Petersburg may be between the Courts of St. James' and St. Petersburg may be summed up in the words Turkey and India. In both quarters summed up in the words Turkey and India. In both quarters we have found Russia unfalteringly aggressive. And why aggressive? Russian diplomats, and people, pitchforked, for political reasons, into our own Foreign Office (as likely as not ignorant whether Bokhara is East, West, North, or South, of Samarkand) will tell you: it is Russia's destiny. Here again we say, why? To this query our author supplies, from his own point of view, an answer. "Why," he asks, "is Russia a conquering country?" Autocracy is, he thinks, the reason. "Growing disaffection" within the State has led to external wars, converting (p. 48) "into a sort of moral necessity what was formerly a mere luxury." The better classes, too (we are assured on the next page), desire a change of some kind, without too nicely investigating its nature. "They welcome with reckless indifference every event, even seeming calamity: everything, in a word, provided it promises a violent shock to the unendurable system, no matter how disastrous be the crash. To arrive at such sentiments matter how disastrous be the crash. To arrive at such sentiments matter how disastrous be the crash. To arrive at such sentiments men must be driven to madness by continued depression of spirit, and so they really are in Russia. The fact I am alluding to is undeniable, and recurs at every threatened war: . . The nobility, as a landed class, is ruined. The peasants have too little land to pay the exorbitant taxes, absorbing often the whole net proceeds of the soil" (pp. 56-57). (These peasants, be it noted, being "certainly the most powerful class of the Russian nation," of whom they form four-lifths.)†

As we all know, every Russian official, from the highest to the lowest, pilfers. The Emperor Nicholas said that he was the only honest official in the country. A Grand Duke was not above filching, during the last Russo-Turkish war, half a million sterling by starving the soldiery. Indeed, "everyone stole according to his rank," to use a Russian phrase, and it was but fair that the Grand Duke should be as pre-eminent in swindling as in rank. "Stepniak's" chapter on "the Russian Army and its Commissariat" gives some significant instances of Russian official honesty

To those who attentively follow European politics, all questions connected with Poland cannot fail to be of the deepest interest; nor will it have escaped notice that the Tsar, with a bankrupt exchequer, has been lavishing huge sums on his Polish fortresses, more especially on the Prussian frontier; and this is inadequately more especially on the Prussian frontier; and this is inadequately accounted for by the fact that the Poles, a far finer race than the Russians, can only be kept in their present state of Helotism by a vast army. "Stepniak" says, "indeed," we know not on what authority—"Poland is much more coveted by Prussia than the so-called German or Baltic provinces" (p. 166), and it certainly has a larger German population than the latter. But the Poles will not move a finger in order to be transferred "from the hands of three of three growned robbers to another." Nevertheless should of one of three crowned robbers to another." Nevertheless, should Teuton and Slav fall out, we may look for important events in the grand old kingdom of Poland.

At the present time, when everyone has Ireland "on the brain," it is not a little curious to consider the points of parallelism which the author indicates, and others which will occur to every student, between the history of the Poles and that of the Irish. Widely different as is the position of their respective countries, there is far more similitude between the two populations than might at

Considerations of space prevent our referring at length to many other suggestive parts of a most interesting book. But we should leave undone one thing which ought to be done were we to fail remarkable chapter on "European Socialism." In this volume "Stepniak" is at his best; the work is thoughtful, and throws not a little light on more than one dark corner of European

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.*

While the country is in the throes of a general election, gratuitously brought about for no other object than to subserve the insensate vanity and greed of office of a single individual, it is of the first importance that the national and constitutional aspect of the question should be presented to us in a Review which is constitutional and national not in name alone. The editors have undertaken the task of doing this, and have done it well. It is, indeed, as they justly remark, "easier to know what to think of Mr. Gladstone than to say it," when, descending from the high position which the same and the what to think of Mr. Gladstone than to say it," when, descending from the high position which he once occupied, he sinks to the level of a vituperative and untruthful scold. Speeches, letters, telegrams, pour forth, each telling its tale of gross disloyalty to former colleagues, of betrayal of Cabinet confidences, of petty spleen, and of a lifelong insincerity. That the tradition of Government by party should have brought the country to such a state that it is now thought "passing strange" if those who love her combine, in spite of diverse opinions on other matters, to preserve her, may well make the least thoughtful person reflect. The silver lining to the dark cloud is, that the lovers of their country have thus combined to save her, and that the bonds of party have been broken asunder, and its cords cast away. We strongly recommend every one to read this article, which would alone confer distinction on the present number of the Review. The fallacy, too, of which the most is now being made, that we are fallacy, too, of which the most is now being made, that we are only asked to do for Ireland what we have done for our colonies, only asked to do for Ireland what we have done for our colonies, is mercilessly exposed by Lord Norton and Mr. Baden Powell in their papers on Imperial Federation.

It is true enough that the daily Press must furnish pabulum to the taste of its readers; though it must also endeavour to form their taste. And the undoubted fact, that the large majority of the provincial press is Radical, well deserves consideration. It is obvious to mark that the large majority of the provincial press is Radical, well deserves consideration. che provincial press is Radical, well deserves consideration. It is obvious to remark, that the attack is easier than the defence, that a half-informed person or fledgling writer can find anomalies in any institution, which it may require a man of extended knowledge, possibly of deep reading, effectually to vindicate. This is, however, far from exhausting the matter. We are, therefore, glad to see the well-considered article on the whole subject by a "Conservative journalist," whose conclusion "that journals tend in the servative journalist," whose conclusion "that journals tend in the main to become Conservative as they become prosperous in a presperous community" is satisfactory as far as it goes.

The imperilled Church of England—doubtless the next object of Radical attack—claims an article on "Ritual Litigation" from Canon Trevor, which is in the main a prolonged wail concerning the "Public Worship Regulation Act." That Act presents, as every well-informed Churchman knows, preposterous anomalics; but the Canon's proposed councils of conciliation, as we must for but the Canon's proposed councils of conciliation, as we must for want of a better phrase call them, would go far to render recourse to its awkward and unecclesiastical procedure unnecessary.

Our three "National Enemies" are described by Mr. H. A. Barrett as being—ignorance, individual greed, and disease: the last and greatest of which is, among the poor, chiefly the outcome of want. With this aspect of the matter the writer chiefly deals; and his tables of possible dietary for the poor, while interesting and valuable, but too clearly substantiate his remarks. It is lamentable to reflect that the merely animal-labourer is really better off in jail than while endeavouring honestly to earn his bread.

Mr. F. T. Palgrave's article on "Poetry Compared with the other Fine Arts" is suggestive enough, though it strikes us as being less spontaneous than much which we have read from his pen, while the magnitude of the subject precludes our entering on its consideration. Lord Colchester's account of Mallet du Pan will interest many who may have all but forgotten him. It is scarcely too much to say that, had the Duke of Brunswick, when about to invade France in 1791, put forth the proclamation suggested (p. 670) by Du Pan, the life of Louis XVI. might have been saved, and much of the carnage of later years obviated.

We have kept the ladies for a bonne-bouche. Of the perfect accuracy of Lady John Manners's description of the lower ranges of the Tayana (see doctors) and many processing social the Foldy are of the Taunus (she does not mention having scaled the Feldberg, and enjoyed the magnificent view thence obtainable) we can speak from long personal knowledge of the country. Miss Robinson has exploité, for the benefit of her readers, the little known region of Neapolitan novels. If these deal somewhat too exclusively with the physical life of men and women, the failing is in part atoned for by a vividness and vivacity of feeling and description rarely met with in our more staid country, and of which the writer gives us some excellent specimens. The entire issue is much to gives us some excellent specimens. The entire issue is much to be commended.

SEWELL'S TALES AND STORIES.*

Messrs. Longmans and Co. have recently issued a goodly array of eleven volumes, being the "Tales and Stories of Miss Elizabeth Sewell." Having on the appearance of former works of the same series exhausted the vocabulary of praise, it only remains to state that what was then written, laudatory as it was to an unusual degree, might with truth be repeated on the present occasion the edition leaves absolutely nothing to be desired.

Books Received for Review.—"Wit and Wisdom of Rev. Sydaey Smith," "Wit and Wisdom of the Earl of Beaconsfield' (London: Longmans, Green and Co.); "Word for Ireland," by T. M. Healy, M.P. (M. H. THE latest novelty that is being sold at Ootacamund and Madras is the Primrose league flannel, in which primroses are said to be most cunningly and beautifully woven. A local paper takes the opportunity of giving a gentle hint to its subscribers by asking them to pay up in order to enable it to invest in a full suit of the material.

It is reported that the postmaster at Myitcho, Burma—a man named Peters—has been discovered to have tampered with his accounts, and that the deficit amounts to over a thousand rupees. This sum is the aggregate of a number of remittances deposited by sepoys and policemen. When an attempt was made to arrest him, Peters ran away, got possession of a razor, and cut his throat. He was, it is said, in receipt of but ten rupees a month. The official responsible for placing so ill-paid a subordinate in such a position ought to be made to refund the money that has disappeared through his agency.

Ir the Government of India is miserly in its expenditure on If the Government of India is miserly in its expenditure on public works, it can dispense gifts with a generous hand. A Blue Book recently published shows that Rs. 10,000 was lent to the Khan of Lalpura, that an allowance of Rs. 10,000 a year was granted to Yakub Khan Torah to stop his claims on the Kashmir Durbar, that Rs. 8,000 were spent on four elephants for Yakub Khan, and that a donation of Rs. 5,000 was given to the Khan of Kandahar. The repurchasing of certain jewels sold by the ex-Nawab Nazim of Bengal cost Rs. 96,358, and the tiffins of the members of the Railway Conference Rs. 400.

REFERRING to the publication in an up-country paper of the correspondence that has passed between Mr. Crole, C.S., and the Madras Government relative to the "Madras Scandals," the Mail says:—"It might be generally assumed that the correspondent is no other than Mr. Crole himself; but he has informed us, and he wishes us to state, not only that such is not the case, but that the correspondence, which is of a confidential and privileged nature, has been published without his sanction or approval. The Pioneer is unintentionally doing Mr. Crole a serious in ury at a very critical period in his career, when he should be peculiarly anxious not to prejudice the powers that be at S nla against him. The whole case is sub judice at the India Office, against nim. Ine whole case is suo judice at the India Office, and any appeal at this juncture to the vox populi of Upper India would be both ill-advised and useless. Mr. Crole has protested by telegraph against the publication by the Pioneer of any other portions of the correspondence. The 'public of Upper India' must try to survive the denial at his instance of the means to 'form their own judgment' on a matter that does not concern them."

SIMLA OR CALCUTTA?

THE news published by the Times this morning that a public meeting was to be immediately held in Calcuttato protest against the annual exodus of the Government. of India to Simla will not, perhaps, very much disturb the equanimity of the India Council at home, with whom, through the Secretary of State, the final settlement of the question must rest. It is a very old grievance which those whose temporary or permanent homes are in the plains are annually encouraged tokeep warm-that by deserting Calcutta in the hot season for the cooler climate of the Himalayas the Government of India loses all touch of healthy public opinion, and relaxes the hold which it ought to have over the peoples it is supposed to take care of. This stock argument hasbeen brought forward year after year for the past twenty years, and it is said that the merchants, tradesmen and lawyers of Calcutta consider it unanswerable. Very likely; for it is no doubt an unfortunate thing for the trade and litigation of any city that a number of its magnates and its wealthy representatives should during the greater portion of the year take their influence and their money away to some other place. The tradesmen of London very naturally object to Royalty being so much in-Scotland and so little here, but they do so for the straightforward reason that trade suffers in consequence—and that business in Regent-street and the-West-end languishes in the absence of the Court, whose presence brings with it the presence of others who spend money. They do not base their arguments against theflight to Balmoral, on the grounds that Her Majesty by going there loses all chance of knowing what public opinion is and weakens her Imperial rule. We are not advocating the exodus to Balmoral or the exodus to-Simla, but we hold that the good people of Calcutta protest too much when they give as the only cause of their indignation at the Government migration to the hillstheir fear that the stability of the Indian Empire may be thereby endangered. There are few beyond the pale of officialdom who will argue that it is wise and politic that for nearly eight months in the year the chief executive Departments of India should take refuge in the seclusion of an inland mountain difficult of access, and the narrow roads to which might be blocked or cut off in some sudden and unexpected manner. But what the agitators in Calcutta want is not merely the abandonment of Simla, but the adoption of Calcutta as the permanent home of the Government of India. In the City of Palaces they would have us believe that healthy European opinion, serving a purpose similar to that of Her Majesty's Opposition in Parliament, is alone to be found - that only there a Viceroy and Governor-General can make himself thoroughly acquainted with the ebb and flow of Native feelings and designs. The very simple answer to that argument is the story of 1857, when Upper India was plotting open rebellion through the soldiery and the Government at Calcutta was reporting to the Government at home that never was India more quiet and contented. It is the fashion in some quarters to say that the thunderbolt of the Mutiny fell suddenly in a clear sky. It did nothing of the sort. Thick clouds of coming darkness had long been gathering; warnings had been given; but official eves, whose gaze did not stretch much further than the horizon of the Calcutta maidan were blind to the coming storm. And, indeed, when the revolt had broken out in the North-West, and report after report of disaster was flashed to the Presidency, the calm obstinacy of ignorance had its evil influence in Calcutta. So much for the advantages to be derived from keeping the heads of the Departments permanently there. Most of the evils urged against the Simla exodus may be admitted without it being necessary to conclude that therefore Calcutta is the one only place in India where the Supreme Government should abide. Before the matter is fully decided it is possible that the larger question of where the political capital of the British Empire in India could most conveniently be placed may crop up. Delhi, Nassick, and other places have been spoken of; but in the meantime, whilst Calcutta is holding its indignation meeting, the railway to the foot of the Simla hills is being pushed on the Public Works Department are busy in enlarging the Government Offices near Peterhoff, and even the members of the Finance Committee are showing no hurry to desert the mountain breezes for the "higher duty" of doing their work in the plains. Calcutta, we fear, must wait.

THE BEGINNINGS OF UNION .--There was a novel scene at the mass meeting at Ulubaria, which must have raised high hopes in the minds of many of those present. A large number of Hindus and Mahomedans joined hands together, and sang a song, the first few lines of which ran as follows:—"We thousand men have bound our minds in one cord. We thousand men have dedicated our life to one work. Let trials and difficulties come, let the wind of destruction blow, but we shall remain dauntless; even if we die, we shall not allow the strong bond that unites us to sever." Who will after this say that the Mahomedans have no sympathy with the political aspirations of the Hindus?—Indian Mirror.

"VOICE OF INDIA."

A MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing monthly (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian veeple.

ing between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian recople.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men destrous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS.

W. THORNHILL & CO., Sole Agents.

The Reputation of the "DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS," originally introduced into England by W. THORNHILL and CO., is now permanently established. The success of their enterprise has surpassed their most sanguine expectations. "DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS" afford the only instance hitherto attained of the absolutely perfect representation of the real diamon is by artificial means. These remarkable stones, by their purity and brilliancy, support comparison with diamonds of the first water, and are undistinguishable therefrom. They are infinitely superior in every "espect to real diamonds of inferior quality. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS were exposed side by side with real diamonds of great value in the Paris Exhibition, 1878, and were awarded a Prize Medal and the highest recompense awarded to imitations. They tracted universal attention and admiration, and forthwith became much in vogue with the grande monde and cilte of society. They are now worn at the Court balls, and upon all occasions in London, Paris, and St. Petersburg. They are invaluable for intermixing with and replacing parures and other costly diamond ornaments. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS can be worn at all times, even by day-light, with confidence and absolute security. They possess the penetrating brilliancy and lustre poculiar to real diamonds, and the concessionaires guarantee the surprise and pleasure of purchasers. The perfection thus attained is the result of investigations and experiments extending over two generations. The cost, nevertheless, of the DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS is about 1-300th that of real diamonds.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE. ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

'The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette' has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures, for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

ing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Hustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" feely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marino bureaux of the Freu3h, Russian, and other Government-, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opini in in Eng'and regarding Military affairs.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 19, 1886.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

The overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 29th June; from Allahabad to the 26th June; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 25th June.

It is probable that Sir Charles Bernard will shortly visit the Chindwin Valley on a tour of inspection. He then goes to Mandalay, and afterwards to Bhamo.

The two military police battalions required for service in Burma have now been completed, but volunteering from the army is still to be permitted for the Burma district police.

THE MYMSAING PRINCE has been attempting to escape. The dacoits made a feint attack on the west in order that the Prince might escape on the east side. News of the attempt, however, reached the commanding officer, and he took measures to frustrate the Prince's plans. Severe fighting ensued. Captain Wilbraham, of the Somerset Regiment, was severely wounded, a corporal was killed, and eight soldiers and sepoys wounded.

Major Gordon, 2nd Bengal Lancers, has attacked the dacoit chief Boh Shway, who occupied a strong position near Mapeh. The position was carried with a loss of three men of the Liverpool Regiment and three Sepoys. Lieutenant L. Williams and twenty-six soldiers were wounded.

A REPORT comes from Mandalay that another agent of the Bombay-Burma Trading Company has been assassinated.

THE British India steamer Arcot struck on a reef off Colachel. The captain made all steam possible for Colombo, where the vessel was beached, to prevent her from sinking.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the extension of the North-Western Railway from the Bunder station at Karachi to Kiamari, so as to bring into direct communication all the new wharves and export sheds which are now under construction by the Karachi Port Trust.

THERE is a rumour that Jam Ali Khan, the eldest son of the Jam of Las Beyla, in south-west Beluchistan, has rebelled against his father, and has raised an army to fight him. Troops from the Karachi District may have to be sent against him.

Mr. Townsend, the engineer in charge of the petroleum borings near Sibi, is now at Simla consulting with the Public Works authorities regarding the development of the oil springs. These seem to promise well; but deeper borings are needed involving further outlay. The Government will now have to decide whether operations shall be continued.

SEVERAL engineers and upper subordinates have been transerred on loan from the Jhan-si-Manickpore Railway te the Indian Midland Railway Company, and that every effort is being made to complete a length of 186 miles before the end of next year.

THE railway from Kutni to the Umeriah coal-fields has been completed. Engines now run to Umeriah, and the line will be opened for traffic next month.

Capital having to be borrowed to enable the Bombay Municipal Corporation to carry out the Tansa Water Works, the Government has framed a Bill to empower the Corporation to raise a larger revenue from town-duties.

THE Bombay Government have framed a Bill for vesting the port of Karachi in a trust.

At the meeting of the Bombay Corporation on Wednesday, Captain Morland was unanimously elected chairman of that body in place of Dr. Cook, who resigned his office on his departure to England.

THE Government have offered a new site for the Bombay Municipal buildings in the circle opposite the Sailors' Home. The Municipal Commissioner has written back to Government asking whether they were prepared to grant the land at the same rate at which they had agreed to give the original site opposite the G.I.P. Railway Terminus.

SIR FRANK H. SOUTER has been appointed to be a member of the Bombay Municipal Corporation. The vacancy was caused by the resignation of Mr. Harold R. King.

THE Secretary of State has ordered that the Madras Board of Revenue is to be reconstituted, and that the members are to be increased from three to four.

THE Anthropological Society of Bombay promise to be a great success. At the second ordinary meeting at the Town Hall on Wednesday, Mr. E. Tyrrell-Leith, the president, gave a very gratifying account of its prospects.

THE new regulation regarding military furlough will shortly be issued, under which officers who vacate the command of Native regiments, after their term of command, will be allowed to remain in England on £700 per annum to complete their time for off-reckonings.

The eldest son of the Ameer of Kabul is said to have been betrothed to the daughter of the Governor of Farah.

THE Afghan Boundary Commission are still at Khamiah. The latest report regarding them is that they are all well.

COLONEL CHAPMAN will leave Bombay in the mail steamer of the 20th July, going direct to Marseilles, and thence to Homburg for a course of special treatment. If Colonel Lockhart has not returned by that time, Colonel Gatacre will officiate as Quarter master-General.

THE weather reports from the tea districts are generally favourable. At Chittagong, however, the late very heavy rain has done some damage, and in Kangra and Kumaon several gardens have suffered severely from hailstorms.

LIEUTENANT CHURCHILL, of the Scots Fusiliers, who was recently wounded at Toundwingyee, is seriously ill.

THE SUCCESSOR to Colonel Ketchen as Superintendent of the Madras Gunpowder Factory, will not be Captain G. M. Moore, Mr. Grant-Duff's military secretary, but Major C. A. Empson, at present commanding 5-1 R.A.

Mr. D. Barbour, Financial Secretary to the Government of India, is about to take long furlough.

Mr. G. A. Sala, in a private letter, states that he is still bent upon visiting India early next cold season.

MR. H. B. WEBSTER, C.S., Inspector-General of Police in the North-West Provinces, is retiring from the service.

Mr. Colquinous intends crossing from Mogoung to Upper Assam, so as thoroughly to explore the country.

A SCHEME of railway extension in Upper Burma has been submitted to the Secretary of State, who will grant his sanction provided the expense can be met out of the ordinary Budget estimate. The India Office is not inclined to agree to extraordinary expenditure on the line.

LIEUTENANT ORR, of the Hyderabad Contingent, has been lucky enough to bag in a month a dozen tigers and tigresses, besides a wild buffalo, antelope, and other large

THE death of Dr. Gardner, Civil Surgeon of Bareilly, has to be added to the already long list of those due to polo. The deceased gentleman met with his fatal accident on June the 19th.

THE REV. GEORGE SHIRT, a missionary very well known in Sind, died at Quetta on the 16th June.

It is rumoured that Mr. Howell, Commissioner, Norbudda Division, proceeds on furlough in September, and retires.

Hotes of the Week.

THE correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette with the Afghanistan Boundary Commission, writing of the dim prospects of the speedy return of the members, says:—"We shall soon begin to take root in the soil and be like the tent-pegs at Chahar Shumba, which have already taken root and are sprouting, and will in time, if left alone, form a fine avenue of trees, which will remain as a record of the Mission's long residence in this

In the meantime Russia is pursuing the even tenor of her way towards the East, all Afghanistan Boundary or other Commissions notwithstanding. She has closed Batoum for "purely commercial reasons," and she has sent two "scientific missions" into Asia Minor, one of which will carry out its researches in the Euphrates Valley. "It's as good as a play," as the saying is, this quiet pursuit of scientific knowledge by Russia, but the ending of the play may be other than serio-comic for England. Russian "scientific expeditions" ought surely by this time to have some other significance for us who are sitting with folded hands awaiting "the unforeseen.'

"Ir this interest of Russia in Asia Minor develops," says a contemporary who is not disposed to quarrel with her for breaking treaties (it being, as the nations know, her custom to do so), "our protectorate will be imperilled, and at no distant date England will have to decide once and for all time whether she will place the Euphrates Valley under her own influence by supporting the construction of the railway so long and so courageously advocated by Sir William Andrew from opposite Cyprus to the Persian Gulf, or whether she will allow the region to pass under the control of Russia." She may have to allow it whether she likes it or not. Whilst England is meditating Russia is marching.

THE veteran engineer who has made so long and stubborn a fight for the completion of strategic railways to check the advance of Russia towards India thinks that Batoum may become a future basis of operations against our power there. Sir William Andrew's warnings have met the fate of those of Cassandra hitherto; but, nothing daunted, he continues to advise, and has sent us a reprint from the Times of some of his letters which appeared in that journal during the last few years on this important matter. One question he asks, "Is Russia to construct railways and hurry on her troops to the frontier and we do nothing?" remains yet to be answered. Unfortunately the answer may be given too late to be of service.

THE storm-clouds are gathering in the East, and there are political weather prophets who say that before another summer comes the standards of Russia will be advancing towards the minarets of Stamboul.

Home economists who complain of the heaviness of military expenditure in India are not perhaps aware of the close scrutiny which is made by the Accountant-Generals there into all matters which involve the paying out of money. It is all very well for hostile critics to declare that lacs upon lacs of rupees are annually wasted without any benefit to the soldier, but with much burden to the taxpayer. Facts, however, are stubborn things; and here is a fact which should "speak volumes" for the extaken care of, the pounds may be left to take care of themselves.

"The Government of India," so it is written, "has specially sanctioned the issue of one bugle to each of the seven hill depôts, only on the condition that there is no bugler with his bugle at the depôt, and that there is a soldier who is not a bugler, but can blow the bugle."

What greater concession to the spirit of economy can the taxpayer want than this?

THE "hills" not being at present in favour, or rather, the attention of the public having been somewhat unexpectedly called to them as Budget items, all manner of suggestions are now being made to reduce the expenditure they entail. One of these suggestions is that the permanent staff kept at the seven convalescent depôts should be dispensed with, and that the appointments should be made during the hot season only—and then from a regiment in the vicinity of each depôt, temporary allowances being It is calculated that this will effect a saving of about Rs. 30,000 in the cost of the whole Hill Smitaria. But the saving may be at the expence of efficiency. These Sanitaria are maintained for the benefit of sick and weakly soldiers, and a proper system of supervision and discipline is necessary. Continual changes in the staff responsible for the ordinary routine work will soon bring about confusion. What will be everybody's business will be no-body's, and the soldiors will be the sufferers. The total cost of keeping up the convalescent depôts is a small item in the Budget—but on their being efficiently kept up dopends the saving of many lives, and, therefore, of much money to the State.

A MILITARY contemporary, referring to the meeting held at Calcutta to protest against the annual migration of the Government of India to Simla during the hot weather, notices that "not a word appears to have been said regarding the location of the Military Departments connected with the Commander-in-Chief upon the same inland mountain during the entire year. When the mutiny of 1857 broke out General Anson, the Commander-in-Chief, was at Simla, and Simla was very nearly being cut off altogether from the plains. But the drawback to it is not merely its geographical isolation which keeps off all but those who can afford time and money to go there to ingratiate themselves with the powers that be. A good voice, superior skill in lawn tennis, and being a ladies' favourite, used to help a hero's promotion much more than experience on battlefields or parade grounds. Modest merit did not go to the hills, or if it did the Mutual Admiration Society did not notice it." Our contemporary adds "Perhaps things are better now." Are they?

A CORRESPONDENT with the Afghan Boundary Commission writing from Camp Khamiab, Oxus, on May 30, says:—"When last I took my pen in hand to tell of the doings of the Mission, we had just reached Doulatabad, and were expecting to march daily for the Oxus—the end of the Boundary line where we hoped that, as the Boundary had been demarcated as far as Dugchi, some forty miles from the Oxus, that we might, if the Russians chose, before long find ourselves on the homeward march. We are now encamped on the banks of the Oxus, at present a truly mighty stream, for it is now at its highest point, and we look over a vast expanse of reddish-coloured water dotted here and there with low-lying islands of sand, while the eye is relieved by mountains against the sky-line and still lower with an almost endless line of foliage which fringes either side of the river. In the middle of the trees villages appear at intervals. Here we are at last on the Oxus after two years of wandering, and, with a deep sigh of relief, one would wis' to shut for ever the dreary record of the last two years. Your readers in India can hardly enter into our feelings on the subject; but let any of them try a sojourn for the same period in a wilderness, minus "pegs," novelty, a petticoat, and the thousand and one attractions of life in its humblest form, and they will begin to realise what we have for so long experienced. No words that I know of could express my feelings on the subject. I know when I started I received an assurance from a mest reliable source that we should not be away for more than six month. I was fool enough to received an assurance from a most reliable source that we should taxpayer. Facts, however, are stubborn things; and here is a fact which should "speak volumes" for the excellent way in which the Government of India takes care of the pennies, and we know that when the pennies are

LATEST IN TELLIGENCE.

(BY TELEGRAPH.) (Times Correspondents.) INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JULY 14.

A crowded and enthusiastic meeting was held here to-day for the purpose of protesting against the removal of the Government to the hills. There was a large attendance of representative members of all classes and races. The following resolutions were carried with acclamation :-

"1. That this meeting, having regard to the best interests of the country and having at heart the cause of the good government of India, records an emphatic protest against the location of the Government of India and the various local administrations during the greater or any portion of the year in the hills, away from the recognised seats of government."

from the recognised seats of government."

"2. That this meeting condemns the location of the Indian Administration in the hills upon, among others, the following grounds:—(1) That it involves an unnecessary and wasteful outlay of the public revenues; (2) that it involves a very serious and unnecessary waste of public time, and, therefore, is to the prejudice of the public service and the public interests; (3) that it causes severe hardship to all classes of public servants affected, except those in the highest grades and receiving the highest emoluments; (4) that it reverses the accepted principle upon which Indian salaries are fixed at rates exceptionally high, as compared with the remuneration of public servants in England, the colonies, or any other country; (5) that it rests upon an exaggerated notion of the unsuitability of the Indian climate for Englishmen—a notion contradicted by all the facts of the British occupation, by the experience of contemporaries of of the British occupation, by the experience of contemporaries of the officials who form the headquarter staff, and by the experience of the whole body of Europeans of the non-official community; (6) that it deprives the Indian Legislature of the services of the non-official imports, and for a large part of the services of the Council into a purply official comparison. year converts the Council into a purely official committee—a result not intended or contemplated by the Act establishing the Council; (7) that it removes the Government from touch with Council; (7) that it removes the Government from touch with the communities which it has to govern and makes it less acquainted with the actual practical requirements of the people and country (8) that it denies the principle that Governments should be located at the points where the central authority is most secure and best able in the event of an emergency to move with the greatest readiness the full resources of the State; (9) that it is a custom a parallel to which is furnished by no other country; (10) that it is a practice which has been condemned upon military, political, and administrative grounds by the thighest authorities."

The third and fourth resolutions authorised the chairman to forward the resolutions to the Secretary of State and the Governments of India and Bengal, with a request that measures might be taken to abate and discontinue a practice which had grown to the proportions of a great public grievance; and also authorised him to send copies to the Press and the principal associations in India.

Mr. Yule, Sheriff of Calcutta, who occupied the chair, read a number of letters and telegrams expressing sympathy with the objects of the meeting, received from various associations at Madras, Bombay, Lahore, Allahabad, Benares, Poona, Bangalore and other places throughout India. Among them was a telegram from the clerks of the Government offices at Sim'a, CALGUTTA, JULY 18.

Last Wednesday's meeting called to protest against the annual removal of the Government to the hills was, perhaps, the most crowded ever held in the Calcutta Town Hall. The majority of those present were, of course, Hindoos; but every other race was largely represented. All the principal non-official gentlemen of the city were assembled on the platform and emong the engager. the city were assembled on the platform, and among the speakers were Englishmen, Hindoos, Mahomedans, Armenians, and a Parsee. The most remarkable feature of the meeting was its absolute unanimity; and whether it be or be not successful in attaining its immediate object, it may at least be hoped that it will have the effect predicted by one speaker—Baboo Surendro Nath Bancrjee—of burying in complete oblivion the memory of the bitter controversy of three years ago, and of renewing the bonds of amity and goodwill between Europeans and Natives.

It would be impossible to give even a brief analysis of the Various speeches in the space at my compand. Suffice it to say various speeches in the space at my command. Suffice it to say that they all attained a high degree of excellence, and were for the most part very powerful, but, at the same time, moderate indictments of the existing practice. Speaker after speaker pointed out that while there could be no objection to the Vicercy spending the hot months in the hills, as originally stipulated for by Lord Lawrence, it was an entirely different thing to remove the whole machinery of the Government from among the governed and to fix it for eight months out of twelve at a governed and to fix it for eight months out of twelve at a remote station among a small official clique. Mr. Alexander Wilson, representing the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, mentioned some cases in which the export trade of the country had been seriously injured by the delays attending a reference to Simla for orders. Other speakers alluded to the question of cost and to various other arguments which have been from time to time adduced against the hill-exodus.

The Calcutta Press, European and Native, expresses entire approval of the resolutions passed and cordial sympathy with the objects of the meeting. Two or three up country journals have seen fit to sneer at the movement, describing it as the outcome of envy; but the great majority of the newspapers throughout India are in complete accord on this subject; while the mass of letters and telegrams which has poured in upon the committee proves that the feeling is both deep and universal.

proves that the feeling is both deep and universal.

The real fact is that the Indian public has for years regarded this annually increasing hill-exodus with somewhat cynical indifference, varied by occasional little outbursts of indignation. Now that the pinch of financial pressure is beginning to be severely felt and that the Government is calling upon the public to submit to increased taxation, the public calls upon the Government to abandon a luxury which is at once costly, unnecessary, and hurtful to the best interests of the State. It is probable and hurtful to the best interests of the State. It is probable that the Calcutta meeting will be followed by similar ones at other centres; and it is not likely that the Government will be able to resist public opinion. Indeed, there is already some reason to believe that next year will witness a considerable diminution in the number of officers and departments accompanying the Viceroy

Mr. Hardie, the non-official member, will not take part in the tour, but will return to Calcutta this week. Mr. Elliott, the President, Messrs. After about a fortnight they will proceed to Pach-mare, to confer with the Chief Commissioner of the Central Pro-sinces and then the Property when they will province shout the provinces, and then to Poonah, where they will arrive about the end of August, and where Mr. Ranade, of Bombay, another member, will join them. The next stage is Bombay, where, it is said, Mr. Justice Cunningham will meet his colleagues and discuss certain questions connected with the local High Court. The entire Committee is expected to reassemble in Calcutta about the 1st of November to prepare its report.

His Highness Sivajee-Raj-Holkar was formally installed as Maharajah of Indore by Sir Lepel Griffin, the Governor-General's agent in Central India, on Monday last. After the Viceroy's kharita, or letter of investment, had been read, Sir L. Griffin addressed the Maharajah, ziving him some excellent advice. He accepted as a favourable omen the wise and generous step which the Prince had already taken in abolishing the oppressive tax of 12 per cent. on the salaries of all the servants of the Indore State. The Maharajah, Sir L. Griffin continued, had commenced his rule with every advantage. He had received a good education, and could speak English as well as most Englishmen. He was clever and well-informed. His future was in his own hands; and if he chose wisely, he would be happy in the happiness of his people, and leave behind that good name which was the best immortality of princes. The Maharajah, in reply, expressed gratitude to the Viceroy and Sir L. Griffin, professed his utmost loyalty to the paramount Power, and announced his intention to adopt a conciliatory policy in the administration of the State. He went on to say that, in addition to remitting the 12 per cent. tax on official salaries, he meant to abolish the transit duties on goods passing through his territories. Thereupon Sir L. Griffin rose again, and said that had the Maharajah asked him what was the most wise, gracious, and honourable act to be publicly announced on such an occasion, he would have replied, the removal of those transit duties which so seriously hampered the trade of Central India. He hoped that Gwalior and Bhopal would follow this example; but the honour of the example would ever rest with the Maharajah.

It is believed that the scheme establishing a Legislative Council for the North-West Provinces is now complete, and it is possible that the Council may be inangurated next winter.

The new police levies are to be raised in India, and 1,000 trained policemen are to be sent for service in Upper Burma.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla on Wednesday last, Mr. Ilbert moved for leave to introduce a Bill to declare the law in force in Upper Burma. He said that the object of the Bill was to lay a foundation for the future legal administration of the province. The measure enacts that the country formerly known as British Burma shall be termed Lower Burma and the new territory Upper Burma. It declares the Acts which are to be in force in Upper Burma, making a modification in some of them, and bare the application of other Acts unless [they be specially extended. It also contains an indemnity clause for executive acts done since the occupation of the country.

RANGOON, JULY 13.

The Myentzeen Prince has issued a proclamation offering two thou and rupees for Sir C. Bernard's head.

General White, while riding through Mandalay, accompanied by two officers, has been fired at from a house, and the intending assassin escaped. Owing to threats that Mandalay would be attacked by the Myentzeen Prince's men and that the public buildings would be burnt, the courthouse and other public buildings have been garrisoned by the Hampshire Regiment, and the streets are strongly patrolled at night.

On the 5th inst. Major Skene, advancing from Thonsagwa to attack the Choungwa Princes, two minor Alompra pretenders, suddenly came on the Princes, and captured 136 men, of whom forty had muskets. The Princes escaped.

Colonel Le Mesurier recently marched from Myingyan with a column to attack the rebel position near Notagye, seventeen miles to the south. Another column coming from the southward was

The southern column did not keep time, and while advancing leisurely and in open order was attacked by the enemy. The ammunition mules bolted towards the enemy, who captured several; with the ammunition carried by them. Our men, owing to the want of reserve ammunition, could not continue the fight, and retreated with the loss of their baggage. Colonel Le Mesurier's column, however, carried the rebal position.

Sir C. Bernard and General White have recovered from their recent attacks of illness.

The Nington district continues in a very disturbed state. A steamer on the way from Tounghoo to Nington was delayed five days, the insurgents having rendered the Sittang river impassable by occupying the banks.

The rebel Boh captured by Mr. Colquhoun near Tsagain has given information that the Chinese traders are supplying the insurgents with arms and ammunition, and he declares that plenty can be purchased in Mandalay if it can be heavily paid for. This would explain what has hitherto been a mystery—whence the insurgents have procured their supplies of ammunition.

RANGOON JULY 17. Sir C. Bernard left Mandalay yesterday for the Chindwin district in the Irrawaddy Flotilla steamer Kah-Byoo. He will ascend the river to Kendat. The Chindwin district continues to be very disturbed. It has been decided that the troops shall not advance beyond Kendat until after the rains. The force which occupied Tummoo, on the Upper Chindwin, has been withdrawn, and a large area is thus temporarily abandoned to the insurgents.

Myingyan, on the Irrawaddy, has been attacked, and the bazaar has been burned by the insurgents.

The intelligence from the south-eastern portion of Upper Burna is unsatisfactory, the rebels interrupting for several days the navigation of the Sittang by throwing a barrier across it.

Large bands threaten Ningyan town. The Commissioner of the district recently informed the traders of Ningyan that, owing to the smallness of the force at his disposal and the fact that the troops were being overworked, no men were available to protect the town. He recommended that all valuables should be sent into the fact. into the fort.

The insurgents have unsuccessfully attacked two fortified posts near Ningyan. There has been much desultory fighting in this district, the results being generally unsatisfactory. A force of 100 men of the Prince Albert's (Somersetshire Light Infantry) and Madras Native Infantry unsuccessfully attacked some insurgents holding a stockade. After two hours' fighting our men retired to Ningyan, with the loss of one killed and three wounded. Reinforcements have been despatched to Ningyan, and one of the three regiments daily expected from India will proceed there on its arrival. Ningyan is one of the districts the condition of which was recently favourably described in the official reports.

The Local Government has submitted proposals to the Government of India for a large increase of the Lower Burmese police force. The proposed increase is necessary; lut a thorough reform of the police force is still more urgently required. But for the inefficiency and misconduct of the police Lower Burms. would never have got completely out of hand.

The local newspapers are filled with complaints of outrages committed by the recently enrolled Punjabee policemen, who in their predatory performances seem to rival the dacoits. They have aroused a bitter spirit of hostility among the Burmese, and added a fresh element of danger to the situation. The disorderly conduct of the Punjabees is largely due to the insufficient number of officers sent with them from India. Only one European officer was allowed for each body of 500 men. The corurption and inefficiency of the Burmese police have for many years been a standing source of danger to Burma.

The unsatisfactory manner in which justice is administered in Upper Burma has increased the discontent felt by the Burmes. Upper Burma has increased the discontent left by the Burmes's.

Upper Burma has been proclaimed to be, since the 26th of February last, part of British India. No steps were taken to exclude it from the operation of the general statutes in force in India. The penal code, the criminal procedure code, and other general Acts thus came into force. The Burmese have been r peatedly and emphatically assured that they would enjoy equal rights with other Indian subjects of the Queen-Empress. The provisions of the various statutes which the proclamation brought rights with other indian subjects of the Queen-Empress. The provisions of the various statutes which the proclamation brought into force have, however, been steadily ignored. The Judges, without the right to try prisoners, impose sen'ences which they are not legally empowered to pass. The right of appeal secured by law is denied to prisoners in Upper Burma. If it be necessary to suspend laws it should be done openly and avowedly. A continuance of the present system of violating laws which it is proclaimed are in force is extremely injudicious and injurious. It is rapidly destroying confidence in our tribunals. This is especially the case in Mandalsy, where a large number of educated Burmese reside, who know to what rights they are legally entitled, while they see the laws openly violated.

In a letter from Mandalsy, published in the Times of May 19, I referred to the unsatisfactory manner in which justice is administered at Mandalay. Mr. Miller, assistant manager of the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company, the most important commercial undertaking in Burma, who has recently resided for five months in Mandalay, has written to me stating that from his personal experience he can declare that every paragraph of my letter may safely challenge contradiction. Mr. Miller says that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that the manner in which justice is administered in Mandalsy is the stating that t in Burma, having special sources of information and a deep interest in the pacification of the country, illustrates the evils of the existing system.

The military tactics adopted in Upper Burma cause much discussion. It is generally believed that a serious mistake was committed in splitting our forces into minute detachments and employing these small bodies in harassing jungle fights. In the opinion of those best acquainted with the province, a sufficient force ought to be concentrated to crush the rebel Prince, who is harassing the outskirts of Mandalay. Until the Myentzein Prince is captured or driven from the country there will be no hope of the general pacification of Upper Burma. The Myentzein Prince is accepted by the majority of the Burmese as a representative of the House of Alompra. That he hasbeen allowed to maintain himself in force for several months within a few miles' distance of Mandalay, holding a Court, using the white umbrells, and flying the peacock flag—the symbols of Burmese Royalty—has had a most discurbing and injurious effect on the people, not only of Mandalay, but of the entire country. Every day during which the Myentzein Prince is allowed to keep the field adds to the gravity of the situation. Unless more vigorous military measures be adopted after the rains we may find a majority of the Shans added to our foes in Upper Burma, and at the same time be called on to face renewed and more serious disturbances in Lower Burma. The Myentzein Prince resided in Mandalay for a month after its capture, and could easily have been arrested.

THE order for withdrawing the military from Surat has been contermanded, and the detachment at present there will continue on duty until further orders.

THE RELIGION OF THE PARSEES.—Referring to the dedication THE RELIGION OF THE PARSEES.—Referring to the dedication of a Fire Temple in Bombay for the Bhagarias, and to the wranglings between the High Priests, a Parsee paper says, "We Parsees are said to be progressing in religious as in other matters. But whether the progress is towards Heaven or the other place, it is extremely difficult to say. Scarcely ten per cent. of intelligent Zoroastrians in Bombay understand the tenets of their religion, and scarcely twenty per cent. care to."

In our issue of the 7th instant we warned the Government of In our issue of the 7th instant we warned the Government of India of the probable consequences of allowing the Ruby mines to be worked under French auspices; and we come now to deal with the question as to the best manner of working the mines. We must ever keep in view that the villagers in the Ruby mine district have from time immemorial regarded themselves as having a vested interest in the property. The villagers are said to be tolerably peaceful; and in the present disturbed state of the country it is of the utmost importance that we should not have country it is of the utmost importance that we should not begin our rule by requiring them to forego ancient traditions, or by placing them in undue subjection. We have already drawn attention to the wrongs which must be inflicted upon the miners if the rent now offered to Government is to be wrung out of them; and we would urge Government to delay coming to any agreement with any contractor until they know more of the business and the way it can best be worked without inciting the miners to rebellion. Moreover, the recent proceedings of the Government of India seem strangely at variance with the assurances given by the Viceroy to the Burmese when he was at Mandalay, that their rights and privileges would be assured to them, and that they would enjoy to the full equal rights with the rest of Her Majesty's

The position at present of the Government at Simla is this:
They are practically in treaty for the sale of a certain tract of country which they have never seen, and are allowing to pass out of their possession a valuable business of which they have no knowledge. Meantime, whilst negotiations are going on at Simla with the representative of the dangerous element we have before alluded to, rubies are coming freely into Mandalay, as we understand that stones to the value of two lakhs have lately arrived there from which Government are deriving no revenue. The miners are left practically without a head: they must live, and they naturally sell the stones when and where they can. It will not be easy to rectify this departure from old traditions.

The proper course is obvious. At first work as much as possible through the old channels; allow the old Burmese lessees to continue the business—if necessary on account of Government; issue an order, as the King did, forbidding anybody else to buy rubies; let the old system continue until we gradually gain a knowledge as to the precise nature of the mines and the manner of working them; then improve the system without infinging on the rights of the miners. The system could no doubt be improved for the benefit both of the State and the miners; but to rush headlong into an arrangement with complete strangers to the country to work a business of which we really know nothing is the most unbusiness-like, not to say dangerous, proceeding we ever heard of.

THE HOARDED WEALTH OF INDIA.

The new Bombay paper, the Advocate of India, in an article on this subject, alludes to the Native habit of storing away the jewel-wealth of the country; and gives a rather startling estimate of the amount of jewellery at present hidden in India:—

Never during its existence has India been so rich in jewellery as now. The people are always adding to their stock. Savings from nearly all sources are disposed of in this way, and these savings are being constantly made—often at the expense of clothing, sometimes at the expense of greater necessaries of life. The making and the storing away of wealth in this form is the national peculiarity of this country. It is indulged in by all classes of Natives. Jewellery is regarded as the most stable kind of wealth, and fortunes are never counted without estimating the stack of invalues of the stack of invalues are never counted without estimating the of wealth, and fortunes are never counted without estimating the value of the stock of jewellery. It can always be pledged or disposed of. The market for its sale is never closed and never depressed. The most ignorant Native who wishes to sell a piece of jewellery knows its market value quite well. He can scarcely be cheated. Jewellery forms the greatest factor in matrimony. The most lowly bride has her stridhan, which is often equal in value to five years' income of the bridegroom. There is often a scarcity of clothing; sometimes a scarcity of cooking-pots; generally not a particle of furniture; but nearly always a stock of jewellery. The wife that has no jewellery possesses nothing else; she cannot be robbed. The family that does not possess jewellery is absolutely indigent. One of the greatest boasts of the jewellery owner is that his hoards cannot be taxed. A man may own jewellery valued at a lakh of rupees, and pay no income tax. This is a source of great satisfaction. Jewellery yields no recurring income, but it is prized more than Government paper. If it never increases it never diminishes, is a national saying, common amongst men and women alike. No native marriage, except amongst men and women alike. No native marriage, except amongst the most impoverished, takes place without a transfer of jewellery, and very frequently of new jewellery. So great in value is the new jewellery that is introduced into families by marriage, that we dare not estimate it; the amount would be so fabulous. Truly the investment of wealth in jewellery in India is the greatest and most remarkable institution in the country. Every other investment sinks into insignificance beside it. Under no native prince or rajah of former times has jewellery accumulated as it has accumulated under the British Government in British India. For a century past the sacking of towns has been unknown; the plunder of individuals has been greatly restrained; and wealth in the form individuals has been greatly restrained; and wealth in the form of jewellery has accumulated. Now, if men set store by their wealth in jewellery, and if one man estimates another by his wealth in jewels, is it not manifest that as this kind of wealth increases, and is found to be secure to the possessor, the people who gauge themselves as others gauge them—by the jewel wealth—must be contented, as far as the possession and security of this kind of wealth can content them? We can scarcely imagine the possessor of considerable wealth in jewellery being discontented. There must be political contentment amonyst the class of jewellery-owners; and one-half of the people of India are jewellery-owners. It is only when the day of taking stock of the family jewellery comes round, such as the occasion of a wedding or a great gala days that a when the day of taking stock of the family jewellery comes round, such as the occasion of a wedding or a great gala days that a stranger can form the slightest conception of the amount of wealth in the family in the form of jewellery. Amazement at once strikes him as he is for the first time permitted to see the amount of accumulated wealth. The inventory day is, par excellence, the women's day. Gathered round the iron safes, the cash-boxes, the metallic boxes, the neatly-carved wooden boxes, the delight of the women is observed in their eyes as each pair of golden bracelets, studded with pearls; each pair of diamond, or emerald, or samphire earnings; each posening with large pearls.

of golden bracelets, studded with pearls; each pair of diamond, or emerald, or sapphire earrings; each nosering with large pearls, massive gold chains, and a large number of rings, expensively and even extravagantly gemmed, are handed round the family circle for admiration. And great is the family delight.

The towns of India must be peaceful towns, and the laws of India must be good laws, where jewellery wealth, amounting in value to crores and crores, can be held secure by the meanest of the subjects of the great Empress Victoria. The Government that has permitted this great jewellery wealth to grow into monster proportions, and that has never coveted a single grain of the hoarded gold, as is proved by the history of the wealth itself, is entitled to respectful regard. We cannot in honesty or justice refuse to approve of a Government that has followed out this policy of upholding and maintaining the rights of the people to their jewelled possessions for more than a century. When we single out this item of India's wealth, we do so for a useful purpose, in the interests of the people themselves, when we single out this item of India's wealth, we do so for a useful purpose, in the interests of the people themselves, and not in the interests of Government or of income-tax law-makers. In continuing to hoard and keep unremunerative such vast treasures as are now held in India, the people are unnecessarily impoverishing themselves. The system has had the fullest scope, and has been availed of by the people to the fullest extent, showing their abounding confidence in the national idiosyncrasy. It is now much overdone, and should be moderated. When wealth is hearded in a country in millions and lies un-When wealth is hoarded in a country in millions, and lies unproductive, it attracts the covetous, and is a source of national weakness. It should be profitably employed in the creation and support of industries that may advance the progress of the country. One main cause of the poverty of India is the want of varied employment for its people. As in Ireland—a country whose economic poverty is not dissimilar from that seen around us—two-thirds of the population are agricultural. The burden placed on the soil is much greater than it can bear. There is no prospect of relief from the congestion in India by means of emigration, such as Lord Salisbury is sanguine will bring prosperity and peace to Ireland. The people, whether for good or ill, are inalienably rooted to the soil, and there is also for them a much narrower field for selection. The only hope for the regeneration of the country is the gradual opening up of industrial enterprises. The vast population of India consumes everything produced in the world; it manufactures nothing. The men who wrap their talents in a napkin, and bury them in the ground, should look to it; they are not merely fatuously relinquishing much "unearned increment," but they are deliberately retarding the progress of the country. Nowhere under the sun should the thousand arts of peace prosper to greater When wealth is hoarded in a country in millions, and lies unthe sun should the thousand arts of peace prosper to greater advantage than in India; nowhere are precious opportunities so wantonly neglected.

Dhirendra Nath Pat is securing for himself several columns of vituperation in the Calcutta Native papers. His last letter to the  ${\it Englishman}$  runs thus :-

"The moral of the tale of the husbandman and the snake has been practically illustrated in us. We were dying, morally and physically, socially and politically; the Englishman came and gave us the warm shelter of education, civilisation, and enlightenment. But no sooner had some of us got a little strength than they rushed to bite their benefactor; and, as in the tale, the Englishman rised by the En lishman raised his axe and gave them severe blows. The difference is that, for the fault of some, sufforings and punishments fell upon all. Let not Hindus be called ungrateful. They are fully aware that sham political agitations will not raise their material condition. The people of Bengal have nothing to do with the mist ken movements of those men who have assumed the leadership, or rather consider themselves the leaders of the political and social regeneration of Bengal. These are the men by whose oversocial regeneration of Bengal. These are the men by whose overzealous actions and mistakes a wide gulf has been opened between us and Englishmen. The result was the Defence Association, and Englishmen all over the country stood up like one man to crush us. I do not blame the English for this; I admire them for their strong feelings of nationality.

"I firmly believe that if we agitate on reasonable grounds—if we try to rise step by step, and not to jump at once to the top, we shall find Englishmen our best friends. But our so called deaders, thinking themselves quite up to the mark, made them our enemies, and the result has been defeat at every step. The men for whose mistakes the whole of Bengal is suffering are only about a dozen. These are the men of the Indian Association, and its twin brother the Shadharan Bramho Somaj, the men of too-forward policies both in political and social matters. I have the highest respect for some of these gentlemen, but mistakes are mistakes. The Indian Association is as much the association of the people of Bengal as that of the people of Kamskatka. It can boast of only some two hundred town members on paper, and of these one hundred and fifty do not attend its meetings. Of some twentyfive Committee members, only seven or eight generally attend its meetings, the immediate surroundings of Babu S. N. Banerji. If an association carried on by one man, with his few personal friends and underlings, can be called the association of the people, then call the "Indian Association" the association of the people. Well, you may ask, what is the reason of this miserable state of the society? Are the people backward in political matters? Not at all, but they have no sympathy with the too forward movements of Babu S. N. Banerji and his followers.

The Association is controlled by the whims and caprices of halfa dozen men. If I mistake not, some three years ago an effort was made by Babu Surendra Nath Das; to improve the standard of the Association, but he was defeated in his noble attempt, and left it. I have the highest respect for Babu S. N. Bauerji; I admire him for his ability, eloquence, and energy, and consider him the father of political agitation in our country. It is the who is the direct or indirect founder of almost all the political associations in the country. He has laboured much for us, but, unfortunately, he is ignorant of the capabilities of his countrymen, takes not the least trouble to ascertain where there really a transfer to drog them helping him. the Association, but he was defeated in his noble attempt, and of his countrymen, takes not the least trouble to ascertain where they really stand, and wants to drag them behind him to the level of Englishmen. He is sadly in want of all the qualifications of a political leader; especially of a fixed principle. That is the reason why he is unconsciously doing immense mischief to his countrymen. His followers do not stick to any principle whatever, but that they must be at daggers drawn with Englishmen. Let not these men be considered our leaders or representatives. They are able men, great men, quite like Englishmen, but we are as yet not like them. Our ambition is to serve our gracious Empress side by side with Englishmen, to fight her battles side by side with her brave Britons, and to show to the world that Englishmen kindly took us up, taught us what they knew, and made us their equals. We know how to wait, we are not impatient." are not impatient."

COUNTESS OF DUFFERIN'S FUND.

(Englishman.)

The public at large will be interested to know that, in spite of the opinion one sometimes hears to the effect that, as far as Bengal is concerned, the Countess of Dufferin's Medical Aid Fund is unnecessary, the steps taken by the local branch have entirely disproved that view. We noticed about two months ago that a female dispensary under the auspices of the Lady Dufferin Fund was being opened in Calcutta, and it will be a matter of interest to our readers to see that, in the short space of time which has clapsed since then, the great necessity of such an institution in Calcutta has been conclusively proved. On the 8th of April the dispensary opened with one patient, and from that day to this the attendance has been steadily rising to 80 per diem. During the three weeks of April the attendance was 555, and in the month of May it was 1,484, while time promises a still more rapid increase in the number of poor women who seek assistance rapid increase in the number of poor women who seek assistance at the female dispensary. It is interesting to see how soon the class of respectable but impecunious purdah women have learned to appreciate the value of such an institution, which affords them medical relief without in any way causing a relaxation of their custom of seclusion. A separate entrance is set aside for women who do not throw off the purdah, and by attending between nine and ten in the morning they can have separate attendance. The success of the dispensary has so far surpassed expectations that it is already considered necessary to increase the staff, and consequently also the supplies of drugs and other necessaries will need enlarging. Now that the utility of the institution has been proved by the great and increasing application for medical aid, would it not behave the public-spirited of Calcutta to come forward with material assistance? It is well known that the sum collected towards the Fund in Bengal is but a small drop in the great ocean of demand for assistance in all corners of the province, and, in spite of the famed liberality of Calcutta, hardly any of the wealthy gentlemen of the Native community have come forward handsomely in aid of the good cause. In looking through the long list of the committees we hardly find anything but a few paltry rupees against the Native names in the subscription list. Let the wealthy men of Calcutta follow the example of the charitablespiritof Bombay, which many years before the idea of the Dufferin Fund was conceived, founded a female dispensary, well Dufferin Fund was conceived, founded a female dispensery, wendered and supported by the Municipality. May we not hope to find the Calcutta Municipality supporting the female dispensary here by a grant, and will not some of the wealthy magnates of Calcutta come forward in aid of the poor women? What has been done so far has been done almost exclusively by the thoughtfulness, efforts, and money of Europeaus, but the moment has come for the Native community to extend a helping hand, and aid in providing for the ever-increasing demands of the sick and the weak. An impression seems to be current that the Countess of Dufferin's Fund amply suffices for the purpose of providing female medical aid for even the well-to-do classes; but this notion is entirely erroneous, and it is to be hoped that when once the wants and needs of this great movement are properly understood, the Native gentry of Bengal will take their proper share in the work of beneficence.

A COLONIAL PHILANTHROPIST.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

India is being flooded just now by circulars from a "Mr. James Wallace," who describes himself as "Secretary of the Sydney Jockey Turf Club." In these circulars "Mr. Wallace" sets forth Jockey Turf Club." In these circulars "Mr. Wallace" sets forth an attractive and alluring prospectus of a race sweep; or, as he prefers calling it—with the fear of the law against sweeps—"the Melbourne Club Consultation." Mr. Wallace is apparently in possession of an Indian Army List, as he has addressed a number of his circulars to Native officers of various regiments. "The Melbourne Cup Consultation" consists of 1,876 prizes of different values, the highest being £8,000, and the lowest £10. While he was about it, Mr. Wallace might as well have made the number of the prizes correspond with the present year of grace. His reason for stopping short of that by ten is inscrutable. It could not possibly have made any difference to him offering ten more prizes; and by doing so he might to him offering ten more prizes; and by doing so he might have enhanced his chances of getting a few more of the gullib'e public to entrust their sovereigns to him. "Mr. Wallace" is public to entrust their sovereigns to him. "Mr. Wallace" is possibly a philanthropist. Most secretaries of sweeps deduct 10 per cent. of the amount subscribed for "expenses and race stand." He not only does nothing of the sort, but is apparently prepared to make good the amount of the prizes; even if the total subscription fall short of the £50,000 offered in prizes. Unfortunately, we fear that another term than that of philanthropist may more accurately describe "Mr. Wallace." Last year certain inquiries were set afoot by the Indian Press as to the character of the "Melbourne Cup Consultation" and Mr. Wallace's position and integrity. If we recollect correctly, the Chief Police Officer of Sydney reported that there was no such individual as "Mr. James Wallace, Box 784, G.P.O., Sydney," and discredited the idea of such a sweep emanating under the auspices of the Sydney Jockey Club. Mr. Wallace's venture last year was, however, so successful as to induce him once more to go to the expense of printing fresh as to induce him once more to go to the expense of printing fresh circulars, despatching them in shoals to India, and paying the postage on them. Mr. Wallace's own words-to quote from his circular—are, "in consequence of the success and general satisfaction expressed by the public in the Australian Colonies and India, the number of prizes are to be increased from 1,050 to 1,876." He naïvely adds that "intending subscribers should apply early, as a great many applications from India for tickets in last year's Melbourne Cup were too late, and the money had to be refunded." Those confiding subscribers in India who sent their sovereigns too late and had their money refunded to them would confer a public benefit by sending their names to us in confidence. We do not anticipate being overburdened on this score.

ARMING THE INDIAN ARMY.

(Bombay Gazette.)

It is difficult to realise that hardly twelve months since we were straining every nerve to put our army into fighting con-dition. Money was spent like water. Hundreds of thousands, indeed millions, of pounds were wasted. At any cost it was resolved to perfect the army as a war machine and to strengthen our frontier defences. The Russian scare, however, was quickly forgotten. Our troops still retain their old weapons, and, with something like 30,000 men in Burma, the garrison of India is considerably machine their like was the statement of ably weaker now than it was a year ago. When we think of a possible attack money is lavished on every side, and a few months after, the fever having passed away, the Government relapse into their old casual way of trusting that time will set things straight. The military authorities, of course, speak out, but they are snubbed for their pains, and we should like to hear what Sir Frederick Roherts out here and Sir Donald Stewart at home have to say on the subject. It is impossible that this easy happy-go-lucky way of waiting till the storm bursts can be allowed to continue. Periodic famine: occur on an average once in ten years or so, and yet a Famine Fund is now regarded as absolutely necessary to the salvation of the country. No statesman, however, has ever tried to introduce a Military Fund, and as a result we have the most trying fluctuations in taxation. If, after the Famine Fund model, a little money was set aside yearly to furnish the Army with rifles and guns, it would be a profitable investment for India. Why, we would ask, should the Indian Army, which has twenty times more prospect of seeing service, be always supplied after the Home Army? And why should Inda receive guns that have been discarded at home? Surely the enterprising firms which are always prepared to furnish potentates in Theebaw's position with whole batteries of excellent guns would be ready to do the same for the Indian Government? The British people have of late years become so scientific that they are afraid to build ships lest better methods and new inventions may be discovered, and they waste large sums of money rather than introduce a gun or a rifle quickly, and now as a result, just as a new rife has been fixed upon, the Continental nations are pre-paring to arm with magazine rifles. As Indian taxpayers have to bear the cost it is full time for the Government of India to insist upon arming their soldiers through direct contracts with the great firms in England, instead of dancing attendance on the War Office, and finally accepting what is not wanted at home. If war breaks out in Eastern Europe—and sooner or later war is inevitable—India will probably have to furnish a contingent of inevitable—India will probably have to furnish a contingent of 30,000 or 40,000 men, and a curious equipment of guns and rifles the contingent would carry with them. But the Government of India will take no action unless pressure be brought to bear upon them by the Press in England, and as far as possible by the English Press out here. The Native journals and the Native agitators habitually decry all and every item of expenditure in the army. But the prompt rearming of the artillery and infantry is nevertheless the most important question of the day in India. The income-tax has been imposed in the name of increased military expenditure, and those who nav it have a right to know that their expenditure, and those who pay it have a right to know that their money is being properly used.

BENGAL.

Business in Calcutta generally is in a very dull and depressed state, and the share market is almost lifeless, only two or three transactions being daily recorded. Shares in any quantity cannot be sold, even at any price. Speculation is dead, and the brokers, like Othello, complain that their occupation is gone. Things, no INEO Utnello, complain that their occupation is gone. Things, no doubt, will improve sooner or later; they cannot well be worse, and that is about the only grain of comfort that can be offered.

JEWISH MUNIFICENCE.—On a representation being made to the late Mr. E. D. J. Ezra as to the difficulties which were being experienced by the poor and suffering Jews in Calcutta in the matter of servants, food, &c., while under treatment at the public hospitals, he at once consented to found a hospital. Mrs. Ezra has now come forward to carry out this protect and a hospital is has now come forward to carry out this project, and a hospital is to be built in the compound of the Medical College Hospital. Mrs. Ezra also proposes to endow the hospital with an invested capital sufficient to meet all charges on account of the special servants to be retained for the inmates of the hospital, which will be under the direct supervision of the medical officers attached to the College Hospital. This beneficent offer has been accepted by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. The institution is to be designated the "Ezra Hospital," and His Honor has consented to lay the foundation-stone of the building during his approaching visit to Calcutta.

MADRAS.

THE Madras Mail is glad to hear that the Acting President of the local municipality will propose at the next meeting of the Commissioners, early next month, that, as a mark of respect for the memory of the late Sir Charles Trevelyan, a former Governor of Madras, the Park for which the town is indebted to his initiative, and which is now known as the "People's Park," shall, with the sanction of Government, be henceforth called the "Trevelyan Park," and that a memorial to bear a tablet commemorating the crigin of the Park be erected in the Park.

MADRAS will soon be provided with a new Town Hall, which will be one of the architectural features of the town. The hall will be one of the architectural features of the town. The hall is now in course of erection at the southern side of the People's Park, from designs, and under the personal directions of Mr. R. F. Chisholm, that is to have a concert-room capable of seating 650 persons, and a great hall capable of seating 600 persons, and affording standing room for 2,000 persons more. The name of the architect is sufficient assurance that a very handsome building is in hand. The total cost of this hall is estimated at Rs. 1,75,000, and up to date Rs. 80,627 have been subscribed (of which Rs. 59,520 have been paid), and Rs. 49,150 have been expended.

BOMBAY.

TREASURE TROVE.—The Poona Observer hears that in an obscure village of Sholapore, in the taluka of Sangola, an immense amount of money, jewellery, copperware, carries and other valualles, including some very ancient manuscripts, have been discovered by a few labourers whilst irrigating a long-neglected portion of the land. The report goes on further to state that "many of the local archæologists can assign no date to the inhuming of this discovery, and the most astonishing thing is to find that the clothes (silk) are in a perfect state of newness. The chest in which these valuables were discovered is made of beaten copper soldered at the top and bottom with brass, and appears to be the workmanship of some bygone Tubal Cain. The box, it is said, is shaped like a cylinder, with something like an inscription in Sanscrit indicating a legacy, and the coin is of a very irregular, and in some cases cubical shape. Should this be an actual discovery, with what unbounded interest would the thirsty antiquarians of India end: avour to decipher the inscription and tell the date and inscriptions on the coins."

NATIVE PRESS.

Indian Parliamentary Aspirations.—We have already written that it is quite incumbent on us to send delegates to England at the present juncture. Two of our countrymen are trying to woo and win two English constituencies. They are accepted as suitors, and it romains to be seen whether they succeed in their suitors, and it romains to be seen whether they succeed in their love-suit. In this connection we have a duty to perform. On the last occasion a patriotic Bengal gentleman paid Rs. 5,000 to defray the election expenses of Mr. Ghose. All India must unite in raising up a sufficient amount to defray the election expenses of Messrs. Dadabhoi and Lal Mohun Ghose. During the lifetime of Mr. Fawcett grateful India contributed on more than one occasion her share towards defraying the election expenses of the late blind member for Hackney. We must on more than one occasion her share towards defraying the election expenses of the late blind member for Hackney. We must now assist our two countrymen in the struggle in which they are to fight against fearful odds. Let some public-spirited Bombay gentlemen come forward to give their helping hand to his truly national concern. There are many men who will contribute that Dufferin's Fund, but there are very few men who will give their assistance to such national concerns.—Dnyan Prakash.

INDIAN DELEGATES TO ENGLAND AT THE NEXT ELECTION.—We notice that several of our contemporaries are urging our political associations to bestir thems: lves in view of the forthcoming General Elections and repeat the experiment of last year by sending delegates to plead India's cause once more before British constituents. We have thought over the question ourselves carefully, and having regard to the state of affiairs in England just at present, it seems to us that the best course would be to do nothing this time. The circumstances of the last election were different from the circumstances of the one to come. Public mind is now entirely engrossed by the Irish question, and John Bull thinks of nothing else but Ireland and Home Rule. No one will hear about India in this state of public feeling and disquiet about the Irish puzzle. Further, our friends are all divided among themselves. ing and disquiet about the Irish puzzle. Further, our friends are all divided among themselves. The men who helped the delegates all divided among themselves. The men who helped the delegates on last year are now in a distracted state of mind, for they are anxiously thinking of how to get out of this Irish difficulty. Friends in England do not hold out any hope of India being heard this time from British platforms. S) it is well to let alone now and organise our forces for action in future.—Indu Prakash.

THE PARSEES AND THE SHAH OF PERSIA.—We have been requested by the Consul General of Persia to state that the rumour which has gained ground amongst the Parsees that they have been invited by H.I.M. the Shah of Persia to migrate to Persia is without foundation. He have the consult is anxious to explain that at out foundation. H.E. the Consul is anxious to explain that at the recent party held at his residence he had only conveyed to the Parsees a message from the Shab, assuring the former of the Shah's good-will towards that body, and the speech which the Consul delivered on the occasion was by no means an invitation to the Parsees to go in a body to Persia.—Rast Goftar.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE political questions in connection with the administration of the Punjab Frontier Force have been settled between the military authorities, the Punjab Government, and the Foreign Depart-ment, and the papers are now before the Governor-General in Council. Orders regarding the transfer of the Force to the Com-mander-in-Chief will probably issue in the course of a fortnight. The Adjutant General has issued an important circular, bearing upon the stamp of recruits enlisted in regiments which are partly compcs d of Punjahi Mahommedans. There are several districts in which good men of this class can be obtained, but which are seldom visited by recruiting parties. It is commonly believed that good Punjabi Mahommedans are only to be had in the Jhelum and Rawalpindi districts; whereas it is known that excellent soldiers can be made out of the Rajput Mahommedans of the Solutions and Sialkot districts, the Gujranwalla Jats, and men of the same class living in the Luhore, Amritsar, and other districts of the Punjab. All of these classes were freely enlisted by the Sikhs, and were highly esteemed by them. The circular deprecates the want of care in some regiments to exclude men of the non-fighting classes, who, from their daily labour, are often muscular and fine-looking ren.

It is notified that the Commander-in-Chief has read with much interest the "First Annual Report of the National Association Interest the "First Annual Report of the National Association for the Employment of Reserve and Discharged Soldiers," which shows that much has been done to further the purposes of the association, and hopes that the army in India will assist the association in its laudable endeavours to provide employment for soldiers who have done good service for their country.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

GRAHAM'S FIELD FORCE AT SUAKIN.*

Major, then Captain, de Cosson, was despatched to Egypt in February of last year, to join the Suakin force under Sir G. Graham. He had the inestimable advantage of possessing a certain knowledge of the country, derived from a visit which he had paid to Egypt, in search of sport, some twelve years previously. In the course of this trip he had traversed the entire vicinity of Suakin, then comprising villages "where milk and sheep were readily offered to the passing stranger," but which now it would be certain death for an Englishman to approach alone. "Such," adds the Major (pp. 248-49), "has been the result of only three years of uncertain policy; and famine and murder now stalk hand-in-hand through this country where, as a boy of twenty-two, I travelled so gaily, thinking myself quite secure in the possession of a single rifle and revolver."

On the strength of the fact that, as a traveller, he must have provided himself with water, and "ought to be possessed of just that practical knowledge of the country which was required," our author was entrusted with the very important and highly responsible duty of organising a "water train" distinct from the ordinary Commissariat and Transport service. In other words, the existence of the army, when away from its base, Suakin, was placed in his hands. This kept his services constantly in requisition whenever a move was to be made, and detained him at the front so long as it lasted. He is, therefore in a posi-

Suakin, was placed in his hands. This kept his services constantly in requisition whenever a move was to be made, and detained him at the front so long as it lasted. He is, therefore, in a position to speak with the double authority of a staff-officer on the spot, and of a man previously familiar with the ground, respecting the affair at Hasheen, and the disastrous massacre of March 22, 1885, at the zareba commonly called McNeill's, but which the writer names Tofrek. His observations on both are very pertinent; nor is it difficult to perceive his opinion how the blame for the scaudalous errors which led up to the slaughter at the zareba should be apportioned. The ground has been well trodden, and the question threshed out. That the force sent out had no artillery (p. 195) and scarce any cavalry (being thus deficient in the two arms most likely to be efficacious against Arabs) every one knows; that no captive balloon was provided is no secret; but we do not remember having previously met with the striking indication contained at p. 141, how useful one would have been. "At the very moment a message reached the vessel† to say we "At the very moment a message reached the vesselt to say we had commenced building the zareba with no enemy in view, the sailors at the masthead could see the whole plain around us swarming with camel-men.

There seems little doubt, that on this deplorable occasion, we did (though at the cost of 323 officers and men, and of two-thirds of our came!s)\(^+\) break, in eighteen minutes, the backbone of Osman Digma's force; but that this might have been done with comparatively little loss is no less clear.

Instances of the blundering, and of the entire loss of head, which will make this brief and resultless campaign for ever notorious, abound; the errors to which they led are plainly enough pointed out, and with a commendable absence of personality. That the camp at Suakin was night after night entered, and "a force of nearly 11.000 men constantly deprived of sleep enough pointed out, and with a commendable absence of personality. That the camp at Suakin was night after night entered, and "a force of nearly 11,000 men constantly deprived of sleep for nine nights in succession . . . by probably not more than 300 or 400 Arabs" (p. 70), whom a simple hedge of cut mimosa would have kept at bay (p. 71) that thirty Arabs should cause us (p. 233) to throw away 3,217 cartridges and 36 shells, without (so far as is known) killing one of them; such facts are little more than average samples of this ill-conceived, ill-executed, expedition. The laxity which had been allowed to creep into the force showed itself in a manner most lamentable, and beyond measure disgraceful to British arms. We refer, we need hardly say, to the murder, in cold blood, of wounded Arabs, even officers being accused of being concerned in the crime. This Major De Cosson sternly reprobates; and so much did it weigh on his mind being accused of being concerned in the crime. This Major De Cosson sternly reprobates; and so much did it weigh on his mind that he rightly felt it a duty (p. 217-18) to represent the matter personally to the Commander in-Chief: by whom orders to stop so revolting a practice were, of course, at once issued (p. 223).

By way of bitter, though unconscious, satire on this brutality, to which little notice seems to have been vouchsafed, we read that General Wolseley's arrival caused great commotion regarding the personal appearance of individuals, the present Adjutant-General, being credited with a predilection for the use of the razor! about as rational as that entertained by the late Sir

Major De Cosson seems to have observed accurately whatever Major De Cosson seems to have observed accurately whatever came under his notice; and the obvious absence of bias in the manner of his narrating it lends the greater weight to his remarks. He has much that is instructive to say regarding the want of training in marksmanship,* the objectionable form of the bayonets in use,† cartridges,‡ and arms generally,§ which can hardly fail to attract notice. Nor should the authorities, on whom the efficiency of our army depends, forget the importance of details. As our author acutely and justly remarks, "though a battle may last for hours, there is generally some one five minutes in the day when the scale is turned for victory or defeat . . . the smallest detail, that can prevent an accident at a critical moment, is of vital importance to the welfare of an defeat . . . the smallest detail, that can prevent an accusent at a critical moment, is of vital importance to the welfare of an army "(p. 191). His appreciation of the results and lessons of the campaign, too, is very instructive (p. 318).

The volume contains many amusing anecdotes, and an occasional lively sally, such as the following description of a "batman" by a soldier-servant:—"Why, sir, he has nothing to do: he does it all day, and has not finished it when he goes to held at night!"

bed at night!"

We have read this book with profit as well as with pleasure: and no careful reader can fail to derive both from its perusal.

THROUGH THE KALAHARI DESERT. ||

Mr. Farini has long been known in this country as a caterer for the public, but this is, we believe, his first essay with the pen, a circumstance to which the volume oxes the simplicity and unpretentiousness which are its charm and attraction. It happened thus: Farini, having heard of the grass-covered plains happened thus: Farini, having heard of the grass-covered plains and fertile forests teeming with game of all sorts to be found in Kalahari, in Central Africa, and being enticed by the seduction of a "find" of diamonds, bethought him that he would recover his health (!) by undertaking a journey to this almost unknown region. So, accompanied by Lulu, the infantile gymnast of Aquarium celebrity, now developed into a professional portrait painter and photographer in America, he started on his rambles. The results are embodied in one of the most readable tales of adventure which we can call to mind. Of course travellers' exaggerations are jotted about here and there; as, for instance, the assertion (p. 72) that in one district no rain has ever been known to fall; or the statement (p. 355) that natives when on gluttony intent are wont to consume at least thirty pounds of meat each during the night (!). To believe all this needs a considermeat each during the night (!). To believe all this needs a considerable stock of faith. But making allowance for such strains upon our senses, there is much to interest and little less to instruct the reader who has ears to hear. Froude's Boers are a byword, reader who has ears to hear. Froude's Boers are a byword, owing to the glowing colours which he gives of the race, which in that most charming of books, "Oceana"—the romantic imaginings of a powerful writer — are depicted as the most lovable and ill-used of mortals "who live and move and have their being" on this mundane sphere. What is Mr. Farini's testimony? Just this: that they are the greatest scoundrels on the face of the earth—men who, under the guise of piety and sanctimoniousness, will commit offences against propriety and morality such as would make Exeter Hall aghast with shame and astonishment; men who attend Communion Service, and yet are so addicted to would make Exeter Hall aghast with sname and astonishment; men who attend Communion Service, and yet are so addicted to a violation of the eighth commandment that shopkeepers have to watch their customers as they come out of church in order that the amount purloined may be included in the Bill! In brief, the Boer is "a non-progressive, selfish, illiterate, Englishhating hypocrite." We commend this to Mr. Froude's notice when he issues another edition of his experiences in the Antipodes.

It has from time immemorial been the notion that Kalahari is a barren wilderness; Mr. Farini's journey completely disproves this idea. It is true that there are at places perfect seas of sand interspersed with boulders of rock, the passage of which is difficult and dangerous, while now and again the lack of water is a serious and well-nigh insuperable bar to cultivation; but it must be a royalcoled that the land is cursed with an indulant set of not be overlooked that the land is cursed with an indolent set of inhabitants, to whom labour is so distasteful that they will not even take the trouble to milk a cow though themselves dying with thirst, while to plant seed in order in the fulness of time to reep a harvest is a proceeding not within the pale of "practical politics" in the land of the Africandars. It may well be imagined, then, that when rain does fall no provision is made for the morrow, no attempt is forthcoming to store the precious liquid, which at intervals pours down as if the very skies would drop. This improvidence is, of course, fatal in its results. "Eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow you die," seems the motto of this "indolence stricken" land.

ation at the hands of the faculty. When a bushman gets a wound from the fangs of a venomous reptile he coolly draws from his wallet some dried poison-sacs of an equally deadly nature, and reducing them to a powder pricks the part near the punc-and reducing them to a powder pricks the part near the punc-ture and rubs the virus powder into the skin. This done he lays quietly down to rest, falls into a stupor which last some hours, and wakes to repeat the dose. At first the swelling increases rapidly, but after a time it begins to subside, and at the expi-ration of four days the patient is ready for another snake-bite should the chance afresh befall him. Again and again did Mr. Farini witness the effects of this simple remedy which in the Farini witness the effects of this simple remedy, which, in the interests of humanity, some professor of the art of healing—or killing—might with advantage investigate. In Europe all the faculty is at sea on the point of poisonous reptiles and their bites, and yet in Central Africa an untutored bushman can devise a remedy for cures where the greatest intellects of the civilised world have failed and admitted it.

With these few observations we take leave of Mr. Farini, Master "Lulu," and the very interesting account of their doings and wanderings.

SOUTHWARD HO! NOTES OF A TOUR TO AN THROUGH THE STATE OF GEORGIA IN 1885-86.*

Mr. Harley, who gives us (p. 55) to understand that he at one time resided seven years in Georgia (a State as large as England), has devoted this little volume, with an exception presently to be noticed, to the (well-merited) glorification of that State. In the whole North American Union there is probably none to equal, certainly none to excel, it in natural resources of all kinds. To go no further than the book before us, we find (p. 98) an account of the cereal, and (p. 137) of the mineral, products, which gives rise to the ardent wish, that some of our unemployed millions might be transferred to a land so fair, possessing an all but unequalled climate, and of the capabilities of which, while much has been written our nutber assures us (p. 38) that while much has been written, our author assures us (p. 38) that "the half has not been told."

Of course everything is on the vast scale which is familiar to the traveller in the New World. A mountain of fossiliferous iron ore forty miles in length: cereals and cotton produced in quantities per acre elsewhere unheard of, attest the natural wealth of a State which contains less than two, while it might easily accommodate ten, millions of people.

Nor would the present population be the worse for a large admixture of immigrants to leaven the somewhat ill-kneaded mass, consisting of the quondam master and the erewhile slave. Indeed the habits of the white population, outside the principal cities, go far to substantiate the author's anecdote, to the effect, cities, go far to substantiate the author's anecdote, to the effect, that a young lady, stopping in the north-eastern part of the State, not having risen on being called by a coloured servant, "received a peremptory order to get up, 'as the missis wanted one of the sheets for a tablecloth;'" while the black people (emancipated negroes) know (p. 77) the meaning of theft admirably in practice, but taboo the word; "If I ask de Lord to send me chicken, dey don't come; but if I ask Him to send me after dem, den my prayer is heard."

Speaking of ex-slaves ("God's image carved in ebony," as Dr. Guthrie called them), leads us to refer to the author's utterances on slavery, which he, like ourselves, denounces; but we must in on slavery, which he, like ourselves, denounces; but we must in the strongest manner reprobate the language in which (p. 171-72) he, speaking from the depths of his own inner consciousness, all but sneeringly refers to the passages in which Scripture mentions the practice as matter of fact, without directly condemning it.

The tone in which the book is written may be inferred from the above. The author seems never so happy as when giving a slap at "the iniquitous land laws" of England, or when telling slap at "the iniquitous land laws" of England, or when telling us that the Bishop of London has a far larger salary than the Governor of Georgia: the latter statement introduced à propos des bottes in an account of the political constitution of the State, and therefore gratuitously offensive. That St. James and St. Paul are "James" and "Paul," the Countess of Huntingdon an "elect lady," va sans dire.

We were glad to meet with Martin Chuzzlewit's Eden, and to learn (p. 92), on the authority of the railway officials, that "it is as big as New York, but it isn't built up yet!" There is no doubt that the very increase of population from which Great Britain so much suffers is the one thing needed for "building up," and in generally developing the earthly paradise yelept Georgia: and one naturally asks, what class of people does the country want? Only, however, to be met with the reply, that it wants exactly what few emigrants have. "British farmers with British gold would" (we read, p. 96) "be a great blessing to the country; but not British farm labourers, at present, for the coloured labour is best."

is best. The book should have been called "Reflections caused by a Tour," &c. We hear far too much of the—sooth to say, very narrow—opinions of the writer. But plenty of information is given, and clearly given; and, in this respect, the little volume deserves commendation.

MESSES. W. H. ALLEN & Co. have in the press, and will shortly publish, an interesting volume by the well-known and able writer, Captain Lionel J. Trotter, to be entitled, "India under Victoria," which will bring down the history of that country to the present day.

THE "Journal of Indian Art" for July is a marvel of excellent artistic work and cheapness. It contains a splendid portrait in photo-chromo-collotype of Her Majesty, portraits of the Maharajahs of Jeypore and Ulwar, and specimens of the screens in the various Courts at the Exhibition in the Indian Department, besides plates showing the silver raised enamel work of Lucknow, the filagree work of December 2014 the Ridging Theorem 1981 and 1981 work of Dacca, and the Bidri ware from Patna. The perfect way in which these portraits and plates have been produced reflects the highest credit upon the skill and ability of Mr. W. Griggs. The letterpress continues to sustain its interesting character and high literary merit.

Books for Review.—"Susanna Wesley," by Eliza Clarke (W. H. Allen and Co.); "Thomas Grant, First Bishop of Southwark," by Kathleen O'Mears, Second Edition (W. H. Allen and Co.); "The Iliad of Homer," by J. G. Cordery, British Resident at Hyderabad (Kegan Paul, French, and Co.); "Verses Translated and Original," by H. G. Keene (W. H. Allen and Co.).

THE TAXATION OF BETEI-NUT.—A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette suggests betel-nut as a commodity for new taxation, and the Gazette apparently supports the suggestion. The betel-nut is undoubtedly a luxury, though perhaps the only harmless luxury, which is left to the lower classes to enjoy. Taxation of betel-nut will necessarily raise its price, and to that extent lessen the comforts of the poor. But as a species of indirect taxation of a luxury of the people we should prefer it to such taxation as that on salt or grain. The only objections that strike us are that incidence will fall on a comparatively small portion of the commuon salt or grain. The only objections that strike us are that its incidence will fall on a comparatively small portion of the community, and that its yield will not be considerable. A more eligible subject of taxation is to our mind marriage and other costly Like the licenses for tom-toms and other things on ceremonies. which municipalities gain a lot of their revenue, licenses for marriages may give to the State a no inconsiderable amount of revenue. Marriages, whether among rich or poor, are occasions for expenditure with a free hand, and a few rupees charged on such occasions will not be felt as severe a burden as the permanent such occasions will not be felt as severe a builden as the permanent rise in the price of a necessary commodity. It will moreover affectall communities equally. A graduated scale of taxation on expenditure may have a salutary effect in the reduction of extravagance and show. A Bill was introduced in the Bombay Legislature in about 1872 to levy a tax on marriage feasts, but it had, we suppose, to be abandoned in consequence of some opposition. In the present straitened circumstances of the exchequer the experiment may, we venture to think, be retried as a special measure.—Indu Peralash post-mortem withdrawal by the Statesman of the charges which it had made against the late Mr. Miller, of Burdwan, has been made in a fashion which is, to say the least, singular. It is, perhaps, characteristic of a paper in whose view of things nothing looms so largely as an ever-present "ourselves' that its first thought, after having announced the death of the gentleman whom it had wrongly consured was to look after its own justification. it had wrongly censured, was to look after its own justification.

"Although his suit against this journal (the Calcutta paper says) ceases by this sad event, we feel it due to our own character and to the Statesman to say that his deposition in the Police Court, from the minute and circumstantial denial given by him therein to the grave charges made against him in our columns, had convinced us that we had been largely misled, and we feel that it is only right for us to say now what we were but waiting the proper opportunity for saying while Mr. Miller was yet alive." Surely this is not the way in which to set about doing justice to the character of a dead man whom, whatever your motives may have been, you have wronged beyond reparation. Only an overweening vanity—a morbid inability to conceive of anything outside that "ourselves" which holds the Statesman in such slavish subjection—would have led a writer to believe that, in the presence of a fact like Mr. Miller's death, with the wrong done him unrepaired. the minute and circumstantial denial given by him therein to the a fact like Mr. Miller's death, with the wrong done him unrepaired, his own character was of more than secondary importance. Some of our Calcutta contemporaries have dealt with the peculiar notion which the Statesman entertains as to the proper opportunity of withdrawing an accusation which you know to be unjust and unfounded. Six weeks or thereabouts passed between the day on which Mr. Miller, by his deposition in the Police Court, satisfied the Statesman that the charges it had made against him were not true, and the day on which the accident of his death provoked it to confess that it was so satisfied. The contrast between the deliberateness with which it set about the task of clearing Mr. Miller's character and the haste with which it set about the doubtless more congenial task of vindicating its own, is striking, though it may be easily accounted for by the phenomenal egoism which presides over the operations of the Calcutta journal.—

"NOT TOO MUCH INDIAN BUT-INDIAN ENOUGH."

THREE years ago the Times told its readers that "Indian affairs are becoming more and more a topic of general interest in this country, and public opinion is forming itself not only on the main principles, but on some of the details of Indian administration."

This was rather a satisfactory assurance to Indians and Anglo-Indians, although both must have found some difficulty in obtaining any evidence that the assertion was correct. The knowledge which Englishmen at home possessed of India, its peoples, their manners and customs, continued to be as limited as before, and as the knowledge so was the interest felt in these matters.

But with the Indian and Colonial Exhibition knowledge has come in all her plenitude of power. It may be that wisdom still lingers, but that has been the way of wisdom for many ages, and fortunately those who consider it their mission to instruct others do not always wait for her aid. An acquaintance with a thing itself is not always a requirement in one who would talk or write of it. A German evolved a camel from the depths of his own consciousness, and Mr. Frank Whymper lately in Good Words told his disciples in the study of natural history that the Mungoose was a bird given to fight with cobras. A correspondent writes to complain of a London evening paper making him say that Malabar Hill was at Calcutta-but why not? Birnam Wood went to Dunsinane. There is nothing impossible to the imagination of journalists. Why should Grub-street study the geography of Indiaespecially now when, thanks to the Reception Committee of the Exhibition, the "Indians" are here to teach us everything about themselves and their country?

It is not, however, likely that every journalist will be found as apt a scholar as the one who, in the Pall Mall Gazette, told us last week of "Our great Mother at Windsor Palace," or "What the Natives thought of the Queen." This trip of the Natives to Windsor has exercised the Oriental imagery power of more than one writer. It has been said that some of the workmen from the East, whose skill has been admired at the Exhibition, are on temporary furlough from their local jails, but that they are devout and observant persons we know from the statement in one journal that in going over St. George's chapel "the devout Hindoos showed their respect by taking off their turbaus." It is not for us to inform our readers what an Anglo-Indian would do to a devout Hindoo who attempted to show his respect in this way, but we live and learn. And we learn much from the Pall Mall Gazette.

The image of "our Great Mother at Windsor Palace" will live long in the minds of the Natives who were entertained at Windsor Castle a few days ago. The Empress of the British Empire and of all the Indies will be described in many an Indian bazaar and many an African village, and the story of that great day will be handed down to future generations, illuminated by the rich handed down to future generations, illuminated by the r Eastern imagination, and all the wealth of Eastern hyperbole.

By whom this is to be done the writer tells us:

Dr. Tyler introduced me to a dozen of his Indian workmen each of whom was asked his opinion of the Kaisar-i-Hind, and of the great palace. The stout gentleman who directs the silk and carpet weaving (he drives his buggy and pair in Benares, and has sixty shops), the ox-eyed brass-worker from Delhi, with his long black locks arranged like a Hindoo æsthete, both declared that Delhi had no palace like Windsor, and Hussein, on the other side of the court, with true Oriental courtesy, swore the great Empress was "good and beautiful."

Even if the buggy and pair should only have been a hackery and pair, the truth remains. But these delighted and delightful people did not express their feelings in such prosaic language. They spoke, we are told, as follows :-

We are thy children, O mother! Thy pavilions are beautiful for situation; the joy of the whole earth. Thy clothing was not, indeed, of wrought gold nor of brilliant colours. Its hue was sad, as that of a mother mourning for her children. But the raiments of thy servants glowed like the setting sun in the western heavens. when they brought us food, and their movements were as soft and noiseless as those of the spotted panther in the dark jungle. It sent shame to our cheeks when they ministered to our wants at thy bounteous tables. But did not a Royal Prince at thy command-a Prince of dark features and stately presence, the husband of thy daughter—also give to us of sweetmeats from his own hand? Even thy servants are like gods.

Why this dark Prince should have been included amongst the flunkies, whose gorgeousness no doubt impressed the Oriental minds with fitting awe, is explained by a foot note: "Prince Henry of Battenberg helped them to fruit pie."

The language goes on in the same sublime strain, sometimes apparently borrowed from the Hebrew Scriptures, which, it need not be said, are well-known and often quoted in Indian bazaars. "The foolish have said in their hearts 'there is no mother,'" seems like an old friend with a new face, and there are other sayings of this nature. The "mother," we are told, "was not large of stature for the mother of millions," "nor was her voice as thunder;" on the contrary, it was "sweet and low like unto the middle notes of a lute." This will easily be recognised asjust the way Indian jail carpet-weavers speak in their own language of which the modest reporter says he has made "a humble but faithful paraphrase." Let this be accepted as fact, for, says the writer, "reading has not yet taught them the evil of hyberbole."

It would appear that it has not taught the Pall Mall Gazette either.

Correspondence.

MR. CHARLES DUVAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

-The following letter has been addressed by me to the Editor of the Bombay Gazette. As considerable fun has been poked at me by Indian journalists on the head of my supposed genuinely humorous geography, I shall feel indebted to you if you will kindly publish the communication referred to, and oblige Yours faithfully, CHARLES DUVAL

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE BOMBAY GAZETTE."

DEAR SIR,—I am not surprised at your editorial comments on that portion of the Pall Mall Gazette interview with me, in which the writer has managed to "somewhat mix" Calcutta and Malathat portion of the Pall Mall Gazette interview with me, in which the writer has managed to "somewhat mix" Calcutta and Malabar Hill. I should have thought, however, that you would have acquitted me of deliberately stating that Malabar Hill was within four miles of Calcutta. Had you known the close application I have given to the study of Indian geography, and the wear and tear of mind I have suffered in the unravelling of G. I. P., Decca branches, Central ditto, Hyderabad likewise, and East India Railway mysteries, you would not have needed my assurance that I, at least, am not responsible for the P.M. G. error in substituting Calcutta for Bombay. I venture to assume that your journalistic instinct told you how "someone had blundered," and with a chivalry wherein the pen, and not the sword, led the attack, you tried to shield the mistake of your brother scribe by suggesting that the fault was mine. I decline to be made responsible for the singular statement that "Calcutta is not a good pitch from a theatrical point of view, as the theatre-going people live at Malabar Hill, &c." The context, I think, showed plainly that it was Bombay that was meant, but as I did not seek the interview, much less inspire it, I had no opportunity of correcting any mistake that might be made. My chief object in writing you is to ask you to put me right with your readers, and not allow them to imagine that the fact of being "interviewed" by the Pall Mall Gazette had produced softening of the brain in Pall Mall Gazette had produced softening of the brain in Yours faithfully,

CHARLES DUVAL.

Her Majesty, passing through the British North Borneo Court, left the Exhibition by the Upper Queen's Gate Entrance at 12.20.

MESSRS. GEORGE WHITE AND Co.'s Circular, from 8th to 15th MESSRS. GEORGE WHITE AND C.S.'s Circular, from 8th to 15th July, is as follows:—Chiefly owing to the small quantity of Indian growth offered this week the sales have passed with better tone, and parcels with point and strength, having met with more competition, are rather firmer. The quality of some of the new Darjeelings has shown a slight improvement on those recently brought forward, and this will partly account for the apparently improved rates obtained for them, although quotations are much under those ruling at this time last year. Ceylon—There have been 5,400 packages brought to auction, the largest quantity hitherto offered in one week from this island. Although the greater portion consisted of undesirable quality, it is gratifying to notice an improvement on some of the most recent arrivals. The latter have received more attention, and sold at arrivals. The latter have received more attention, and sold at better prices; Souchongs and Pekoe Souchongs with point and flavour showing a halfpenny advance. Pekoes a halfpenny to a penny, and Broken Pekoes fully one penny per pound as against previous quotations. Java—No public sales have been held, but some catalogues are issued for next week. Telegrams from Calcutta state that last week's sale passed firmly for good liquoring teas, but undesirable descriptions were lower, and a decline of ½d. to 1d. per 1b. was established on common Pekoes and broken Pekoes. It is also reported that about 9,000 packages have been wrecked in a steameron the way down to Calcutta. Calcutta.

A TELEGRAM from the Secretary to H.H. the Maharajah of Cashmere stigmatises a recent statement in the Allahabad paper about State affairs at Jummu as a gress "misrepresentation." The telegram adds:—"The story related about the differences between the Maharajah and his brothers is perfectly untrue. between the Maharajah and his brothers is perfectly untrue. The Princes are on the best terms with the Maharajah, and are carrying on their respective duties as usual. No such scene as that described as having happened in open Durbar ever took place. The apprehension of riot and popular discentent, and the Howda incident, are purely imaginary. Jummu is as tranquil as ever. Daviditta owes his post as head of the Stable to the favour of the late Maharajah, which he enjoyed till his Highness's death. That the chief judge of the Junmu Sudder Adalut ever refused to obey the orders of Prince Amor Singh is a perfect myth. The introduction of reforms necessarily excites a perfect myth. The introduction of reforms necessarily excites opposition, and such communications should be received by the public with caution.

A Correspondent of the Indian Daily News contributes to that paper a short biography of that excellent Amrita Lal Roy—writer of an article in the North American Review which has attracted a certain amount of attention. Amrita Lal Roy, a Byddia by caste, is a rative of Goripha, near Kanchrapar, on the Eastern Bengal Railway; his father being in the service of that line. At ten years of age the "awakened ego" of Amrita Lal Roys mind was being developed in a village school. But he was a brilliant boy, and was transferred to the Howrah Government Aided School in a few years; passing the University entrance examination in 1876. He entered the Calcutta Presidency College after winning a scholarship, and in 1878 passed the Fine Arts examination. Then he tried medicine, both in Calcutta and at Edinburgh, but dissection of the dead had no charms for him; his vocation being to flay the living. He left Edinburgh University in 1880, sailed to America, and there, the sad truth must be written, "loafed." However, he found a berth, by some strangeriony of fate, in the Truthseeker's office as a probationary compositor; and after a few months' honourable toil was promoted to the post of proof-reader, where, casting the traditions of the Howrah Aided School and the Calcutta University behind him, he learnt to spell after the distracting fashion peculiar to America. A CORRESPONDENT of the Indian Daily News contributes to he learnt to spell after the distracting fashion peculiar to America Next fame overtook him. The American papers were full of the Indian wheat question, and Amrita Lal Roy, "being con-versant with the statistics of Indian wheat," wrote an article on the subject, and sent it to the editor of the New York Sun. It was printed, "attracted much attention, and was discussed by all the leading papers of the Continent." Fifteen dollars rewarded this maiden attempt; and the ex-compositor embarked on the path of glory which culminated in the full blaze of his article in the North American Review. In April last he returned to his native land, where, since he is a gentlemen well versed in Shakespeare, he may say to the authorities of the Howrah Aided School and the Calcutta University: "You have taught me speech. My profit is to curse you."

Agriculturist: Tropical

A MONTHLY RECORD OF INFORMATION FOR PLANTERS OF

Pea, Cacoa, Cinchona, Coffee, Indiarubber, Sugar, Palms, Cotton, Cardamoms, Kola, Coca, Cinnamon, Nutmegs, Fibrous plants, and other Products suited for Cultivation in the Tropics.

[Published at Observer Office Colombo, Ceylon, on or about the 1st of each month. Commenced in June, 1981.]

"THE TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST" has now an assured position in its large circulation in Ceylon, Southern and even Central and Northern India, the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Northern Australia, Queensland, Central America, Northern Australia, Queensland, Central America, Natal, Mauritius, and the West Indies. From all sub-tropical planting settlements we have had cordial approval of the publication and an encouraging measure of support. The English, Indian, and Colonial Press have spoken in commendatory terms of the T. A., as also Directors of Public Gardens, from Sir Joseph Hooker, F.R.S., downwards, and so have all planters.

** No planter should be without it.

Rates of Subscription, including postage, in advance :

£1 Sterling.—Rupees 12;—Dollars 5.
Single copies 2s. or Rs. 1, back copies 3s. or Rs. 11.

Any one of the Four Volumes completed (1881-2, 1882-3, 1883-4, 1884-5), bound in cloth, lettered, with Comprehensive Index, for £1 10s. (or Rs. 18), carriage prepaid.

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies (Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the Tropical Agriculturists stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the Tropical Agriculturist lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G.,

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repertory of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

** For the sale of plants, seeds, machinery, implements, &c., used in tropical (tea, sugar, fibres, &c.) agriculture, no better advertising medium exists.

"VOICE OF INDIA." THE

THERE ARE IN EDGLAIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing moxinary (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian recople.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Rarilament and other public men destrous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 7th July; from Allahabad to the 4th July; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 3rd July.

The news from Upper Burma does not show any improvement in the state of the country. The dacoits seem to be growing in audacity, and collision between them and the police and the military have been frequent during the past few days.

News from Tummoo says that Major Hailes, with a force of 150 sepoys, 50 Mainpuris, and two mountain batteries, attacked a Burmese stockade, occupied by 1,500 dacoits, three miles out of Tummoo, but retired after five hours' fighting, without having been able to dislodge them. Major Hailes was shot through the legs. Three Ghoorkhas were also wounded.

News from the Chindwin side says that Colonel Toker, after fighting and dispersing the rebels at Bulet, made a dash on Kendat, which, however, he found deserted.

LIEUTENANT SHUBRICK, of the Somersetshire Regiment, has been killed while pursuing dacoits near Mingyan.

THE Shans have attacked a small outpost at Lamaing, near Mandalay. Captain Preston, 12th Madras Infantry, was severely wounded, and two Natives killed.

Mr. Bruce, an agent of the Bombay-Burma Trading Company, has been killed by dacoits in the Mingyan district.

The attack on a trading caravan at Beelin was a blunder on the part of the sepoys, who, not knowing the language of the traders, fired on them without receiving orders.

Additional civil officers for the police are being sent to Upper Burma.

Loup complaints are made as to the conduct of the Punjabi police recently sent to Burma.

SIR CHARLES BERNARD has reached Mandalay, where he will probably remain for the present, making a tour later on in the northern districts.

THE next few months will witness a thorough development of the transport system both by river and land in Upper Burma, so as to ensure greater mobility among the troops when the rains cease, in case the country continues disturbed. Steam launches and Yarrow boats will be used in large numbers on the Irrawaddy, Chindin, and other rivers.

THE KENDAT WOON, who had been so loyal to us, died of cholera on the 18th ult.

ARRANGEMENTS for the equipment of the Tibet Mission are understood to be practically complete. News from across the frontier continues to be reassuring, and all temporary difficulties have been removed. It is expected that the Mission will start about a week hence, though no date is definitely fixed.

THE Native followers are giving trouble, many of them deserting. To keep them quiet the Government has granted the issue of free rations while they remain at Darjeeling.

THE Boundary Commission is now busy settling the frontier of the Andkhui District, the main difficulty being in connection with the water rights. The heat is great, the Oxus is rising rapidly, and it is becoming difficult to find camping grounds on account of the country being a swamp. Under the circumstances sickness is prevalent, and our mission will be moved as soon as possible to Shadiaw.

COLONEL LOCKHART left Killa-i-Panjah on the 5th June, and arrived at Zebak on the 10th, the Afghans assisting the party in every way with supplies. Mr. Ney Elias returns shortly from Fyzabad in Badakshan, viá Chitral to India.

THE Government of Bombay has framed a Bill for vesting the port of Kurrachee in a Trust.

AT a public meeting at Ahmedabad, Rs. 5,000 were collected in aid of Lady Dufferin's Fund for supplying medical aid to women in India.

THE question whether or not a second College, after the pattern of the Rajkumar College, should be established for the Chiefs and Princes of the southern half of the Presidency, is dealt with in a Government Resolution. Government reserves this decision until consultation has been had with the representatives of the States in the Southern Mahratta Country.

The projected cotton mills at Delhi—an enterprise of which notices have appeared now and again in the newspapers—is, an up-country paper hears, as good as started, the capital of six lakhs being all forthcoming, chiefly from local sources.

THE idea of up-country cotton mills has gained ground, and the Delhi Company is already confronted by a rivat at Agra. The capital of this concern is understood to be nine lakhs, which is said to have been already subscribed in full, by Natives principally. The motive impulse it is said comes from Bombay.

THE Calcutta Trades' Association has addressed the Government of India regarding the suggested abolition of the Original Side of the High Court. It asks that the commercial and trading communities may be allowed an opportunity of stating their views on the subject.

THE Association, in its reply to the letter of the Finance Committee, has suggested several possible reforms that would lead to considerable retrenchment.

Another death has occurred from the effects of an accident at polo—that of Lieutenant H. H. Clarke, R.H.A., which occurred at Umballa on Sunday week. He had been paralysed and unconscious since the accident, which occurred on the previous Friday.

THE Government of Bombay have accepted an offer of Rs. 10,000 by Mr. Dinshaw Maneckjee Petit for the construction of a dispensary at Murbad.

It is urged that the time has arrived for creating a High Court in the Punjab on the model of that of the North-West Provinces.

George Humeley, a German, has committed suicide while in a state of temporary insanity at Watson's Hotel by shooting himself with a revolver. He arrived in Bombay only a few days previously from London.

AT Madras, Gunner Frank Powell, of the 4-1st North Irish Division, R.A., has committed suicide by shooting himself with a carbine. A few days previously the sergeant-instructor of the Madras Artillery Volunteers put an end to his life in a similar manner.

The trial of Mr. Pengelly Phillips, formerly manager of the Delhi Provincial Bank, at the Chief Court, Lahore, on charges of criminal breach of trust, has ended in an acquittel acquittal.

A IELEGRAPH OFFICE, in connection with the Siam-Burma line, has been opened at Myawadi, on the Siam side. The line is now complete, and final connection between the British and Siamese offices will be established immediately.

THE Englishman learns that the Government solicitor has decided to carry on the criminal prosecution which the late Mr. Miller had instituted against Mr. Knight, of the Statesman, and that the case will come on at next Sessions. Of course, the case having been committed to the Sessions, the prosecutor is now the Queen-Empress.

It is now said to be unlikely that Mr. Barbour will go on furlough till the beginning of next year. The silver question is so grave that the Financial Secretary cannot well leave his post just now. Mr. Westland presumably will officiate when he does go.

Mr. R. T. Hobaet, C.S., has been appointed substantively to the Inspector-Generalship of Police in the North-West Provinces upon Mr. Webster's retirement; while Colonel Stanley Clarke succeeds Mr. Hobart as Inspector-General of Jails.

The Lieutenant-Governor has appointed the Legal Remembrancer to be ex officio Public Prosecutor in all cases before the Calcutta High Court on its Appellate Side, with the exception of such cases as comes before it from Presidency or other Magistrates in Calcutta.

Motes of the Week.

It is, of course, only in accordance with the official fitness of things that "the Queen has been graciously pleased to approve the appointment of the Right Hon. M. E. Grant Duff, C.I.E., Governor of Madras, to be an Extra Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India," but the honour can hardly be given as a recognition of successful Government. If but a tithe of the reports be true concerning the state of the "benighted" Presidency, Madras will require a very strong ruler when Sir Grant Duff lays down his sceptre. The disclosures which have been made public in the Sullivan and Crole case are bad enough, but it is said that there is "more behind" and that all classes, official and non-official, are anxiously looking forward to a charge which it is believed must be for the better. Who is to be the next Governor? Sir Drummond Wolff?

THE MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SINGH has been again doing his best to alienate all sympathy from himself and his troubles. Another letter from him, which has been going the round of the Indian Press, is foolish in the extreme, and cannot possibly do him any good in the eyes of the Government or with his friends. He is no doubt labouring under considerable excitement, and it may be acknowledged that he has a right to look to England for a more liberal consideration of his case. We believe that that consideration will be given—but we feel sure that it will not be wrung from the British Government by foolish threats such as he has been writing.

THERE is one thing certain, that whatever claims he may have on that Government, he has none whatever on any of the princes or nobles of India. He may look to Russia, but, as one of the Indian papers points out, Russia has plenty of dispossessed potentates of her own to look after. Perhaps, however, a course of treatment at one of the German Spas which he intends to undergo may cool his blood and bring him to a better frame of mind.

We are certain that a great number of people, some of whom have been connected with India, and some of whom have not, regret that the case of Mr. William Tayler, late Commissioner of Patna, should be allowed to remain as it is. He has fought a good fight for his own honour and reputation, and that he has not given in may be seen from a pamphlet which he has issued—Justice in the Nineteenth Century; An Appeal to British Honour. We have written before of Mr. Tayler's great services to his country during the Mutiny. Kaye, Malleson, Holmes, and other historians have placed in pages that will not die the story of those days, and of the part which Tayler played, and by which the vast Province of which he had charge was saved. But redress and justice, he tells us, are still denied. Age and ill-health are trying him now. Is it too late for errors to be owned, and wrongs righted? We hope not.

A MILITARY contemporary says that from the time of the Crimean War there has always been a complaint regarding the want of books and newspapers in military hospitals, where the sick and wounded soldiers are ever glad to get any kind of reading to help them to while away the dull and weary hours of illness or convalescence. There was a call for literature for the hospitals in Egypt, especially for those at Soudan, which, we believe, was liberally responded to by publishers and private individuals. A similar call from the hospitals at Mandalay appears to have fallen on deaf ears, for it is reported that in spite of the chaplain's numerous appeals a want of reading matter still exists, and that the sick soldiers are to be seen eagerly perusing scraps of newspapers which have been used as parcel wrappers. To meet the want the authorities at Rangoon appear to have hit upon an ingenious device. King Theebaw's royal golden chariot has arrived in that city, and is being exhibited for the benefit of a fund to provide literature for the European soldiers in hospital at Mandalay and out-stations. This is hardly a dignified way of founding a hospital library, but perhaps the state of the finances of the "authorities" admit of no other.

THE Pioneer points out that one good result of the annexation of Upper Burma will be the control gained over the Nagas, Abors, Lushais, and other restless tribes of the Assam frontier, who will now find themselves liable to be attacked from the rear if they venture to raid into British territory. Kohima, which hitherto has had its sole line of communication with the north, and is consequently isolated for months during the rains, will be held from Manipur, a good road being made between the two places. Manipur again will be linked direct with Cachar by a roadway passable at all seasons of the year.

Doubts have arisen as to the name of the present halting-place of the Afghan Boundary Commission, "Khan-i-Ab" having been in one case substituted for "Khamiab." The latter is the true form, and so it is marked on the maps sent down by Major Holdich, in charge of the Survey Party with the Commission. The word, if written in the most approved way, would be "Kham-i-Ab," which means literally the "bend of the river," and is a most appropriate term, as the Oxus just beyond the district named bends to the north. The knotty question which Sir West Ridgeway and Colonel Kuhlberg have to decide is whether the boundary line of the Amir's territory shall be drawn at Khamiab, or twenty miles further castward at the Ziarat Khwaja Salar, which is only twelve miles westwards of the well-known Kilif Ferry.

The Polygot Dictionary of the four great languages of the Levant (English, French, Arabic, and Turkish), which Dr. Anton Tien has in the Press with Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., is a work which cannot be otherwise than of the greatest assistance to the student of these languages, by its fulness and detail; and, at the same time, of unique value to officers, merchants, traders, travellers, and others having practical relations with the East, by reason of the thoroughly colloquial character of the words given.

The Thibet Mission.—Why sponges and toothbrushes should be included among the presents to be taken by the Mission to Thibet is, says the Sind Gazette, a question of mystery. The average Thibetan never permits water to touch his skin. He reckons his age by the number of woollen garments he has worn, and from infancy to extreme old age these garments are never voluntarily taken off for a moment. They drop off in fragments from wear and tear and are replaced from time to time—the fifth renewal indicating adolescence; tenth, middle age; and the fifteenth is probably the last the patriarchal Thibetan needs. The ordinary use of a sponge would therefore be inexplicable to him. A tooth brush for his sparse and yellow fangs would be stranger still. And if the Mission be, as alleged, really kept back waiting for a supply of these articles—why the Caucasian is played out. The rumour as given by the Civil and Military Gazette would almost prompt the belief that the idea of the Mission being abandoned is beginning to be entertained. The messages stated to have been sent forward to assure the Thibetans that there is no truth in the report that the Mission will be accompanied by an army will probably defeat their avowed purpose and perhaps lead to the gathering of a Mongolian force on the frontier.

CALCUTTA, JULY 25.

Three weeks ago I stated that the Finance Committee had addressed a letter to the Calcutta High Court, asking the Judges' opinion regarding the possibility of reducing the cost of the Court by curtailing the right of appeal from the provinces, and relegating a portion of its business, as a Court of first instance, to a less expensive tribunal. It is understood that the Judges have now answered that letter in a despatch of considerable length, and that they have adopted the following line of argument:

That they have adopted the following line of argument:

They begin by tracing the history of taxation on litigation in India, and show that up to 1870 it was never contemplated that India, and show that up to 1870 it was never contemplated that civil suitors should be taxed, except to such an extent as should fairly divide between them and the general public the cost of the maintenance of the Courts. In 1870, however, there was passed the Court Fees Act, which is still in force, and the result of which has been that the receipts from Court fees in Bengal have grown yearly, until a state of things has been reached in which the suitors in the civil Courts not only pay the whole cost of those Courts, but a large profit in addition—a profit which is now estimated to amount in Bengal and Assam to over thirty-one lakhs of rupees yearly. lakhs of rupees yearly.

Meanwhile the expenditure on the Courts has by no means Meanwhile the expenditure on the Courts has by no means kept pace with the increase of their business and income. The number of subordinate judicial officials has been very slightly increased, the ministerial establishment of the provincial Courts is notoriously insufficient and underpaid, and the condition of the judicial buildings is generally very inadequate and often disgraceful. The result is that the Government derives from the suitors a revenue enormously in excess of what it spends on the administration of justice; while the efficiency of the Courts is curtailed and the administration of justice is delayed by undue parsimony in the outlay upon the Courts.

This condition of things appears to the Judges indefensible in

This condition of things appears to the Judges indefensible in principle and oppressive in practice. They point out that the system of the judicial administration of Bengal is like a machine, and a highly complex one, which can only properly be considered as a whole, because it can only be worked as a whole. Its efficiency depends upon its supervision, control, and regulation by the High Court. To isolate the High Court and describe it as by the High Court. To isolate the High Court and describe it as if it were a separate institution, the cost of which and the benefits of which could be estimated apart from those of the entire machine, which it directs and controls, is a fallacy and possibly a mischievous one. Nor is the case different if the Court be regarded as a Court of original jurisdiction. The duty of the State is to provide for each class of its subjects, and for each locality, such Courte of first instance of a propertied to the needs of the as to provide for each class of its subjects, and for each locality, such Courts_of first instance as are suited to the needs of the place and people. The State has no right, while making money out of civil justice as a whole, to say "We will not give the people of this or that locality a Court constituted as their circumstances require, because such Court costs more, or yields less profit than one which suffices for the wants of another and less highly organised community;" and a reduction of expenditure in the administration of justice means a diminution in the efficiency of the Courts, already seriously hindered by want of funds.

of the Courts, already seriously hindered by want of funds.

That being so, the Judges consider it their duty to decline to discuss the questions raised by the Finance Committee, or to offer any suggestions having the same object in view.

Yesterday's Gazette notified the transfer of the Punjab Frontier Force from the orders of the Government of the Punjab to those of the Commander-in-Chief, to take effect from August 1. The Governor-General in Council takes the opportunity to express his Governor-General in Council takes the opportunity to express his high sense of the loyal and brilliant services rendered by the force since its creation, and his appreciation of the admirable manner in which it has been administered by the Punjab Government. The Viceroy feels confident that all ranks will spare no efforts to worthily uphold the noble traditions of loyalty, discipline, and bravery, which have raised them to a position second to none in the army. The local and distinctive character of the force will be preserved. It will not be distributed in other commands; and, subject to the exigencies of the service, its other commands; and, subject to the exigencies of the service, its duties will not be made interchangeable with those of other Bengal regiments. It is reported that Sir C. Aitchison and other civil authorities in the Punjab were opposed to this transfer, and that the plan has been carried out without consulting them.

Next winter a flying reconnoissance is to be made by way of preparation for a line of railway across the Bikaneer desert. This will be an important strategical line as affording an alternative structs for the sending of troops towards the frontier.

MERV, JULY 24.

Advices received to-day from the Afghan Frontier Commission, dated Bosaga, 19th inst., state that, notwithstanding the excessive heat, the work of delimitation is proceeding without interruption. The staff officers of the Russian Commission are engaged in surveying the banks of the Amu Daria from Bosaga up stream. They will examine the left bank as far as Kilif and the right as far as Tchushk-Gusar.

The Commissioners are expected to arrive here shortly.

THE SILVER QUESTION IN INDIA.

SIMLA, JULY 24.

The Financial Department has issued a note controverting the view expressed by the Lords of the Treasury in their reply to the despatch of the Indian Government concerning the silver question that the low rate of exchange benefited Indian trade. The note adds that the recent expansion of Indian trade is due to the increase of railways and to the reduction in the freight rates by rail and sea.

A low rate of exchange, declares the Department, is merely a palliative, and does not abate or counteract the injury caused by the appreciation of gold.

THE sooner the Parsee team now in England, says the Railway Service Gazette, pack up their cricketing gear and return to Bombay, the better for the remnant of their well-nigh expired reputation. Their performances throughout have been simply ridiculous, but they reached a climax in this direction in the match on the 8th ult. against the Essex Club, which ended in the defeat of the Parsees by an innings and 239 runs. If they wish to secure a victory before their return they had better challenge the fourth Eleven of some third-class grammar school. Even then the result might be doubtful might be doubtful.

The results of the shooting of the regiments of the Madras Army for the season 1885-86 show that, of the four cavalry regiments, three were exercised. The 3rd Light Cavalry easily maintained its position at the head of the list, both of the Madras regiments and of the Native cavalry regiments in India. It not only has a figure of merit of twenty-three points higher than the next Madras cavalry regiment, but firing fifty rounds only with the Saider carbine, a very inferior weapon, against sixty rounds fired by the infantry with the Saider rifle, it has this year beaten four of the infantry regiments. Of the infantry regiments, the 17th, stationed at Secunderabad, stands at the head of the roll, and wins for the year the silver shield, presented by Colonel Godfrey-Clerk, the late Adjutant-General of the Presidency. This shield is to be held for a year by the best shooting regiment, which will have its name, score, and winning year sidency. NATIVES AND THE CIVIL SERVICE. (Times of India.)

(Times of India.)

The announcement made by Lord Kimberley that the Viceroy will "probably" appoint a Committee of Inquiry into the question of the admission of Natives into the Civil Service of India will be received with the liveliest satisfaction by the whole Native community. The Associations, if they are wise, will agitate judiciously on the subject, and show good reasons why the probability shall be changed into a certainty; but in urging the appointment of a committee they should not stultify their cause by demanding too much. Nominally the Civil Service of India is now as open to the Natives of this country as it is to Englishmen, but the present rate of Native admissions has only been one appointment every two years. We have often insisted that this is not a successful result for an experiment that, having lasted twenty years, may be said to have been fairly tested. The Associations then, if they are well advised, will concentrate their best efforts in agitating for an improved Statutory Civil Service Associations then, if they are well advised, will concentrate their best efforts in agitating for an improved Statutory Civil Service by which they will in time receive one sixth of all the appointments instead of the meagre half an appointment per annum. We know Lord Kimberley's views on the subject, and they are as liberal as any views likely to be supported by any possible Secretary of State for India. He does not believe that any change is needed in the limit of age for the entrance examination; he does not think the Government will be justified in all ting more than one sixth of the appointments to Natives and tion; he does not think the Government will be justified in allotting more than one-sixth of the appointments to Natives; and, like the higher officials in India, he sees that the Statutory Civil Service has been a failure because it has been a sham. The solution to the whole difficulty lies in a reformed and extended Statutory or Secondary Civil Service, forming, as it were a ladder from the Uncovenanted to the Covenanted Services, for matter what the limit of age was he sale the morest header. no matter what the limit of age may be, only the merest handful of clever Native lads at the best will now make their way into of clever Native lads at the best will now make their way into the Civil Service proper. But let them compete for the Statutory Civil Service among each other in this country, and we shall soon find them filling one-sixth of the desired appointments. "There is," said Lord Kimberley, in his last letter of instruction on the subject, "no experiment in methods of selection which the law does not permit you to try, and the field of your experiments will not be limited through the operation of a religious prejudice of unknown force, but will extend to the whole of the great Indian population, while they may be varied according to converses of the various races which that nonlation comprises." Indian population, while they may be varied according to circumstances of the various races which that population comprises." The Associations, then, in urging the appointment of a committee to consider the subject, should put forward a plain statement of their requirements. They need not ignore the limit of age question altogether, but it is really of very minor importance, and they should devise some scheme by which the most promising young men at the Universities could be nominated to compete yearly for a certain number of appointments in the Statutory Civil Service, and for a certain number also in the Uncovenanted Service.

The Native journals have always urged the extended employment of Native agency on the ground of economy, and this argument is particularly cogent just now that a heavy reduction of expenditure has to be faced. The political bodies who may take part in this discussion have only to convince the Government that the employment of Native agency would be really economical, and their battle will be half gained. No private firm, here, whether European or Native, pays the same rates for Native and European labour, and the Government are in exactly the same position. The current expenses of a Native of this country are not nearly so heavy as those of an Englishman in India, and even an Englishman in the Civil Service at home is able to work comfortably on a much smaller salary than is absolutely necessary here. The Native is at home, the Englishman is in exile—that is the secret of the whole matter, and it has nothing to do with invidious race distinctions. Of the costily man is in exile—that is the secret of the whole matter, and it has nothing to do with invidious race distinctions. Of the costly and painful separation from wife and children, of the necessity after a time for two homes, of the heavy expenditure on leave for health, the Native happily for himself knows nothing. He lives cheaply, the Government assist him to educate his children, and his local influence enables him to push them forward in the world. In certain offices, such as that of a High Court Judge, it may be desirable to give a Native incumbent the same income as a European for the sake of public prestige. But the ordinary rules of ray and pensions were devised to meet special circumstances, which do not apply to the permanent residents in the country. The Native community should recognize once for all; that any thorough reform will only be carried out in the cause of economy. The Government know that where Native agency can be employed The Government know that where Native agency can be employed at all it can be obtained at a much lower cost than European at all it can be obtained at a much lower cost than European agency, and the Native journals and associations should use this important fact as the basis for all their memorials and addresses on the subject. A reduction of expenditure, as Lord Dufferin has just said, will, if the rule econtinues to fall, become the bounden duty of the Government of India. There is, unfortunately, every reason to believe that the price of silver will continue to fall, and by proving that a substantial reduction can be effected by the extended employment of Native officials, the accredited organs of Native opinion will kill two birds with one stone. They will help the Government out of a difficulty, and they will assist several hundreds of their own countrymen into lucrative and honourable positions. So far they have left this great question almost untouched, and have frittered away their energy and influence in asking for an increase in the age at which candidates for the Indian Civil Service go up for the preliminary examination. If they got all they wished, it is possible (though unlikely) that one Native might obtain a direct appointment every year instead of every two years as at present. If they can persuade the Government to appoint a committee they have such a chance of being heard as they never had before, and this particular details should be put on one side for a moment in favour of an agitation for the general employment of Native agency, wherever possible, on the logical plea of economy.

THE PRESS AND THE EXHIBITION.

Civil and Military Gazette.)

One of the first and wisest things which Sir Philip Cunliffe Owen did to prepare the public mind for the proper reception of his splendid idea of "Imperial Federation" was to feed the Press. Not with dry crumbs of State information, but with substantial things such as journalists of the weakest literary appetite can appreciate and do justice to. The gentlemen of the Press were invited to a private view of the Exhibition a week before the public opening; they were conducted about the building by Sir Philip in person, and he kindly pointed out and explained to them the attractions of the several Courts to which he hoped public attention would be called, and then, though weary with his heavy morning's work, he entertained them at a magnificent. his heavy morning's work, he entertained them at a magnificent-luncheon which, in the name of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the President of the Royal Commissioners, he thanked of Wales, the President of the Royal Commissioners, he thanked them for honouring him with their presence. Need it be added that "the health of Sir Philip Cunliffe Owen" and "Success to the Colonial and Indian Exhibition" was drunk "with alk honours." The only other toasts drank were "The Queen" and "Messrs Spiers and Pond"—the refreshment contractors. The latter toast was very enthusiastically received. Then on the day of the opening ceremony—after Her Gracious Majesty had retired amidst the cheers of her loyal subjects and the thrilling strains of Rule Beitennia! the representatives of the Press did not have of Rule Britannia! the representatives of the Press did not have to depart unrefreshed except with loyalty, as did the ordinary public. They found that luncheon "from 2 till 4" had carefully been They found that luncheon "from 2 till 4" had carefully been provided for them. On this occasion there was no speechifying. Even "Ginx's Baby," who posed upon the last occasion as the elequent representative of London journalism, was silent. Indeed the matters to be discussed were too deep for utterance. The eyemet outward and visible signs of inward and spiritual comforts. Patriotism found renewed strength in perigord pie, loyalty and lobster salad went harmoniously together, and the drooping spirits of the tired writers did not shun "the foaming grape of Eastern France." Colonial Federation became a sparkling reality and not a mere abstract idea; and the Indian Empire was admitted to be a gern worthy of the Imperial Crown. And so it came to not a mere abstract idea; and the Indian Empire was admitted to be a gem worthy of the Imperial Crown. And so it came to pass that touching sentiments were written that night, and read on the following morning regarding the Exhibition, its aims, and the moral and political results which were to come of it. There was nothing said of shortcomings. There were no doubts of the success not only of the show itself, but of all that it was said to represent—"One life, one flag, one throne, &c." At South Kensington it was all "soft compunction!" The public next morning read that, when Her Majesty was listening to Albani singing. "Home Sweet Home," in which a "lowly thatched cottage" is asked for in preference to "pleasures and palaces," our Gracious. Sovereign had big tears coursing down her cheeks. It was that touch of nature which makes Fleet-street kin to every possible occasion. The poet laureate's ode was declared to be an inspiration worthy of his earlier genius, and even journalistic scotting was hushed into "silent worship of the great" in referring to the Archbishop of Canterbury's invocation to Heaven to protect and prosper the Conservatives and rebellious Liberals who decline to accept Mr. Gladstone's plan for the dismemberment of the Empire.

and pure in patriotism to the moths who wait for the evening selectric light to play with the golden butterflies.

But the Press have told the public that, from this Exhibition, the greatest and the grandest results are to come to the great Empire of Britain, upon which the sun never sets. All the Colonies are to be drawn in closer ties to the mother country; there will be no ugly questions of taxation or of customs duties raised hereafter—the duty of children to a mother being the only duty to be recognised. India, the dusky neglected daughter of the East, is to cling closer to the bosom of her Western parent; and no more discontent or distrust is ever to disturb the peace of and no more discontent or distrust is ever to disturb the peace of either. Such and much more is the gush which the Exhibition, Colonial and Indian, has called forth in the English Press. We have no desire to laugh at it or condemn it, if we can bring our selves to believe that even one-half of the golden prophecies will accept Mr. Gladstone's plan for the dismemberment of the Empire..

Not that the archiepiscopal prayer was altogether so narrowed, for it was an orison asking favour for all who patronised the Exhibition with their presence; and this included all, from the lofty and pure in patriotism to the moths who wait for the evening's be fulfilled. At present we can only hope-

THE SIMLA EXODUS. (Madras Mail.)

Outside the highest official circles, there is no difference of Outside the highest official circles, there is no difference of opinion in this country as to the extreme impropriety of secluling the various Indian Governments for the larger portion of the year from the scene of their legislative and administrative duties. Natives and Europeans are thoroughly agreed as to the selfishness of such a proceeding. The Bench, the Bar, the commercial community, Civilians unprovided with Secretariat appointments. military men doing duty with their regiments, and individuals belonging to other callings and pursuits, find it quite practicable to live and enjoy life in the plains, diversified by occasional holidays. Previous to the middle of the present century, no Governors-General or Governors dreamed of abandoning the stats Governors General or Governors dreamed of abandoning the scats of Government, save for a tour or vacation, much less did they indulge in visions of travelling about the country with their Governments upon their tacks. It was in the pre-railway era that the Indian Empire was built up to its present lotty dimensions. The climate of Calcutta failed to weaken the faculties of a Warren Hastings or a Wellesley. Neither the one, nor the other, was prevented by his immense latours in this country from attaining a green old age on his return to Europe. The present generation may little as we suspect it have deeperated from the sturdy may, little as we suspect it, have degenerated from the sturdy stock that produced men of such endurance in the brave days of old; but, if it be indeed true that a less robust and manly race now presides over the destinion of India (which we take the liberty of doubting, it may be feared that something more than residence on mountain slopes is necessary to give us strong, in-telligent, and courageous rulers. We do not fear, indeed, the location of the Government authorities at Simla, Murree, Octacamund, or Darjeeling all the year round, for the selfindulgence that causes them to shun the summer heat would cqually make them shrink from the wintry snows, or nipping fiosts. No dignified person, of course, can be supposed to lower his mind to the consideration of the sufferings of the Eurasian his mind to the consideration of the sufferings of the Eurasian clerks, and Native menials. The majority of these are married men, and have families which they are compelled to leave behind them in the plains. The separation means two establishments, and not infrequently the demoralisation of the household deserted by its natural guide and controller, and an appearance ultimately in the Bankruptcy Court. It is a serious matter for the taxpayers that the contributions extorted as income tax or otherwise from their scanty hoards should be squandered heedlessly and unproductively. Unhappily there is no appeal to the British putlic. With rare exceptions Anglo-Indian members of Parliament have participated in the crime, and naturally side with their successors. A similar spirit of bonne camaraderie prevails in the India Council, and among influential people generally, to whom it seems natural that Government should be more vigorously conducted in a temperate than in a tropical climate, and who smile superciliously at the objections that are placed before them.

The only hope of making an effective appeal to the British Legislature is by laying before it the actual expenditure caused by the twofold "fitting" of the Government, showing among other things how a member of Council travels in State among other things how a member of Council travels in State to Elysium, and how a poor Eurasian clerk performs the same journey with woeful discomfort and great reluctance. But that "little bill" will, we fear, never be made public, for it is to the interest of all in supreme authority over us to prevent its publication, or to connive at the under estimating of the charges actually incurred. The grand total—which should of course include interest on the enormous sums spent on public buildings at hill stations, and the cost of the saloon railway carriage, with their silver fittings, supplied for the exclusive use of members of the Viceregal Council—might scandalise even languid members of Parliament, and even make the Secretary of State "sit up."

THE FAMOUS BARODA PIGEON-HOUSE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

Sir,-Mr. Playford Reynolds has anticipated me in offering a correction in Jour columns respecting the amusing error made in your London namesake, in ascribing the design of the Baroda pigeon-house and the supervision of its execution to Mr. Sims, of Bhownugger. I was, therefore, very glad to read Mr. Reynolds' interesting letter in your valuable journal of the 26th.

In the information given by that gentleman on the subject of the pigeon-house, which his Highness the Maharajah of Baroda was pleased to send to the Exhibition, as one of the numerous interesting articles contributed by him from his own territories, important links remain to be introduced, which I shall feel obliged by your allowing me here to briefly state, especially as the Barcda trophy has attracted a wide and very favourable

The idea of sending the model of a pigeon-house was due to Captain J. H. S. dler, Assistant Agent to the Governor-General, as also the President of the Exhibition, who has all along been the heart and soul of our laborious work now completed. As honorary secretary, and an executive functionary to the same, I was asked to find out a specimen from the city for adaptation. The rigeon-houses which I saw in the city were hardly of any note. I then selected some of the best artisans from the city and note. I then selected some of the best artisans from the city and conceived an altogether new design, which, while answering a real purpose, would also serve as a genuine and well-finished oriental model in wood-work. The whole design was then explained to the chief men in every possible detail—the style which I considered appropriate, for the turn-out being Indo Saraconic, I had a drawing and an estimate prepared. After this, thorough conception was effected, and were submitted to the President, who conveyed of them with some alteration, suggested hylone of our approved of them with some alteration, suggested by one of our zealous members Mr. Reynolds. I had thus to look after the preparation of this obelisk shaped pigeon tower, and order certain improvements to be made while being fitted up.

It is, indeed, noteworthy that the distinguished Baroda Ruler can count upon a large body of artisans from among his own subjects who can follow up, in an admirably docile and practical manner, any design or style suggested to them. In my eleven pears' administrative experience in this magnificent State I had numerous occasions to get them to construct very extensive public decorations, illumination works, and various classes of buildings, &c., of a character entirely novel to this capital, and I scarcely ever failed in finding them loyal practical, and presevering with a few days or even a few hours' notice. It is so good of Mr. Reynolds to have brought the name of Maistry Purshotum to prominent notice, to which I must well add that of another maistry, Keshow, who was very closely a sociated with this diffi-cult and claborate wood-work executed in a remarkably short time.—Yours. &c.,

Baroda, June 29.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.—The Calcutta Trades' Association has addressed the Government of India regarding the suggested abolition of the Original Side of the High Court. It asks that the commercial and trading communities may be allowed an opportunity of stating their views on the subject. The Association, in its reply to the letter of the Finance Committee, has suggested several possible reforms that would lead to considerable retrenchment.

ASSAM LAND AGITATION.—A correspondent at Sibsagar, of the Indian Daily News, telegraphing on the 27th of June, says:—
"Twenty-five thousand ryots of the Sibsagar District have asked the Chief Commissioner of Assam to keep in abeyance the enforcement of the Assam Land Revenue Regulation till next year. They are going to move the Government for re-consideration and amendment of the Regulation. Intelligent public opinion holds that the enforcement of this Regulation in its present objectionable features will spread dissatisfaction throughout Assam amongst a people entirely agricultural and mostly actual cultivators." ASSAM LAND AGITATION .- A correspondent at Sibsagar, of the actual cultivators.

DARJEELING TEA PROSPECTS.—The Darjeeling correspondent of the Englishman says:—"The weather in this district during the last fortnight has been all that could be desired for tea manufacture. A hot sun with an occasional heavy shower brought the leaf out in abundance, and many factories have been obliged to work night and day to keep pace with it. A change in the weather has just now taken place, amounting almost to a disastrous storm. In some parts of the district the wind blew a terrific gale, and the cold rain has sent the temperature down approach by. This will somewhat storp the growth and of the considerably. This will somewhat stop the growth and give the planter time for packing and despatching. Most gardens are well ahead of last year, and although very poor prices were realised at the first Calcutta sales, the teas manufactured to date realised at the first Calcutta sales, the teas manufactured to date are quite equal to those of previous seasons for quality, if anything better, and it is expected that when this fact is established on the London market the prices will become better, both here and at home, for Darjeeling teas. It has been an excellent season for leaf so far. Red spider has increased rapidly with the late favourable tea weather, but this heavy rain will prevent any further stread, besides washing off a great deal of that already in evistence. existence.

BOMBAY.

CALTAIN CLERK, the superinted dent of the Nizam's education, is about to take six months' leave prior to retirement. Cuptain Clerk was appointed to the charge of the Nizam's education ten years age, and he continued in that capacity till the installation, when he was appointed comptroller of the household. Later on he was made President of the Sar-i-Khas Board—a Board entrusted with the administration of the Nizam's personal estates. This appointment, it is said, never found favour with the Supreme Government, as it is against the policy of that Government that Europeans should be placed in such position in Native States. However, this may be, it is now virtually settled, says the Deccan Times, that Captain Clerk is not to resume the position.

The Persian Consul-General in Bombay, Mirza Husseian Zulee Khan, has presented photographs of his Majesty the Shah to the leading members of the Parsee community. The compliment, following as it does upon the friendly message from the Shah which the Consul-General addressed to them at his recent reception, has been duly appreciated, but it has been by no means interpreted as the confirmation of an invitation to the recipients to proceed to Persia. The idea that any such invitation was given or intended to be given, though it has been lastily taken up here and there, is altogether unwarranted. The Consul-General conveyed to the Parsee community an expression of his Sovereign's good will and of his regret that they should for twelve centuries have been separated from their father and. But the "invitation to return to Paris" is a product of the imagination of some younger members of the community, who see something romantic in the idea. To them it seems to have charms to which their "elders and wisers" are blind.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT—Believers in local self-government have little reason to rejoice at the use that is made of it by certain Indian municipalities. Every effort has been made for some time past to teach the people of Ahmedabad the blessing of a copious supply of good water, which their city needs at least as much as any in the whole of India. The Municipality has been recently discussing a scheme of water-supply which would cost a few lakhs of rupees to carry out and save a few thousand lives every year—the death-rate at present is above 45 per thousand, which is the highest in this Presidency. Public opinion, however, has protested emphatically against the scheme, on the score of expense, and the Municipality has bowed to the popular will. An alternative plan, which has the merit of being cheap if bad, has been adopted, which is called an extension of the present system. The people of Ahmedabad will be content in future with a more copious supply of water from sources already condemned as foul or tainted. The extension of the present system will very likely involve an extension of the present death-rate; but then dying is cheaper than living.—Bombay Catholic Examiner.

NATIVE PRESS.

MAHARAJA DHULEEP SING'S MANIFESTO.—The Maharaja's last letter, though silly and hasty, throws a deal of additional light on the relations that exist between the Maharaja and the British Government. It shows that the latter have admitted that there is something to say in favour of the claim set up by the Maharaja. Annoyed by what he considers to be unfair treatment, the Maharaja announces that he will go to the princes of India for pecuniary support and countenance. In this he is much missaken. The princes of India dare not give him any such assistance, which would be tantamount to disaffection towards British rule. The British Government, on the other hand, ought not to treat lightly the threat which Dhuleep Sing holds out to enter Hindostan by a different route. It is but fair that his case should be carefully considered.—Jamshed.

Engelegy to the same subject the Rombou Samedar says:—

REFERRING to the same subject, the Bombay Samachar says:—
"We did not expect that the Maharaja would be so stubbornly anxious to come to India. The threat which he holds out to enter India through Russia, Goa, or Pondicherry is easily spoken but not so easily carried out. He may come as far as the borders of Afghan:stan, but he cannot cross over to this country. And supposing, for a moment, that he succeeds in reaching the Punjaub, what will he be able to do there? We believe he can do absolutely nothing. The Maharaja's threats are simply meaningless, but it does not follow from that that he should not be heard. He is a claimant of a peculiarly high position, and his representations, thouch excitedly made, should have a patient and impartial hearing.

The Vacant Seat in the Legislative Council—We cannot

THE VACANT SEAT IN THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—We cannot say who will succeed Mr Dababhai Naorojee in the Legislative Council, but there is no reason why Government should not be made aware of the name which is on the cards as far as the Bombay public is concerned. In spite of the long-talked of complaints about the constitution of this assembly, the nominations recently have been very good. In this respect public voice has succeeded in reaching the ears of Government. We have now able men in place of mere "head moving" geniuses. Under such circumstances, the man that would do credit to Mr.

Dubabhai's vacant place is Mr. P. M. Mehta. We have already Messrs. Telang, Budreodin, and Ranade in our Council, and Mr. Mehta is one of the set. The public is auxious to see him in the Council.—Kaiser-i Hind.

THE NATIVE VOLUNTEER QUESTION.

"Ram Shamba" is the author of a poem on this subject in a Native paper which appears to take a not altogether sanguing view of the utility of Native volunteers. The poem commences with a sufficiently humorous account of a public meeting to agitate the question:—

The Elders of Brinjal had met in their hall, To consider a question momentous to all. There were landholders, merchants, and limbs of the law, With paunches well stuffed with moorghee and pilaw; There were gownsmen and townsmen and countrymen too-From Sillit and Gajpore and, mayhap, the Zoo; There were Ghoze and Bhoze, Chuggerjy and Muggerjy, Sir Jaem Nagore, Pitranus, and many more Of lesser renown, who came only to vote

Ditto to some speaker or leader of note;

There were gokhaducks, soodhkhaducks, khaducks of dharm when not over nice either in diet or karm;
While with banners in hand, an obstreperous band
Of refractory boys, led by that father of noise
Sir Anda, who spouted by night and by day,
Came there, ready for frolic or fun or a fray.
Twas a meeting so queer, and so motley their wear—
Red, yellow and blue, every pattern and hue,
Both ancient and new, "From China to Peru,"—
You'd fancy all clowndom was there! Men not over nice either in diet or karm; You'd fancy all clowndom was there Now the Brinjalis, you know, their allegiance did owe, To the Tritons who came from the west— A nation of traders, Philanthropists, raiders, With exuberant virtue opprest. And these hated the Ursines, their foes from of old, For coveting, dear me! their lands and their gold; And the hatred grew deeper and stronger, I fear, And the natred grew deeper and stronger, I lear,
When the enemy pushed on his frontier too near Their own (by which please understand me to mean, That only a country or two lay between).
Oh, the bloodthirsty brutes! To court wanton disputes
With a nation, whose vocation
Was, by civilised methods and cozening ways, To find markets for metals and shirtings and greys! Hence the Brinjalis, thinking the best of all charms To baffle the Ursines were powder and arms, Now met to consider in solemn debate If they shouldn't use arms in defence of the State.

After several of the leading orators had addressed the meeting:

Next young Ghoze (a smart lawyer, please note),
Made a neat little speech which, with pleasure, I quote:
"I belong, my good friends, to the Positive school,
Humanity being my love and my rule.
Guru Comte is dead against quarrels and fights,
These become only savages, vultures and kites.

The sword and the sabre wild madness may draw, I'd appeal but to wise international law—
To Grotius and Puffendorf—jurists renowned—
By whose futhwahs all civilised nations are bound."

Finally, unable to agree, the Mass meeting adjourns with banners and procession to consult a sacred oracle, which speaks as follows:—

Pitranus, S.r Anda, and Ghoze, my bright boy! Your Faith and your Bhakti both fill me with joy! But, believe me, my lads, your ridiculous fads Are as likely to baffle or checkmate the foe, As Sursoos into palm trees majestic to grow.

Your soldiering notions I sternly must scout, For your duty in life's but to scribble and spout, To blow bubbles in air, and to offer me poojah Singing—"Nath niranjana, aur nahin doojah!"

INDIA COUNCIL REMITTANCES.—The tendency of the Eastern exchanges is still decidedly averse, and the rate obtained for Government drafts upon India last week has fallen to below 1s. 5d. per rupee. Fifteen lacs were put up for tender on Wednesday last, and Rs. 14,70,000 were sold, nearly all in telegraphic transfers, the price obtained being no better than 1s. 3\frac{1}{2}d. per rupee for both bills and transfers. This price was \frac{1}{2}d below the minimum of the previous allotment, and compares with 1s. 6d. per rupee, as the price at which the drawings for the present financial year were estimated in March last,

COLONIAL EXCURSIONS.

With the beginning of August, the series of excursions which have been organised for our Colonial and Indian visitors will take a wide extension. So far the most distant and protracted trip has been that to Oxford, Leamington, Warwick, and other classical places, which we chronicled at the time. A three days' excursion begins to-day, the main purpose of which is a visit to Plymouth, and entertainment there by the Civil and Naval authorities. That will bring the July excursions to a close. During most of August, however, our colonial friends will be scattered over the length and breadth of the United Kingdom, some making a tour to the mountains, and others a three days' visit to Dublin. These lengthened flights begin on Tuesday, August 3, with a five days' excursion to York, Newcastle, Leeds, and Bradford. The party will arrive at Yok about midday of the 5th, and, after being provided with refreshments by the Lord Mayor, will visit the Cathedral and other objects of interest. In the evening there will be a great banquet, given by the Lord Mayor, will visit the Cathedral and other objects of interest in the neighbourhood of Newcastle, the Mayor of which will receive the visitors, and will sleep at Newcastle that night. Going the next day to Leeds, the colonials will be treated to another corporation lunch, there will be more visits to factories, especially of wool and cloth, iron and steel, finishing up wich a reception by the Mayor and the Corporation of Leeds and of private citizens during their stay in Leeds; and on the Friday proceed to Saltaire, and, after lunching with Sir Titus Salt, will visit the factories, &c. of Bradford. Here they will be banqueted by the Mayor and corporation, who, with the citizens, will receive the colonials as guests. Meantime, on Thursday, the 5th, another party will have been started for a two days' run to Worcester and Kidderminster, where they will be received with the usual hospitality. On Monday, August 9, another big excursion will be begun. The first day will be spent at M

After that comes the Dublin excursion, August 16th to 19th. There will be a garden-party by the Lord-Lieutenant, whoever he may be at that time; a reception by the Lord Mayor and Corporation, and a ball by the Lord Mayor. Probably some of the colonials may take a run to Killarney or the Giant's Causeway. On August 20th and 21th there will be a run to Doverand Folkestone, with the usual receptions and banquets. The great flight, however, begins on the 23rd; the six days from that to the 28th will be devoted to Scotland, which has furnished so large a proportion of our best colonists. A night by the way will be spent at Sheffield, where there will be a reception by the Mayor and Corporation. The 24th and 25th will be given to Edinburgh and its many sights, including the Exhibition. Already great prepartions are being made by the Corporation to give the colonials a worthy reception. On the 26th the tour to the mountains already referred to will take place. Probably this will consist of the well-known round by Callender, the Trossachs, Loch Katrine, Loch Lomond, and down to Glasgow, where the excursionists will arrive on Friday. Of course, Glasgow will not be outdone by its more polished rival on the other side of the island, and when the colonists return to London on Saturday, the 28th, they will surely take back with them lively impressions of Scottish hospitality.

take back with them lively impressions of Scottish hospitality. It is worthy of remark, in connection with the above programme of excursions, that Bradford, Leeds, and Newcastle are to treat the colonial visitors as their guests in every respect during their stay in these towns, and there can be little doubt that the same generous hospitality will be extended to the parties by other cities which will be visited—notably Liverpool, Edinburgh, and Glasgow.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE usual statement of British troops located in the Hills during the summer shows that altogether 11,908 men. 599 women, and 1,242 children have escaped the hot weather of 1886. Last year the total was nearly two thousand below the present returns. The regular Hill stations accommodate 4341 men; the Hill depôts 2,477; and temporary locations, mainly for new unacclimatised regiments, 5,090. The only regret the unprofessional reader feels while looking over the list of "brands plucked from the burning" is the thought that Cherat should be officially designated a hill station, and as such should accommodate something like twelve hundred men. Cherat is not exactly the place where a civilian would go for his health's sake.

It is now stated that Major Mocre, of the staff of the Governor of Madras, declined the appointment of Superintendent of the Gunpowder Factory, Madras, as it transpired that the appointment was to be made subject to the possibility of its early abolition in connection with the disestablishment of the factory. A local paper points out how impolitic it would be, for the sake of effecting a saving of Rs. 60,000, to make Madras dependent upon Bengal and Bombay for its supply of gunpowder, and says that the Madras Government has all along deprecated the acceptance of what it considers to be a very great danger. "The average expenditure of powder in Bengal is five lakhs, in Bombay three and a half lakhs, and in Madras one lakh of lbs., or nine and a half lakhs of lbs. in all India, and General Hughes did not doubt the power of the Bengal and Bombay factories to produce the whole of this between them without working overtime. But the cost and risks of the carriage of large quantities of powder for very long distances were to a great extent ignored by him, nor did he think it of much importance that the line of rail from the north to the south passes through some Native territory. If the Supreme Government were well assured that the millennium has commenced, then indeed it might be worth while to abolish military factories not only in Madras, but also in Bengal and Bombay."

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR HERBERT MACPHERSON, the Commander-in-Chief, has issued the following General Order:—Two soldiers of British regiments have lately been brought to trial before General Court-martial on charges of shooting with intent to commit murder. One soldier was convicted of this most serious crime; the other was found guilty of the lesser offence of shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm. The first case was a premeditated attempt against the life of a superior officer, for an act done in the execution of his duty. In both cases the sentence was five years' penal servitude, the shortest term permissible by law. By such conduct on the part of soldiers not only are the lives of their comrades endangered, but the good name of the Army is tarnished. It is no excuse that the offender bears no ill-will towards the person against whom the violence is committed, or that he is under the influence of liquor; but the crime is immeasurably aggravated when the offen lers object is to deter a non-commissioned officer from performing his duty or to revenge himself for a fancied injury. Offences of this nature are properly made punishable by penal servitude for life or by any less punishment with the intention that punishment shall be awarded according to the nature and degree of the offence. The lives of Her Majesty's subjects must be ensured, and above all officers and non-commissioned officers must be protected in the execution of their duty, therefore in aggravated cases the Commander-in-Chief will not hesitate to confirm sentences which inflict upon such offenders the highest sentences sanctioned by law.

Indian Exchange.—As regards the course of the Exchange it is difficult to form any estimate. The business year in India may be conveniently said to come to an end when the monsoons break—that is, towards the end of June. If, then, we assume that the new year begins with July and ends with June, it may be said roughly that for the three years ended with June, 1885, the imports into India of commodities, silver, India Council drafts, railway bills, and rupee paper exceeded the value of the exports from India. It is generally assu ued that the remittances homefrom Europeans in India amount to 300 or 400 lacs of rupees annually, and to cover these remittances there ought to be an equivalent excess in the exports from India over the imports of all kinds; but for the three years referred to it is reasonably certain that this excess has not been nearly reached, and consequently the remittances to India have been too large for the sales from India. A necessary consequence of this is the fall in the exchange, as all experience in the past teaches. But during the year just ended—that is, ended with June last—there has been a very great change. As far as can be estimated, the exports from India exceed the imports by more than 500 lacs of rupees. This being so, we ought rea onably to look for a rise in the exchange; but then comes in the consideration as to the probable action of the India Council, and also as to the probable price of silver. If the India Council draws the full amount which it was estimated in the Budget it would draw, then a rise in the exchange becomes impossible. If, on the other hand, the India Council considerably limits its drawings, it is reasonable to expect before many months are over a considerable improvement, in the exchange, unless, indeed, silver continues to fall. There are no means of ascertaining the amount of silver which can be raised at the present price. In those mines where silver is largely mixed with gold it is evident that the mining is carried on chiefly for the gold, and that at

GOOD QUEEN ANNE.*

The reign of Queen Anne may be said to be the Augustan Age of England's history. Not only was it, to quote Mr. Davenport Adams's language, "crowded with great or remarkable men and women in politics, in letters, in art, in society—men and women who, through a variety of circumstances, are as familiar and women who, through a variety of circumstances, are as familiar to us as, or even more, familiar than the famous personages of times much more nearer to our own;" but it was the epoch which "witnessed the foundation of our naval supremacy and the origin of our military prestige." A work, therefore, which glances at the prominent characters of the day, and gives in an interesting and readable shape sufficient information about the leading characters of the reign to enable the public to form an oninion for themselves, is a welcome addition to the storehouse leading characters of the reign to enable the public to form an opinion for themselves, is a welcome addition to the storehouse of literary knowledge. Mr. Adams leads off with the stage, and proclaims that in place of the "thousand and one" theatres of which London can now boast, there were at the close of the seventeenth century no more than four—Drury Lane, Queen's Theatre, Haymarket, the Dorset Gardens Theatre, Fleet street, and Liebly Lane First Workers of Philips the first two were and Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre-of which the first two were successful, while the last two were open at intervals only to be closed when failure attended their efforts Of dramatists there was no lack, though on the authority of Macaulay the literature of the stage was "earthly, sensual, devilish." Colley Cibber, pilloried as he was in the "Dunciad," was a play-writer of no mean order; none the less he contrived to raise up a host of enemies by an none the less he contrived to raise up a host of enemies by an unlucky knack of saying the right thing at the wrong time. Then there were Wycherley, Sir George Vanbrugh, Congreve, Farquhar, Mrs. Centlivre, and Hill. But it was reserved for Sir Richard Steele to "employ the stage as an agent in the elevation of the moral standard of society," and as a consequence his plays are read and remembered, while the compositions of his contemporaries are buried in the dust of oblivion. Amongst actors the palm must, perhaps, be given to Booth, if only for the remarkable skill with which he performed the part of the "Ghost" in Hamlet, a character in which he stood in his day absolutely unanurosched; then there was Doggett, famous in this our time unapproached; then there was Doggett, famous in this our time for the "Coat and Badge" of aquatic renown. Who, too, has not heard of the four queens, each and all of whom could lay claim to the crown of beauty—Mrs. Barry, Mrs. Bracegidle, Mrs. Mountford, and Mrs. Bowman? Add to the list the vircuous Mrs. Betterton, and it may be questioned whether, from this point of view, any age in England's history could stand comparison with the days of good Queen Anne.

Passing on to music and musicians there is, perhaps, still greater room for glorying. Not only was the opera founded in this country at this time, but those two noble institutions, the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal Society of Musicians, also first saw the light of day during the same period. Does not, too, the nation owe a debt of gratitude to Croft for the magnificent by identical property of the property of the period of the property of the period of the burial service which has immortalised his name; to Carey, who gave his countrymen "God save the Queen" and the exquisite ballad, "Sally in our Alley;" or even to Blow, the organist, if only for his numberless anthems?

Art has but one great representative, but he stands facile princeps amongst the architects which this country has ever produced. S.r Christopher Wren immortalised the metropolis with St. Paul's Cathedral, which in turn immortalised its designer; if cally he had been permitted after the great fire to remodel the capital of this empire in accordance with his notions of taste and propriety, what a superb result would have followed. But "bumbledom" was rampant, and Loudon lost its golden oppor-

It is said by Mr. Adams that Churchill Duke of Marlborough "first taught English soldiers how to conquer." The praise is high, but not undeserved. A perusal of the pages in the work before us which are devoted to the well-known victory at Blenheim, to the scarcely less important, though less widely popular. battle of Ramillies, to say nothing of other episodes in the career of this extraordinary man, will leave an impression that, as regards the qualities which must needs centre in a great general and leader of men, the warrior of Queen Anne stands second to none eather of men, the warrior of Queen Anne stands second to none of the greatest military geniuses which have ever adorned the pages of time. The knight errantry of a Peterborough was dimmed with the glories of the more dazzling luminary of a Churchill, but in an age of romance and adventure few "did and dared" more than "my lord of Monmouth" (the title by which the Earl is better known), as courageous a warrior as ever drew steel or handled a sword. For naval heroes it will suffice to quote Sir George Rooke and Sir Cloudesley Shovel, the former the earl of daring immortalized by the histories. deed of daring immortalised by the historian Macaulay; the latter remembered for a brave life and a sad death by drowning off the shores of his native land.

Mr. Adams devotes his second volume to men of letters, and what an array of inte lectual grants is presented to us! There is the melancholy Dean Swift, with his immortal work, "Gulliver's

" Good Queen Anne." By W. H. Davenport Adams. London: Remington and Co. 1886.

Travels;" Addison, the purest of English writers; Steele, the dramatist and essayist; Daniel Defoe, the "lonely" author of "Robinson Crusoe;" to say nothing of lesser writers, such as Dr. Arbuthnot, Bishop Berkeley, Dr. Prideaux, Dr. Clarke, Lord Bolingbroke, and the most elegant inditer of letters which the country has ever produced, the accomplished Lady Mary Wortley Amongst poets the palm is due to Alexander Pope, possibly the most finished versifier of all the sons of England who have a niche in the Temple of Fame. In the second rank, there are Gay, with in the Temple of Fame. In the second rank, there are Gay, with his "Beggars' Opera;" Prior, famous for epigrams; Tickell, whose "Elegy on Addison" saved its author from oblivion; Ambrose Philips and his pastoral poems; Young, the melancholy roet, remembered for his "Night Thoughts." These all appear on the pages of "Good Queen Anne," sketched with a master's hand. Enough is given of their career to create interest, while sufficient is omitted to banish weariness; added to this the criticisms are candid, skilful, and unbiassed. This being so, the volumes are welcome as calightening the public in regard to the literature of welcome, as enlightening the public in regard to the literature of England's Augustan Age, when the hand of Britain's progress first began to move onwards upon the dial of time, and "the neat little, tight little island" commenced to take that lead amongst the nations of the earth, which, in spite of all difficulties, it still holds in this, the jubilee year of the Victorian Era.

TAVBATU-N-NASÜH.*

The "Tavbatu-n-Nasūh; or, Repentance of Nasūh," being a text book for probationers studying for the Indian Civil S. rvice, the Secretary for State for India in Council very properly made a grant in aid of the cost of issue. The work was entrusted to Mr. Kempson, well known in India as the Director of Public Instruction in the North-West Provinces, who has enriched the text with explanatory notes alike learned in agenting and text with explanatory notes, alike learned, in cresting, and instructive. The Editor calls attention to the peculiar type used in the Hindustani portion of the volume. Elegance has, doubtless, been sacrificed; but we have reason to know by experience that the cost of publishing Oriental works has been materially reduced by the use of a peculiar fount, designed by Messrs. Allen, the well-known Oriental publishers, so as to admit of Roman letters and the Eastern characters being placed side by side just as if they were all one and the same type. Hitherto the amount of "packing" incumbent involves a considerable expenditure, which the present method renders unnecessary. The transliteration adopted seems to us in any case somewhat peculiar. Why, for in. why, for the stance, is "Mū;a" written with an "Ū," and "Mom" with an "O?" Why, in the case of "lifafa," is the final "h" rendered by "a," while the same letter in "ámádah" is written "ah?" Why, too, if "Qaul-o-fe'l" is right, is not "Karr wa farr" wrong, or vice versá? It would be easy so multiply instances, but enough has been said to indicate what is well known to sevente that transliteration is to indicate, what is well known to savants, that transliteration is the bete noir of Orientalists. In all other respects the work will bear the most searching criticism.

THE GRAMMAR OF INDIAN FINANCE.+

All books on Indian Finance necessarily deal with the same facts and figures; and, although, perhaps, few subjects are less understood, there are fewer still on which it is so difficult to obtain from the average Briton a moderately attentive hearing. This circumstance is in part to be accounted for by the appalling array of figures which all "Blue," and most other, books on the topic, present, and from which the uninitiated are expected to disentangle the salient facts.

Mr. Biggs' brochure of some fourscore pages is to be commended for avoiding the common fault. It is not a mere mass of numerals, but an interesting disquisition on each of the various branches of revenue, with suggestions, many of which betray the writer's familiarity with his subject.

Anomalies, such as the payment per head towards Imperial taxation being;—in Bengal, 11d.; Madras, 1s. 94d.; Bombay, 2s. 41d.; Burma, 3s. 5d., are noted, and, so far as can be done, accounted for.

Many points are, too, placed in a somewhat novel light. We are, for instance, assured that, after giving credit to the country for the value of railways and other assets (such as cash balances, &c.), its net liabilities do not exceed 14½ millions sterling; and that "the public buildings all over India, the salt mines, the opium factories and stock, the stores of the various departments—civil, public works, military and marine, the steamers, the dockyards, the mints and stock, the reserved forests, Cooper's Hill and the India Office" must greetly exceed this sum. India's Hill and the India Office," must greatly exceed this sum. India's assets, says the author, "far exceed her liabilities, and her balance-sheet is such as is possessed by no other country: it is the most favourable in the world" (pp. 78-79). (By the way, does Mr. Bi gs mean that the "assets" of the United Kingdom, for instance are not reach its National Debt ?) for instance, are not worth its National Debt?)

+ &quot;The Grammar of Indian Finance." By T. Hesketh Biggs, F.S.S., Financial Department of the Government of India. London: P. S. King and Son, King-street, Westminster. 1886.

The annual exodus to Simla, the reorganization of the Civil Service, the enlistment of Eurasians, the location in the hills of more European troops, the means to be adopted to extricate the more haropean troops, the means to be adopted to extricate the agriculturists from the hands of the money-lender, are all touched on, the remarks on each being generally sensible. And, as a matter of course, the Exchange question is considered. It seems to be our author's opinion (pp. 56-57) that the actual loss to India by Exchange has not been nearly so great as is generally supposed. Unfertunately, the loss to the Government, whatever he its armount is dealy increasing with the continued fall in the be its amount, is daily increasing with the continued fall in the value of silver, while to Government servants, whether they draw their income from India, or, have to remit home while serving their income frem India, or, have to remit home while serving there, the reduction of income is, and has been, simply ruinous. Mr. Biggs' remedy is, ultimately, bimetallism, with, for the present, a seignorage on the silver coinage, by which India "would redress the injury she is now suffering from the want of stability in her standard." We are, however, compelled to avow our conviction that the latter measure would barely touch the fringe of the difficulty.

Mr. Biggs' book, without pretending to be exhaustive, gives, as to each of the matters referred to by him, a clear view as far as the goes; and, while his figures are unimpeachable, his deductions from them will for the most part commend themselves to the general reader, whose knowledge of Indian Finance will certainly be increased by the study of this its "Grammar."

A WORD FOR IRELAND.*

"In the days of our youth" the Roman Catholic representatives of Ireland in the House of Commons formed a small compact body, profanely called "The Pope's Brass Band." We have now got far beyond the (then absorbing) topic of Maynooth; "Repale" has come more to the fore than ever it did in the days of O'Connell, or of the 1848 cabbage-garden; and its supporters, numbering some fourscore, are directed by a Protestant.

All opinions should be represented in Parliament. While loving the Union, and, on this ground, rejoicing to welcome many members who, though as yet unknown to fame, are pledged to uphold it; we may yet regret the loss of such of their antagonists as are representative men, and, in some cases, possible statesmen. The Commons will doubtless miss something in the (probably temporary) absence of Mr. Healy, though he be often unfair in argurary) absence of Mr. Healy,† though he be often unfair in argument, and almost always vituperative. An Irish member is reported thus to have replied to an opponent: "I hurrl his dirrty insinuation into his dirrty teeth, which are false, and probably not paid for." Accepting this national estimate of Ireland's own representatives, we are the better pleased to be able to say that, though expecting something of this kind in Mr. Healy's book, we have found it, in the main, temperately written.

The title, "A Word for Ireland," is quite a misnomer. No one wants "words" in favour of Ireland. No one will deny that to Ireland has, in times past, been meted out harder measure than has fallen to the lot of many conquered countries. Nor will anyone hesitate to avow that an Irishman can, when good, vie with the best, and, when bad, not fall short of the worst. All this (except the last) Mr. Healy tells us. But this is unpractical talk, and we want, in a book of this kind, to find some real practical guidance.

We are bound to say that we here look for it in vain.

We are bound to say that we here look for it in vain.

The main difficulty of Ireland is the holding of the greater portion of the land by a race "alien" in sentiment, in religion, and (in many cases) in residence, from the population. This race (we believe we are accurately stating Mr. Healy's case) habitually rack-rented its tenantry. Good! We always understood that Mr. Gladstone's Land Acts (which, as we were assured, were to put all things right for ever and a day) had fully met the case. Not a bit of it, says our author; these laws were so badly administered by the Courts that they were practically useless! Now Mr. Healy doubtless knows, as do all barristers, the virtue of "abusing plaintiff's attorney" when you have no case. We are far from saying that Mr. Healy is in this position, but he is lavish enough of censure; and surely he presumes far on our credulity when he asks us to believe that everyone, from the Lord-Lieutenant to the erewhile barristers who compose the Appeal Courts tenant to the erewhile barristers who compose the Appeal Courts in land cases—men not less able, or less honourable, than himself-have stooped to defraud the poor Irish peasant of one jot of what the law intended him to have.

We have heard a great deal—by no one better urged than by the present writer—of the excellent results to be expected from locating an Irish Parliament in College Green; and we are triumphantly referred to Grattan's "Parliament" as evidence of what an Irish Parliament is capable of effecting. It did not suit the purpose of so able an advocate as Mr. Healy to enter into the question, Whence did this body spring? By whom chosen? Was it not, in the then state of the franchise, an assembly of nominees of the very landlords who, and whose works, are to Mr. Healy as Anathema Maranatha? We will not go so far as to assert that this was the sole cause of whatever success this so-called assert that this was the sole cause of whatever success this so-called "Parliament" may have achieved. But of this we are sure, that no comparison could be more absurd than one between Grattan's "Parliament," and one practically nominated by the "National" League. The one would derive its "mandate" from the upper, the other from the very lowest, stratum of Irish society.

We do not, it will be seen, think, that even from the Irish point of view, an Irish Parliament is desirable. This is, however, the one panacea of the so-called Nationality" in the populations of Ireland than there is in those of Austro-Hungary or of India). What, then, is the remedy for what is universally admitted to be a deplorable state of things? What is to be done to put an end to the outrages which are a disgrace to civilisation? Our answer is simple: enforce the law against their perpetrators and abettors. The criminal law, much the same in Ireland as in England, is, as here administered, found sufficient. Its provisions commend themselves to common sense, and the population is, to use an old phrase, "law-abiding." In Ireland the law as there administered is insufficient. Why? Because the population is lawless.*

It is, then, not the law, but its enforcement, which is inadequate. Then strengthen the powers who have to enforce it, and sweep away all existing obstacles. If Irish juries refuse to convict on plain evidence, dispense with them. If Irishmen cannot possess weapons without using them to injure their neighbours, take the arms away. Oh! but this is "coercion," about which Mr.

not possess weapons without using them to injure their neighbours, take the arms away. Oh! but this is "coercion," about which Mr. take the arms away. Oh! but this is "coercion," about which Mr. Healy, who is very mealy-mouthed about outrages, has a good deal to say. Certainly, it is that which "coercion" means—restraint. Self-restraint? Assuredly, if we can get it; it is the best of all kinds of restraint. But, if we cannot get it from within, we must have it from without—quocunque modo rem.

In England, Scotland, and Wales, this external restraint, or "coercion," comes, for the reasons adverted to, but little into "coercion," comes, for the reasons adverted to, but little into play. Evil-doers are comparatively few, and the sense of the people is against them. But then the law is, here, what S. Paul tells us that it ought to be—"a terror, not to the good, but to the evil." The law "beareth not the sword in vain"; it is an "avenger to execute wrath on him that doeth evil." Let it be so in Ireland. Let outrages be unflinchingly put down; and as to their alleged causes—excessive rents and evictions—Mr. Healy does not deny that the Land Acts, properly administered, would does not deny that the Land Acts, properly administred, where the every necessity.

We are in favour of giving to each and every part of the Empire such control over local matters as each may be competent to exercise. But of the four component parts of the United Kingdom, Ireland, being the least "law abiding," and the most unruly, is the last on which we should desire to try the experiment. It is not to the naughtiest of his children that a wise father would first give the most liberty.

His many friends in Travancore will hear of his death with the greatest sorrow, for his bright, manly, unselfish disposition made him a universal favourite, and his handsome face and cheery voice will long be remembered. A "thoroughly good all round man," his splendid physique and untiring energy, combined with perfect coolness in the presence of large game, enabled him to turn to good account his opportunities as a shikary, and many a magnificent trophy has fallen to his rifle. * This is not the place to dwell on the fearful responsibility assumed, in this matter, by the Church of Rome, whose priests, not content with ignoring the "meum and tuum" of the 8th (with them the 7th) Commandment of the Decalogue, in their teachings of the people, actually hound them on to violence and rapine. That these instigators and abettors of crime could be restrained by their bishops, and that the Pope could, if he chose, compel the bishops to restrain them, needs no argument. Leo XIII is morally responsible for every outrage—and they are not few in number—which a priest has suggested from the altar, or has knowingly permitted.

CALCUTTA CONDEMNED.

THERE is nothing like being "thorough" in argument or in action. By a resolute determination to force his own belief upon others a man often strengthens in his own mind a creed which was at first weak and shadowy. Just now there is an agitation in India regarding the annual migration of the Viceroy and the heads of Departments to Simla, and public meetings have been held to protest against what is declared to be an unnecessary waste of time and money. The object of the worthy people of Calcutta in making their protest is plain enough as we pointed out in a previous article. The permanent fixture of the Government at Calcutta would give commerce, trade, and society better chances to make money or to while away the dulk hours of Indian exile. It is the "season" when the Viceroy is in Calcutta—and business and pleasure then flourish as far as it is possible in days when hospitality is being depreciated like the rupee. For the days of the good cheer when merchant princes entertained their friends and the strangers within their gates with lavish profusion have gone never to return, and are only memories of the past. The burden of hospitality lies now chiefly upon the Viceroy, and is not altogether shared by the members of his Council or by wealthy private individuals. Therefore, the wandering away of the Viceregal Court means dulness and depression to Calcutta society and trade. One can, fully, understand the argument against the "Simla exodus" from the Calcutta point of view. But, strange to say, there comes this month from Calcutta itself an argument all in favour not only of the annual migration, but insisting that Simla should be recognised as the permanent official residence of the Imperial Government. It is certainly curious to read, in the current number of the Calcutta Review, the following :-

Is it absolutely necessary that the Government of India should be fixed in Calcutta? Is there any peculiar sanctity in the banks of the Ganges which forces us to select that most unsalubrious spot as the point from which the Viceroy is to direct the policy of this Empire and to rule the destiny of three hundred millions of the human race? What does India gain by placing the Governor-General and his principal advisers in a climate in which mental exertion must be a species of torture and bodily activity is almost impossible?

We require our Viceroy to hold his Court in a city built in the we require our viceroy to hold his Court in a city with in the midst of a pestilential swamp on the banks of a mighty river that seeks the sea through innumerable channels through a district of wild and pestilential jungle. There is no cause, except that found in tradition, why the residence of the Governor-General should be fixed permanently at Calcutta, and there are innumerable reasons why it should be fixed elsewhere.

Had the above appeared in some newspaper printed at a hill station it might have called for little notice, but when it appears in the leading Review of India published at Calcutta, during the very time that the agitation against the Government migration from the City of Palaces is going on, it is humorous in the extreme. The writer does not bring forward many real arguments against Calcutta, but he does not hesitate at making some very bold assertions. Amongst these it is stated that the climate of Calcutta killed Lord Dalhousie! "Lord and Lady Dalhousie, Lord and Lady Canning, have fallen victims to the climate." We are also informed that "Calcutta has become a deadly residence to our Viceroys." "Lord Lawrence did not survive his return to England many years. The most herculean frames, the naturally strongest constitutions, have succumbed to the stifling heat and the oppressive sultriness of Calcutta during the summer months and the rains." Sir John Lawrence did not trouble Calcutta with his presence during this oppressive period, but this fact has not troubled the writer, who also forgets or ignores that the Judges of the High Court and many other Englishmen who go rather late in life to Iudia manage to exist in Calcutta during the hot weather and the rains. Indeed, it may be hazarded as a fact that life in Calcutta during the rains is preferable to existence at Simla during the same period. But Simla, according to this writer, must become the fixed home of the Vicero ys of India during their tenure of office. "Such a change is absolutely necessary if the office of the Governor-General is to retain that high position which all friends of the Indian people whom we have taken upon ourselves to govern most ea rnestly desire for it." This is dogmatic enough, if not altogether convincing. The writer protests too much against Calcutta as "the most enfeebling of Asiatic climates" in trying to make out a case for the Government to remove from it. The case, however, has not been made out yet, and we fancy that, in spite of the agitation which has been raised, the custom which has obtained for so many years of Calcutta being the winter and Simla the summer residence of the Viceroys of India. will not for the present be disturbed-unless, indeed, Lord Randolph Churchill has the courage of his opinions when he returns to the India Office, and forbids the exodus to Simla altogether.

SOLDIERS IN THE HILLS.

The following has just been published as a General Order: The Commander-in-Chief requests that General Officers Commanding Divisions and Districts in which hill stations are located will issue such orders as will ensure the summer months at such stations being fully utilised for the instruction of troops stationed

The contracted space available as parade grounds in hill can-tonments points to the advantage of extending the system of in-dependent company instruction. In this view a battalior might be ordered to rendezvous at a selected spot at a distance from cantonments, the Company Commanders issuing detailed orders and moving independently. After the assembly of the corps the companies might similarly be directed to move independently to their barracks.

This practice will ensure the frequent movement of troops in organised bodies over the hills, without the tedium of regular route marchings, and will give them a thorough knowledge of the ground in the vicinity.

Care should be taken that the instruction which certain non-comparisoned officers and man in each corns have received in commissioned officers and men in each corps have received in sketching, and preparation of road reports under the provisions of G.O. of 1883, should not be forgotten, and officers commanding stations might from time to time detach small parties under a stations might from time to time detach small parties under a non-commissioned officer to march to neighbouring stations, the marches being executed in conformity with written instructions, and a road report, with sketches, submitted on their return.

Signalling, too, both by day and night, should be constantly practised between stations whenever practicable, and groups of messages should be passed on from one point to another to test the training of signallers.

Finally, it might be possible for General officers after the rainy season to unite the troops under their command in the hills in some general scheme of instructional maneguves.

some general scheme of instructional manœuvres.

CAPT. H. C. WYLLY, 2nd Derbyshire Regiment, lately in charge of the Japanese officers, has been appointed to officiate as Assistant Quartermaster-General, Presidency Division, and has taken over the duties from Captain Hamilton, 2nd Royal West Surrey Regiment.

GAZETTEER

TERRITORIES UNDER THE GOVERNMENT

VICEROY OF INDIA.

EDWARD THORNTON.

(Formerly Press Commissioner in India, &c.)

ARTHUR N. WOLLASTON, C.I.E,

H.M. INDIAN (HOME) SERVICE.

(Translator of the Anvar-i-Suhailí, &c.)

WHEN Thornton's "Gazetteer of India" was originally presented to the public, it was the only compilation of its kind, and it was obviously desirable that, within reasonable limits, the work desirable that, within reasonable limits, the work should be sufficiently comprehensive to give the reader some insight into the history of the various localities enumerated. Since that date, however, Hunter's "Imperial Gazetteer" has been prepared, which is not only much more ample than its predecessor, but is still to be greatly enlarged in the New Edition now in course of production. In these circumstances it has been thought incumbent, when issuing a New Edition of Thornton's "Gazetteer" corrected up to date, to modify in some measure the plan of the work by omitting much of the retail, and giving only such leading facts and figures as will suffice for ordinary purposes of reference, a plan which has the additional advantage of reducing the work to one moderate sized volume.

It is obvious that the value of the New Edition

It is obvious that the value of the New Edition must depend in a large measure upon the care and judgment which have been exercised in the preparation of the letter-press. The task way in the first instance, undertaken by Sir Roper Lethbridge, whose literary attainments and acquaintance with India were considered to qualify him to a marked degree for an undertaking demanding considerable knowledge and experience. In order, further, to render the work as complete and perfect as is possible, the Publishers deemed it prudent to subject the pages to the scrutiny of a second Editor, in the person of Mr. Arthur N. Wollaston, whose lengthened experience gives to his criticism an unusual degree of weight and importance. The joint names which appear on the title-page will, it is hoped, serve as a guarantee to the public that the "Gazetteer" is in the main accurate and trustworthy, free alike from sins of omission and commission. It will be found to contain many hundreds of place not included in any former It is obvious that the value of the New Edition commission. It will be found to contain many hundreds of place not included in any former edition, while the areas and populations have been revised by the data given in the Census Report of 1881.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumi, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTRUY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian recople.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and consorvative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

'The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette' has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. Assertes of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

ing weekiy on regimental banks and an analystrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its corre pondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is sampled direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the Frensh, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Freign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of farts and public opinin in England regarding Military affairs.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1886.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

The overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 13th July; from Allahabad to the 11th July; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 10th July.

THREE additional regiments—the 3rd Goorkhas, the 23rd Bombay Infantry, and a Madras Regiment—are being sent to Upper Burma.

THE Government of India has authorised General White to increase his Mounted Infantry from 200 to 800 men. General White will reinforce Tammu from Mandalay by way of the Chindwin River.

Some sensation has been caused at Mingyan by the fact of Lieutenant Lloyd, of the Somersetshire Regiment, going on board the Flotilla company's steamer Spint Samboo, demanding the delivery of some dhoolies shipped for Nimboo, and when refused, placing Captain Morgan, the master, under the arrest of a guard with fixed bayonets, while the remainder of the men ransacked the steamer.

COLONEL LEMESURIER, commanding at Mingyan, has approved of the action taken by Lieutenant Lloyd, as the dhoolies were urgently wanted for the removal of sick and wounded soldiers.

During April and May the revenue collected in Upper Burma exceeded  $2\frac{1}{2}$  lakhs, about one-half being from the land. The expenditure during the same period amounted to  $4\frac{3}{4}$  lakhs, of which  $2\frac{3}{4}$  lakhs were for Police and Marine.

At the Supreme Legislative Connoil, a Bill has been introduced for the more speedy trial of accused persons in Lower Burma. The Bill has been necessitated by the outbreak of dacoity.

UPPER BURMA is to be divided into four divisions— Mandalay, Bhamo, Mingyan, and Chindwin—with a Com-

The missioner for each.

UPPER BURMA does not appear to agree with the health of British officers. Sir Charles Bernard is confined to his house at Mandalay, and General White has returned to Mandalay from up-country in bad health.

THE climate is proving very trying to the troops stationed at Bhamo and its vicinity.

Owing to a similar cause, the garrison at Tummoo has had to be withdrawn, and put in a hill camp twenty miles away.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE has expressed approval, in principle, of the establishment of a Legislative Council for the North-West Provinces, and has asked the Government of India to work out the details.

Now that several of the Lieutenant-Governorships are about to become vacant, rumour is nominating successors to the present holders of the office. The latest gup is that Sir Lepel Griffin goes to the Punjab.

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE is now paying attention to the question of the rate of salary of Natives as compared with the salary of Europeans holding the same offices.

It is supposed that heavy loss of life and property has been caused by the floods in the Saharunpore and Umballa Districts.

MAJOR WILLANS, R.E., has been accidentally killed at Sylhet while opening a tin of ammonia for an ice machine.

THE 14th Bombay Infantry appears to have had a and two others at Mooltan and Murree.

THE latest news from the tea districts is that very heavy rain has fallen in the Darjiling Terai and the Duars, while in Assam the weather has been variable, being hot and dry in Sibsagar, and rather cold in Nowgong. In Kachar and Sylhet there has been good rain, and prospects are favourable. Red spider is still prevalent in Kamrup. In Chota Nagpur there has been plenty of rain after the late very hot weather.

The failures of two important commercial houses are announced simultaneously from Calcutta. Messrs. J. Reinhold and Co. have filed a petition in insolvency, and Messrs. E. Binning and Co., a very old-established firm, have also suspended payment.

A DESPATCH of the Government of India on the silver question, together with the reply of the Lords of the Treasury on the subject, has been published.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY Las realised a profit of Rs. 6,91,974 during the past half-year, and has declared a dividend at the rate of eleven per cent. per annum.

THE BANK OF BENGAL has declared a dividend at the rate of ten per cent. per annum.

THE BANK OF MADRAS has also declared a dividend for the half-year at the rate of nine per cent. per annum, adding Rs. 50,000 to the reserve fund, and carrying forward Rs. 41,916.

·Ir is stated that the Hyderabad Government intends to invest the Berar surplus for the past year in Government paper, and that extensive purchases have already been made through the local branch of the Bank of Bengal.

In reply to a communication from Mr. F. T. An up-country paper hears, on the "best authority," that the Government of India has received a despatch from the Imperial Government insisting on a curtailment of the expenditure incurred in the annual exodus to the hills.

THE AMIR OF CABUL has been suffering again from gout. Private letters from Northern Afghanistan say that the new Russian railway, after being pushed to within three marches of Sarakhs, has suddenly been stopped, owing, it is believed, to want of funds, though the engineers plead excessive heat as the cause. All the various surveys for lines to Merv, Penjdeh, and the Oxus, have been completed.

Moung Oung Myhein, the famous dwarf Court clown of ex-King Theebaw, is on a flying visit to Calcutta, en route to Europe and America. He is three feet high, proportionally well-built, twenty-four years old, half a maund in weight, and without the slightest approach to deformity. The late King of Barma installed him. a phoongyi or priest.

A DIVORCE case is being heard in the Chief Court, Lahore, in which Surgeon-Major Buchanan alleged adultery on the part of his wife with Lieutenant Chadwick in England, and two others at Mooltan and Murree.

The breaks on the railway below Umballa extend over twelve miles, the line being breached in three or more places. The damage appears to be more serious than was at first supposed, for it is now said that it will be impossible to restore communication for some time. The mails meantime will have to go vià Lahore and Ferozepore to Rewari.

THE summary of money and trade is still reported as "generally discouraging."

Potes of the Week.

The appointment of Sir R. Cross as Secretary of State for India has given to some of our daily contemporaries an opportunity of saying that "no novel and startling measures of reform need be looked for during his tenure of office." But in whose opinion does India want novel or startling measures of reform? Certainly not in the opinion of those who know India from a practical experience of the country and the people. What India wants, and has been wanting for a long time, is rest—rest from incessant and irritating experiments in legal and judicial enactments, and rest from the good intentions of the amiable reformers, European and Native, who cannot let well alone. If the new Secretary of State will only allow such rest to India, he will deserve higher honours than even the pecrage which now awaits him.

SIR JOHN GORST as Under Secretary for India will be perhaps better placed than had he been sent, as rumour at first gave out, to succeed Sir Grant Duff at Madras. The reason for his nomination to the latter post by the newspaper prophets was never given, but it probably was that he had claims which could not be overlooked by a Conservative Premier. He will bring to the India Office abilities and qualifications which will be of use to his chief, but which, without practical local experience, would have been of much smaller value in Madras. Some disappointment has been felt by Anglo-Indians who still retain an interest in Indian affairs that there has not been an endeavour to strengthen the hands of the Secretary of State by nominating to the India Office some Member of Parliament whose knowledge and judgment have been the result of intimate acquaintance with the India of to-day—such a man, for instance, as Mr. J. M. Maclean. Is it too late now to do so?

Mr. C. P. Ilbert, who returns to England to become Assistant Parliamentary Secretary as soon as he can be relieved from his official duties in India, will, we imagine, be glad to shake off the dust of the Eastern land from his shoes, and to walk on more congenial soil. India has been the grave of many reputations, but few officials have had their reputations so hanged, drawn, quartered, and gibetted as be has. It has not been yet allowed even decent burial. The memory of the unfortunate "Ilbert Bill" is still ranking in the minds of too many people, to urge with any chance of obtaining a fair hearing, that great wrong was done in passionate haste to an honest, painstaking servant of the State, who was merely carrying out what he conscientiously believed to be his duty. But five years hence, and some Englishmen who took part in the old agitation will perhaps wonder why they did it. The whirligig of Time may be on the side of Mr. Ilbert.

Nobody will question the claim of Mr. C. E. Buck to the honour which Her Majesty has conferred upon him for services rendered as Commissioner for the Government of India at the present Exhibition, as under the supervision of the Department of Revenue and Agriculture, of which he is Sccretary, the greater portion of the collections in the Indian Courts were provided. But questions are being asked as to whether there is any rule keyond that directed by the blind god Chance, or by his colleague Favoritism, which controls the distribution of such honours in other quarters? One of these questions comes from India. The Bombry Government has issued a Resolution complimenting the Bombay Committee for the Indian and Colonial Exhibition upon the result of their labours, and conveying the thanks of the Governor in Council to the President and members and to the Native Princes and Chiefs who contributed, but it makes no mention of other persons whose aid was invaluable.

COMMENTING upon such omission the Bombay Gazette remarks—"It is never a grateful task to inquire into the way in which the streams that flow from the fountain of honour are distributed. All that is clear in this matter is that some portion at least of the honours have been distributed on the principle that the more slender the claim the more readily should it be recognised. And this is a principle which necessarily excluded both Mr. Griffiths and Mr. Kipling from the roll of honour." But it is not in India only that surprise has been expressed at no public recognition having yet been made of the valuable services rendered by the gentlemen named. The surprise has been expressed in England by all who know the facts.

Whilst Finance Committees, Treasury Secretaries, and Political Economists continue to air their respective views on questions of currency, and bi-metallists and their opponents keep warm the arguments between themselves, the rupee continues to depreciate. Since December last it has fallen from nearly 1s. 6d. to rather less than 1s. 4½d. The Times says that a Royal Commission will be appointed to go into the whole question "before another six months are over." But why not now? The sooner the better, if any good is to be hoped for from such a Commission, which we don bt. One remedy has been proposed by an Auglo-Indian who has to remit from the East. Ho suggests that all officials at home who derive pay or pension from the revenues of India, should be paid in rupees, the rupee to be considered the equivalent of two shillings. He thinks that although this might be "hard" upon the gentlemen who stay at home, it would stir them up to some action towards helping those who suffer in India.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS has issued a very sensible General Order from Simla, granting certain indulgences to all weil-behaved soldiers, with a view to making the Service more popular and courts-martial for trivial offences less common. He recommends to Commanding Officers that the tattoo should be at half-past nine o'clock throughout the year, that recreation-rooms should be kept open till ten o'clock, that men in possession of one good conduct badge should receive the fullest indulgence in the grant of passes, consistent with the requirements of health, duty, and discipline, and be excused attendance at all roll-calls (including meals) except tattoo. His Excellency found that the experiment which he tried in this direction in Madras worked well, and he has every confidence in its adoption elsewhere. Sir Frederick is right. Treat the private soldier less like a child, and more like a sensible being whose honour may be trusted to, and the result will be better for the discipline and popularity of the army.

WE regret that we have been obliged to hold over until next week the publication of the very important and interesting Paper on the Forests of India, which was read lately in the Conference Hall of the Exhibition by Dr. Brandis, C.I.E., F.R.S.

A CONVENTION has been signed at Pekin arranging for the continuance of the decennial missions from Burma, China agreeing to British rule in Burma and promising to encourage trade, which will be regulated by a special convention. There will also be a commission for delimiting the fronticr. The Tibet mission is to be countermanded on account of local difficulties apprehended by the Chinese Government, who, on their part, engage to take steps to promote trade between India and Tibet.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(BY TELEGRAPH.) (Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUGUST 1. A long note on the effects of the low rate of exchange upon the Indian export trade, prepared by Mr. O'Connor, Assistant-Secretary of the Financial Department, has just been published, and, as it is issued in the official Gazette, it may probably be taken as expressing the views of the Government. The note is devoted to controverting the assertion that low exchange benefits India by stimulating trade. The writer begins by summarising the arguments for that assertion. They are—that low exchange gives the exporter a larger number of rupees for the sterling price of his merchandics, thus could have a been less than the statement of the sterling that the statement of the statem price of his merchandise, thus enabling him to sell more cheaply and stimulating consumption; that he is also able to give a better price to the cultivator, and so stimulate production; and that, while exports are stimulated and increased by the fall in the exchange, imports are correspondingly restricted.

Mr. O'Connor replies that these arguments leave out of sight Mr. O'Connor replies that these arguments leave out of sight important factors affecting trade in a greater degree than the exchange, and that they are unsound and opposed to facts. The exporter, he says, is certainly able to sell goods more cheaply in the consuming market, but this cheapness has not actually had the effect of specially stimulating exports. He does not actually receive a larger rupee-return for his goods, and consequently cannot give a better return to the cultivator. As regards imports, they cannot be restricted while exports are stimulated, for both must increase or decrease in the same ratio unless the country. must increase or decrease in the same ratio unless the country is increasing its debt to other countries. The fall in prices of imported goods having much exceeded the fall in exchange, there has been no such increase in their cost as to restrict consumption, and, in fact, there has been no restriction; low exchange has merely operated to counteract partially the loss to Indian trade resulting from low prices. Export trade has not made such progress since the exchange began to fall quickly and heavily—that is, during the last three years—as in previous years, when the exchange was higher and steadier. If trade has not actually fallen off, but made some relatively slow progress, the fact is due to the extension of railways, the reduction of freights, and to good seasons, and not to the fall in the exchange.

From these arguments Mr. O'Connor draws the conclusion that, as the heavy fall in prices, or, at any rate, a great part of the fall, and the low exchange are both the outcome of one cause -namely, the appreciation of gold, therefore an increase in the rate of exchange would be accompanied by a corresponding rise in gold prices, and no restriction on the Indian export trade would result from a recovery in the rate of exchange. He supports his case by a long array of figures, and then goes on to argue that the Indian export trade has actually decreased during the last two years. He concludes by asserting that the appreciation of gold dealt Indian trade a heavy blow by reducing the prices of Indian produce, while, on the other hand, it lessened the force of the blow by lowering the rate of exchange. With the remonetization of silver, the injury of low prices, with its attendant partial redress in low exchange, will, he thinks,

This note is likely to attract much attention at a moment when the rapid fall of exchange is rendering the question one of great interest to every person in India.

The Government has answered the inquiries addressed to it by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the Calcutta Trades Association regarding rumours lately prevalent as to the proposed abolition of the original sides of the High Courts. The answer states that about two years ago certain inhabitants of Calcutta memorialised the Government for an enlargment of powers of the Small Cause Court in respect of cases relating to real property. The memorial was referred to the High Court, which deprecated the property as a property of the court of the court of the property. the proposal as unsuitable to Calcutta, and expressed its readiness to diminish the expenses attending petty cases respecting immovable property by applying a special scale of costs to them. While the High Court's arswer was under consideration it became known to the Government that the Finance Committee was communicating with the High Court on various matters, and therefore the Government decided to defer further consideration of the memorial pending the submission of any recommendations that the Finance Committee might see fit to make on the subject.

It is stated that the Finance Committee has submitted a new scheme regarding financial contracts between the supreme and provincial Governments. It is understood that the committee had before it two distinct proposals on this subject. One was to place the contracts on an entirely new basis; the other was to modify and adjust them on existing lines. It is believed that the Government will incline to the latter, as the former would give the provinces tee large a charge of force is independent.

give the provinces too large a share of financial independence.

Another decision of the Finance Committee which has been made known is that it will recommend the entire abolition of the Military Works Branch of the Public Works Department.

A terrible and fatal accident occurred during the theatrical performance at Tinnevelly on Monday evening. The thatched building in which the performance was being held caught fire.

There were 400 or 500 persons present, and, as the doors opene l inward the crush prevented their being opened. Seventy persons were killed and sixty more injured, many very seriously. It is reported that the fire was the result of a preconcerted design. The North-Western Railway has again been breached by floods near Umballa, and the postal communication with the Punjab is deranged.

Colonel Lockhart has returned from Central Asia, and las assumed the duties of Quartermaster-General at Simla. The Maharajah of Kerowlee died last week. The rails of the Bolan Railway are now laid to Quetta.

The news of the abandonment of the Tibet Mission has caused some disappointment, but no great surprise, as the long delay in the start raised the suspicion that there was some difficulty in the way. Mr. Macaulay and the other members of the Mission and the Discipling head of the Mission are still at Darjeeling, but will probably disperse before long.

THE AFGHAN FRONTIER.

KHOJA SALEH, JULY 20. The Joint Commission has practically finished its labours. The whole of the frontier has now been demarcated by pillars, and there only remains in dispute a small tract containing eight square miles of cultivated land, with an annual revenue of a few hundreds of pounds. The question whether this is to remain Afghan territory or be given to Bokhara depends on the construction of the agreement of 1873, and it must be decided by the Cabinets which negotiated that agreement.

In the meantime, the Commission will probably dissolve itself, leaving, perhaps, one or two officers to erect the two or three pillars which will be required when the question has been

which will be required when the question has been decided.

The heat is great—over 100 degrees in the tents—but the bulk of the members of the mission and the escort are in the mountains near Mazar-i-Sharif, where the climate is excellent.

BURMA.

Captain Wilbraham, of the Somersetshire Light Infantry, died on the 22nd inst. of wounds recently received.

Much sickness prevails among the troops at Mandalay. Two hundred and fifty Europeans and 450 Natives are in the military hospitals.

The projected expedition to the ruby mines has been deferred until October. The action of the Government of India in letting the mines before they have been inspected, and without allowing public competition, is severely censured by the Rangoon Gazette. RANGOON, AUGUST 1.

On the 26th of last month Lieutenant Huggins, of the 21st Madras Native Infantry, surprised the insurgent Chief Hlaco while engaged in burning the village of Kanbyoo; the enemy's loss was 150 killed and wounded.

Major Persse, of the Somersetshire Light Infantry, has captured Magye, a village near Ava, killed 13 and capturing 37 incurrents.

The Yemathen district is very disturbed. The insurgents attacked Ningyan, and succeeded in burning some houses. Numerous skirmishes have occurred near Ningyan. On the 21st 200 men and two guns defeated 1,000 insurgents. Our loss was two killed, eight wounded. The engagement took place in a thick jungle. The enemy fought obstinately, and, availing themselves of cover, reached within 30 yards of the guns. The 16th Madras Regiment, 600 strong, has been sent to Ningyan. As the road is closed the troops had to assend the Sittang, and left road is closed the troops had to assend the Sittang, and left Tounghoo in a flotilla of 80 boats.

Sir Charles Bernard has returned to Mandalay.

Mr. Burges, Commissioner of Mandalay, starts to-morrow to assume his duties. Mr. Power, a Bengal civilian, is appointed Commissioner of the Minhla district of Upper Burma. The condition of Lower Burma is improving.

A POST OFFICE FOR CHINA.—The special correspondent of the London and China Telegraph writes that Sir Robert Hart, K.C.M.G, the Inspector-General of Customs, has prevailed upon the Chiness Government to adopt a very progressive measure, viz., a postal system, which, though at first on a small scale, it is anticipated will eventually lead to the incorporation of the "Middle Kingdom" in the Postal Union. The service, as at present proposed, will be between the Treaty Ports, and will be worked by the Customs; but from such ports it is intended to gradually organise the service in and throughout the country. The Chinese are Customs; but from such ports it is intended to gradually organise the service in and throughout the country. The Chinese are notoriously given to letter writing, and if a fair rate be charged they will doubtless avail themselves largely of the proposed service; indeed, there is no country calculated to produce a better revenue from postal and telegraphic sources than China, if, as above indicated, only moderate rates are charged. In this connection we are again tempted to allude to the circumstance that the French Post Office at Shanghai charges only half the rates demanded by the British Office for letters, &c., forwarded by the demanded by the British Office for letters, &c., forwarded by the same steamers. Moreover, it is surely an anomaly that letters posted on the Continent for ports in the far East should only be charged half the rates on those from the United Kingdom, as is the case.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

INDIAN AND COLONIAL FEDERATION. (Pioneer.)

It is natural that with L ndon full of Colonists and the Indo-Colonial Exhibition in full swing, projects of Federation should be in the air, and that they should be discussed with more than ordinary carnestness and animation. To us in India the question is how would federation affect India, and what rank would the Indian Empire take in the United States of Great Britain? Most advocates of the Indian I Colonial Federation omit India from the discussion, or content themselves with observing that she must for a long time to come remain as a dependency. This is a very convenient way of gliding over a difficulty, but the difficulty for all that remains, and, if federation is ever to take practical shape must be faced.

If, for the sake of argument, the solidarity of interest between England and the self-governing Colonies be conceded, no such admission is possible in the case of the Colonies and India. It cannot be too clearly stated that the Colonies have nothing to do with India. The form of Government which the Indian Empire represents is not in the same plane of politics with the self-governing democracies of Greater Britain. If national government in India were an accepted fact, the place which India would occupy in the Federation is obvious. But whilst India remains a dependency, it could by no possibility enter into the Federal Union. Would it then remain as a dependency of Great Britain, and as such subject to the court of the Provincial Parliament, or would it he made a remain as a dependency of Great Britain, and as such subject to the control of the Provincial Parliament, or would it be made a dependency of the Federal Government? We mention these alternatives without venturing an opinion upon them. Either is fraught with immense difficulties, and the fact that they have not been faced by the advocates of Federation shows the theoretical and academic character of their schemes. If India were to remain a provincial dependency of Britain, we should have the anomaly that the Federal Parliament and the Federal Government would that the Federal Parliament and the Federal Government would perpetually be concerned with questions of imperial foreign policy arising out of the relation of one member of the Federation to its special dependency. If, on the other hand, India were transferred to the Federal Government, we should have the still greater anomaly of the Colonies directing the administration of a country with the acquisition of which they had absolutely nothing to do with the acquisition of which they had absolutely nothing to do, and to the government of which their origin, their traditions, and their institutions are totally opposed. Are the Colonics prepared to share England's responsibility for her national debt? Are they ready to bear the cost of the next European struggle in which England may be forced to embark for the defence of India? Stated thus the question can only meet with a negative answer. The Indian Empire to our mind is in itself the most formidable The Indian Empire to our mind is in itself the most formidable barrier to all projects of confederation or federation hitherto propounded. The fact may be regretted, but there it is, and it must be recognised. But for India, Britain might withdraw from the international politics of Europe and throw in her lot with the new England of Australasia and the trans-Atlantic Colonies. But with India in her keeping, Britain must remain within the circle of European diplomacy and European wars; and this constantly leads her into paths where it is neither necessary nor desirable that her Colonies should follow.

RETRENCHMENTS IN THE LAW COURTS. (Bombay Gazette.)

The Finance Committee, whatever the practical result of their work may be, have already impressed the character of thoroughwork may be, have already impressed the character of thoroughness upon their investigations, and upon their suggestions for the reduction of expenditure. They have recently brought the High Courts within the area of their inquiry, and communications have been made to each, offering and inviting suggestions towards a more economical administration of the Courts. The Bombay High Court, we believe, has been asked to suggest ways and means of introducing economy in the staff and arrangements, and to give its opinion as to the possibility of introducing changes in the judicial organisation in the direction of greater speed and less expense by a transfer of jurisdiction on the Original Side, or otherwise. In the latter respect, as we have repeatedly shown, there wise. In the latter respect, as we have repeatedly shown, there is urgent call for reform, though it is only indirectly that this particular question, which is one of cheap and speedy justice, comes within the scope of the Committee's inquiry. Their mission has less relation to the interests of the suitor than of the finances, as they admit with something of cynical candour when, in discussing the state of things at Calcutta in a letter to the Registrar of the the state of things at Calcutta in a letter to the Registrar of the Bengal High Court, they observe that a mere lowering of Court-fees only enhances the objection which may be raised from a financial point of view. The letter to the Calcutta Court deals with many questions of great interest to us, for there is much in common between the evils that call for remedy in Bombay and in Bengal. It shows, to begin with, that if law in India is costly to the suitor it is also costly to the Government. In 1884-5, the four High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, and the North-West Provinces cost £258,000—we do not see, by the way, why the Committee should have set forth the grand totals in pounds sterling and the headsof expenditure in rupees—and the outlay was only partially covered by the receipts. In the Bengal Court the excess of expenditure over receipts on the Original Side last year was sixty-eight thousand rupees; on the Appellate Side it was nearly four lakhs and a-half. Thus the net cost was about five nearly four lakhs and a-half. Thus the net cost was about five lakhs. Here is ground tempting enough to a Committee charged above all things with cutting down superfluous outlay wherever they may see it, and the suggestions which they have made to the Calcutta Court show that they will not miss their opportunity. There, as in Bombay, the Original Side offers wide scope for profitable reform. It cost Rs. 2,98,659 last year, of which Rs. 1,08,500 went in salaries, Rs. 1,75,763 in establishment expenses, and Rs. 13,896 in contingencies. But the property represented by the suits which it thus cost nearly three lakhs to try was only twenty-eight lakhs, and this fact suggests to the Committee the question whether a portion of the work might not, without risk of a miscarriage of justice, be relegated to a less costly tribunal.

A ROMANCE OF THE RAINS.

Off did he strive: but strove in vain His love for her to smother, And she loved him-to put it plain: In short, they loved each other! He seldom wandered from her side, And people in the station, Who usually such things decide, Foretold a declaration. Yet little these two lovers wrecked, And love's young dream flowed on unchecked.

The winter sped, the summer came; 'Iwas now the rainy season; Somehow he did not seem the same; She could not tell the reason. Of late he had been hard to please; He paid a shorter visit And even then seemed ill at ease--She justly said "What is it? What makes you wriggle in your seat? Said he: "My dear, it's prickly heat."

A merry laugh. He looked dismayed: He thought that she was mockin She deftly thumped his shoulder-blade And said: "I've got it shocking. I'm twice as bad as you I'm sure, But what's the use of grieving?

Just rub your back against the door. I find it most relieving.
Come now, cheer up, and live in hope And go and try carbolic soap.

Concluded shortly was the match Despite the sultry weather—
Said they, "We'll both come to the scratch
And rub along together." Our local parson made them one, But wanted to baptise 'em; For he was ever full of fun,

And said he would surprise them.

And so (I thought 't was hardly fair)

He christened them the Prickly Pear. -Pioneer

CACTUS

THE PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

If we are to believe all that is said by the local rapers, the judges of the Chief Court of the Punjab are the most hardworked public servants in India. Work is accumulating sorapidly that they are quite unable to keep up with it. The result is that the state of business in the Chief Court is assuming a condition which falls little short of a public scandal. This is what the local paper has to say on the subject:—

"Such is the block of work, that cases are now being fixed for hearing in December 1887. In other words, an appellant in a civil suit has to wait over a near before he can be heard in oppo-hearing in December 1887. In other words, an appellant in a civil suit has to wait over a year before he can be heard in opposition to a judgment which, perhaps, on the face of it, is as wrong as it can be. The reason for this state of things is plain. The Court is undermanned. No judges in India work so early and late as the judges of the Chief Court, but their labour is vain to stem the tide of work that steadily flows in with increasing volume. The delay above adverted to is in itself a substantial grievance; but it is seriously aggravated by the operation of the little-known provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and Limitation Act relating to the abatement of appeals. Under Limitation Act relating to the abatement of appeals. Under these, as at present interpreted by the Court, the death of an appellant or respondent necessitates an application for the substitution of the legal representative of the deceased on the record within sixty days of the date of such death. No rule of law has within sixty days of the date of such death. No rule of law has worked more cruelly on the mass of the ignorant peasants, whose disputes form the subject of the larger portion of the lisigation that comes before the Court. An ordinary occurrence is somewhat of this kind. An appellant files his appeal in a case in which there are several respondents. He gets a slip of paper, a parcha which tells him that a date, some months distant, is fixed for the hearing of the case; and he contentedly journeys back to his village, often hundreds of miles away, to wait patiently for the long-deferred day. In the interval, in the ordinary course of probabilities, one of the respondents dies. To his dismay, an objection is raised, at the outset, that as one of the respondents has died, and no steps have been taken by the appellant within sixty days to bring his heir on the record, the appeal must abate. Asked why he has omitted to take the steps required by law, he replies that he knew nothing about it being necessary. This is held to be an insufficient excuse, and the appeal abates accordingly. The above is a matter of constant occurrence; and yet our Courts profess to be guided by the rule "equity, justice, and good conscience," in the disposal of matters that come before them. The fault does not, however, lie with the judges. They have only to interpret the law, and cannot deviate from it. The fault lies with the Legislature which imposes harsh, technical rules on a people still for the most part in a state of the rudest ignorance; and which gives no discretion to the courts to relax these rules on suitable occasions."

The Lahore paper thinks that the only remedy for this state of things is to lighten the strain of work now imposed on the Chief Court; and adds that the time has now arrived for creating in the Province a High Court after the model of that existing at Allahabad.

BENGAL.

COLONEL A. FITZHUGH, C.B., of the Bengal Staff Corps, has been permitted to retire from the service, with effect from the 14th July.

HIS HIGHNESS THE MAHARAJA OF DURBHANGA has made a donation of Rs. 1,000 to the funds of the Entally Orphanage.

MAHARANI SURNOMOVE.—The thanks of the Lieutenant-Governor has been given to Maharani Surnomoye, M.C.I., for her liberality in erecting a building for Hindu female lepers at the Asylum in Amherst-street, and providing it with beds and bedding, and also for building a dead house for the Asylum at a total cost of Rs. 7,765.

THE MAHOMEDANS AND THE VICEROY.—A Calcutta correspondent telegraphs:—"The Committee of the Central National Mahomedan Association have passed a resolution thanking his Excellency the Viceroy for appointing another Mahomedan to the Supreme Council, and for conferring the distinction on Syed Ameer Hossein, whose appointment has given great satisfaction to the Mahomedan community."

The late Mr. Miller.—The following Calcutta High Court report is one of the many complete denials which can be furnished to the assertions that the late joint manager of the Burdwan Raj plundered his charge:—"Mr. Dignam, appearing on behalf of the widow of the late Thomas de Burgh Miller, made an application for the grant of probate and letters of administration to the widow, under the will of the deceased. The attorney stated that the estate was worth some Rs. 35,000, of which certain tea and other shares represented Rs. 20,000, and the balance some Rs. 4,000 in the Bank and arrears of salary due. His lordship granted the application."

THE MAHOMEDANS OF BENGAL.—The Mahomedans of Bengal are, says a Calcutta paper, in a chronic state of discontent with the small amount of special assistance rendered by Government towards their education, and with the very trifling share of Government patronage enjoyed by them. This feeling, it is added, finds vent from time to time in petitions and protests; and the present widespread movement, which has derived intensity from the recommendations of the Education Commission, is merely the expression of a grievance never absent from the minds of the Mussulman community.

MADRAS.

THE Infant Crown Prince of Mysore is gradually recovering from his late illness, which was very nearly proving fatal.

THE long-talked of transfer of the Mysore State Railway to the Southern Mahratta Railway is now, says a Bangalore paper, an accomplished fact.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS IN MADRAS.—A useful idea is about to be carried out under the direction of the Madras Agricultural Department. A party furnished with a number of ploughs and other farm implements is about to set out on tour through the southern districts in order to demonstrate their utility to the people. Several Madras firms have promised to give their support to the scheme.

MURDER OF A GANG OF CONSTABLES.—The Vizianagram correspondent of the Madras Standard writes under date 24th June:— "Semi-official information has been obligingly communicated to us through the Superintendent of the Revenue Survey to the effect that a gang of police constables, stationed on the hill-tracts of the Rumpa country, have been most cruelly massacred, by the rude hill tribes, in forms which I could not describe with delicacy. Rumpa is in a state of dreadful disturbance, and it is stated that Thalai Chanddria is the instigator of the dreadful scenes. Whole villages, it seems, have been pillaged, and thousands of ryots, graziers, &c., have deserted the country, owing to these ruffians and insurgents. It is gratifying, however, to state that our Collector has passed a resolution to the effect that a company of three hundred constables should be ordered off expeditiously into the vortex of the scene. The circum tances which have led to the origin of these tumults and broils are as yet insoluble by us. I venture to think it is necessary at this juncture to notice that these disturbances would teach Government a good lesson, who has no sympathy, as it seems, with the inhabitants of this district. The country is most besottedly neglected, and this is no effort of exaggeration; for any land surveyor will prove this with terrible ease."

BOMBAY.

THE REV. C. H. BADHAM'S leave on medical certificate for one year has been commuted into furlough for two years.

O Anglo Lusetana, an Anglo-Portuguese journal, has been started in Bombay to represent the views of the "Portuguese" community.

BRIGADE-SURGEON H. V. CARTER has been appointed Professor of Hygiene Grant Medical College, in addition to his other duties, during the absence of Deputy Surgeon-General H. Cook.

THE Bombay Fire Brigade, which is at present associated with the police force, will, it is stated, shortly be taken over by the Municipality.

THE Poona Fine Arts Exhibition will be opened on the 20th of September next. About the same date will be held the exhibition of flowers, fruits and vegetables, in connection with the Poona Horticultural Society.

MR. SHRIPAD BABAJEE THAKAR, C.S., left for England on Saturday with his wife and mother. This is, perhaps, the first time that an aged Hindoo lady of orthodox views has proceeded on a voyage to England.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

COLONEL W. W. BODDAM, Punjab Police, has been granted 183 days extension of leave.

BRIGADE-SURGEON FAIRWEATHER acts as Inspector-General of Jails in the Punjab during Dr. Gray's absence on furlough.

In all probability the Bill to amend the Punjab Land Revenue Act will be introduced in the Legislative Council by the Hon. Colonel Davies at the next meeting.

RAINING FISH.—A correspondent writes from Fatehpur, July 7th:—"Yesterday and to-day it has been raining fish here; several have been picked up in my compound, still alivo, about two inches long. I do not know whether this is an unusual occurrence or not. This is the first time it has come within my notice."

CURIOUS PHENOMENA.—Two curious phenomenons are likely to be presented to the view of the people of the Punjab shortly: one is that in which the whole of the contractors of that province are about to start, if they have not already started, on a tour through the hill districts of Khu:halgurh and Bunnoo, in order, as the advertised wish of the Executive Engineer, Frontier. Road Division, states, to make themselves acquainted with the condition of the labour market, sources of supply, and prevailing rates for materials of all kinds required for works under construction, preparatory to tendering for contracts for the same. The other is the attendance of the whole of the Rawalpiudi Volunteer Force before the Civil Court, in compliance with the advertised summons to answer individually and collectively a claim for provisions supplied to their Recreation Club, and for which no individual member seems to be personally responsible.

"Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war," and it has been interesting to peruse the record of almost daily triumphs won in the great Federation feeding campaign which has been conducted under the able leadership of the Reception Committee of the Indian and Colonial Exhibition. It has been a wonder to multitudes how our "distinguished visitors" have managed to survive so many banqueting battles, and it speaks marvels for the stamina of the sons of what Mr. Tennyson calls the "morning land," that they are still to the front in the prandial slaughter and post-prandial heroic oratory. They have proved themselves to be most valiant trenchermen, and equal to the slock of innumerable hosts. But ought not honours also to be paid to those gallant officers who, having done the State much service in many lands and on other battle-fields, have still courage and digestion sufficient left to brave the dangers of interminable festivities? They have run, and are still running, risks to which a general action might be considered to be as child's play. C.I.E.'s and "additional" C.M.G.'s are being bestowed with lavish hands upon the "distinguished visitors"; ought not some "extra additional" Order be found for the distinguished officers who are leading them triumphantly over so many banqueting-fields?—

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The following return may be accepted as showing approximately the composition and strength of the force now in Upper and Lower Burma, exclusive of the Staff:—

Concerning the above figures, we may add that there are 15,026 officers with the 5,084 British soldiers, or 1 officer to every 37 men, and 205 officers to the 16,620 Native soldiers; or 1 officer to every 80 men. The grand total of troops is just over 22,000, and the additional three regiments of Native Infantry now being sent will raise it to about 24,000. On their arrival Bengal will have 8 Native Infantry Regiments in Burma, Madras 10½, and Bombay 5.

A GRATUITY of three months' military pay of rank has been granted to Colonel J. Johnson, C.S I., Political Agent, Manipur, for the wound received by him in action near Tummo, in the Kubbo Valley, Upper Burma, on the 1st February last.

Out of the 41,166 soldiers serving in the Bengal Presidency, no fewer than 10,648 are now resident in the hills. In the hill stations there are also 548 soldiers' wives and 899 children. This gives a percentage of 28.85 men, 37.57 women, and 43.32 children. There are also in addition 57 children at Lieutenant-General Sir M. A. S. Biddulph's Summer Home at Missouri.

BEFORE Lieutenant-General Prendergast, V.C., left Burma, he published an order to his command granting a reward of Rs. 360 to cach officer or soldier who would pass in Burmese by the colloquial test as laid down for the Burman Police.

Owing to the transfer of the Quetta District to the Bengal command, it has been decided to redistribute the present Musketry Circles in the Bengal Presidency. The following is the revised list:—First Circle, Headquarters, Fort William: all troops and volunteers serving in the Presidency and Eastern Frontier Districts. Second Circle, Headquarters, Allahabad: all troops and volunteers serving in the Allahabad Division and Sugor District, including the station of Hoshangabad, the Bhopal Battalion at Schore, and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Volunteers at Itarsi and Jubbulpore. Third Circle, Headquarters, Lucknow: all troops and volunteers serving in the Oudh Division and Rohilkhund District. Fourth Circle, Headquarters, Meerut: all troops and volunteers serving in the Meerut and Gwalior Commands, excepting Delhi and Roorkee and the Central India Horse at Goona. Fifth Circle, Headquarters, Umballa: all troops and volunteers serving in the Sirhind Division and at the stations of Roorkee, Delhi, Ajmere, and Deoli. Sixth Circle, Headquarters, Mean Meer: all troops and volunteers serving in the Lahore Division and Quetta District. Seventh Circle, Headquarters, Rawalpindi: all troops and volunteers serving in the Rawalpindi and Peshawur Commands. Eighth Circle, Headquarters, Abbottabad: all troops serving in the Punjab Frontier Force.

THE Government of India have decided to grant free conveyance by railway as well as by sea for the adopted children of a soldier, who are the legitimate offspring of soldiers and are bond fide dependent on him for support, on all occasions on which the soldier is moved on duty and is necessarily accompanied by his family.

THE Bombay rule under which officers of the Staff Chips, who are seconded in their regiments, are required to subscribe to both the mess and band funds of the regiments on which their names are borne in the proportion of one-half of what they would have to pay when with their regiments, has been adopted by Bengal, and will most probably be introduced into the Madras army.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punj b was not consulted on the proposal to transfer the force from his control to the orders of the Commander-in-Chief. Sir Charles Aitchison was merely informed of the decision to effect the transfer after it had been arrived at by the Secretary of State who, on the recommendation of the Government of India, sanctioned the transfer in October last.

It is under consideration to adopt the plan of instruction in army-signalling carried out in England, in India for the instruction of both European and native soldiers, and to place their training in the hands of an officer who will have the rank and standing of a Deputy Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster-General.

GENERAL officers commanding divisions and districts, with hill stations within their limits, have been exhorted by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to issue such orders as will ensure these sanitaria being fully utilized, during the hot weather, as regar?s the instruction of the troops stationed therein. The space available for parade grounds in hill stations is of course contracted; and his Excellency points out the advisibility of extending the system of independent company instruction. In this view, a battalion might be ordered to rendezvous at a selected spot at a distance from cantonments, the company commanders issuing detailed orders and moving independently. After the assembly of the corps, the companies might similarly be directed to move independently to their barracks. This practice, Sir Frederick Roberts goes on to say, will ensure the frequent movement of troops in organised bodies over the hills, without the tedium of regular route marching; and will give them a thorough knowledge of the ground in the vicinity. Attention is to be paid, moreover, to sketching practice, and the preparation of road reports; and signalling between stations is to be carried on both by night and day, constantly. Lastly, the attention of all general officers is called to the possibility, after the rainy season, of uniting the troops under their command "in some general scheme of instructional manœuvres."

It has been finally decided that the six additional Garrison Batteries for the defences of India shall not be brought to this country until the trooping season of 1887-88, as the defensive positions on the North-West Frontier will not be sufficiently advanced to receive them until then advanced to receive them until then.

CIVIL HOSPITALS IN INDIA.—We have before us the annual report of the Civil Hospitals and Dispensaries in the Presidency of Madras and the Punjab, the first for 1884, the second for 1885. In both, as usual, there is a review of the reports by the respective Governments to which they are addressed. On more occ :sions than one we have had to notice, with disapproval, the tone of small fault finding and want of appreciation of the work done in the hospitals and dispensaries of India by the medical service. We think it will be a good thing when the Civil servants of the various Presidencies are made to understand that if there is one part of Indian administration that has given satisfaction to the population, and done more to reconcile the people to foreign rule, it is the medical. It is impossible to glance, even in the most superficial way, over the reports of the work done in the Civil hospitals and dispensaries of India without having this truth forcel upon us. Of this, however, Mr. W. Wilson, who "for the Chief Secretary" signs, and we suppose wrote the review of the report on the Madras hospitals before us, has not the faint Mr. report on the Madras hospitals before us, has not the rainteer notion. Wherever it is possible to state or insinuate a fault Mr. W. Wilson does not omit the opportunity, but we look in vain for a word of sympathy or of appreciation of the enormous amount of medical and surgical work he passes under review. It is recorded in this report that the vast number of 58,247 surgical operations were performed in the year under notice. Of these, 3,358 were major operations. Mr. W. Wilson, on the part of his Government, expresses the eminion that the increase in the number of major operations was opinion that the increase in the number of major operations was hardly to the extent to be wished. Why, what a glutton in operative surgery this Mr. W. Wilson is! 58,247 surgical operations in one year does not satisfy him. Will Mr. W. Wilson be surprised when told, as we venture to tell him, that we in Europe do not estimate the progress of modern surgery by the number of surgical operations? In the Madras Presidency there are now 299 native hospitals and dispensaries under the care of 36 commissioned medical officers, 111 apothecaries, 105 hospital assistants, 43 pensioned and private medical practitioners, and 4 medical missionaries. In the year under notice, cholera prevailed in most parts of the Presidency. Out of 14,558 cases of this disease treated in the dispensaries, 5,735 proved fatal. We note with pleasure that the review prefixed to the Punjab Report by Mr. W. M. Young, the secretary to the Punjab Government, is written in a much fairer and more courteous spirit than the one noticed above, and that it concludes with a cordial expression of the plan on the part of Sin Charles Aitshican the Lieutenant. thanks on the part of Sir Charles Aitchison, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, for the long and faithful service rendered in this department by Deputy Surg. General A. M. Dal as, Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, and of the valuable advice which he has ever afforded to himself and his predecessors. One of the most interesting parts of this Report is the progress being made in the number of lying-in hospitals and the number of women using them, amounting in all to 539, as against 393 in the previous year. No less than 344 cases were treated in the lyingin hospital at Amritsar. A lady doctor (Elizabeth Bielhy) is now established in a permanent lying-in hospital at Luhore; this lady also gives instructions in practical midwifery to the female students of the Lahore medical school. It is expected that a lady doctor from England, with two trained European nurses, will open a lying-in hospital at Simla this season, in connection with the Ripon Hos, ital. It is proposed, also, to open a separate hespital for women at Delhi, as part of the "Dufferin Hospital" project. The enormous mortality among women in child-bed in India from the ignorance of the native midwires is lamentable. India from the ignorance of the native midwives is lamentable, and the amount of suffering following the simplest and most remediable accidents of child-birth is so great, that we must rejoice over the dawn of a better day for India in this important branch of medical aid.—British Medical Journal.

COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITION.

A paper on "Railway Extension in the Colonies," was read at the Conference on Tuesday, 27th ult., by Mr. J. S. Jeans. The author began his paper by pointing out that this was a subject of almost equal interest to the Colonies and the mother country —to the former because no other single influence coult so materially aid their development, and to the mother country because she would for a long time be called upon to supply the greater part of the materials of construction, and because the Colonies would take more of our home produce, the more they were able to expect the mealing. The experience of the United vere able to export themselves. The experience of the United States had shown that there was a close relation between railway facilities and the development of foreign trade, and that the more the exports were increased, the greater was the volume of imports, although the two did not exactly nor necessarily run on fours. Britain now imports over 125 million pounds worth of food supplies, of which America furnishes fully 30 millions worth. It is of great importance to England to endeavour to assist the Colonies to take the place of the United States in this regard, because the United States were a hostile nation in commercial affairs, imposing, as they did, an average duty of 45 per cent. on the whole of their imports, with a view to the exclusion of foreign commod ties. The immense development of the trade of the United States within recent years was clearly traccable, in great part, to railway extension. There were now 130,000 miles of railway opened in the United States, whereas cur Austra'ian Colones had only 7,000 miles for an almost equal area, and Canada, for a larger area, excluding Alaska, had only 10,000 miles. Assuming that a railway contributed to the opening up of a country for 20 square miles on either side, the railways of the United States would be equal to opening up about 5½ milliors of square miles, or nearly double the absolute area of the country, excluding Alaska, whereas the railways so far built in Canada were only equal, on the same basis of estimation, to opening up about 400,000 square smiles, or very little more than one-ninth of the whole. The railways of India provided for opening up about half-a-million square miles, or rather over one-third of the whole, and the railways of Australia provided facilities for 250,000 square miles, or one-cleventh of the whole continent. The total mileage of railways now constructed in the British Colonies was about 3,000 railways now constracted in the British Colonies was about 3,000 miles, being an average of one mile to every 7,379 of the population and every 269 miles of area. In the United Kingdom there is one mile of railway to every six and a half miles of area, and in the United States one mile of railway to every twenty-five miles of area. If our Colonies had the same relation of railway mileage to area as the United States, their total railway mileage would be upwards of 330,000 miles. The freight rates of our Colonies were generally higher than those of Europe, but in India and in Canada they were lower. The latter country had to arrange railway rates s) as to compete for trans-continental traffic with the United States, where, within the last ten or twelve years, the rates had been reduced on an average by one-half, and where freighters were where, within the last ten or twelve years, the rates had been reduced on an average by one-half, and where freighters were now paying the railways a hundred million pounds per annum less than they would have had to pay for the same volume of traffic in 1872. It was of great importance to our Colonial progress that the rates should be kept low, as this would develop traffic more rapidly, and better enable the Colonies to compete with the United States. That they were able so to compete had been sufficiently proved by the enormous increase in their exports of bread stuffs to Europe within recent years. With the exception of India, Queensland and New South Wales, in each of which the railways were now paying over 4 per cent, the Colonial railways the railways were now paying over 4 per cent, the Coloni il railways were not generally soremunerative as to tempt capital on their merits. Canadian railways only paid an average of 14 per cent.; Victorian railways, 2.91 per cent.; New Zealand railways, 2.51; and Cape Colony railways, 2.65 per cent. Railway promoters should endeavour not only to ascertain the traffic existing or available, but also the traffic likely to be created. Experience had shown that in the Calculus traffic developed weap varieties are not some that in the Colonics traffic developed very rapidly, and in some cases a net traffic of less than £300 per mile per annum was equal to yielding a dividend of over 4 per cent, whereas it required over £1,700 per annum to pay the same rate in England. It was of the greatest importance to the Colonies that they should be furnished in the shortest possible time, and on the greatest attainall e scale, with railway facilities, in order to transport the produce of their wheat-fields and vineyards, the sheep-runs and their cattle-ranches, to the markets of Europe, and for this purpose Colonies were justified in undertaking an expenditure and incurzing a debt that would not be otherwise justifiable.

Ir has just been ruled that volunteers can travel on State Railways and on the East India Railway in the next higher class of carriage than that for which they purchase tickets when they are bona fide proceeding to stations for the purpose of being attached to other volunteer corps for class-firing or drill.

A PRIZE of Rs. 100 is offered for the best essay on "practical suggestions for reducing the number of Native followers attached to British troops in peace and war." The Essay is open to all warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men of Her Majesty's forces in the Bombay Presidency.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

INDIA REVISITED.*

The views of a thoughtful and enlightened man of letters in regard to the ways and doings of our Eastern brethren must always be welcome; but in addition to culture of mind, Mr. Edwin Arnold possesses a grace of pen and a charm of style which impart to "India Revisited" an interest calculated to ensure the work a wide popularity. He is, as it were, a butterfly flitting from flower to flower, never wearying, never tarrying; and as we follow him in his flight, we find opened out to us an immense store of information, and the East, with its varied beauty, stands before us a living reality—scenes arise in the mind's-eye which only a master-hand can create. We see as he saw—we think as he thought.

Take, for example, the graphic description of the Egyptian denoing girl as with a carnet surged, upon the sand she extends dancing girl as, with a carpet spread upon the sind, she extends her hand, armed with castanets, and sings to the accompaniment of some native instruments, swaying at the time her lithe body in slow, rhythmical motions to the words of the song and the measured beat of the musicians. How it imparts an air of wonder to the scene to read that through all the dance she perpetually keeps a bottle with a lighted candle therein in per'est equilibrium upon the top of her head. Yet this "balance dance" is old as the Pharaohs, and as common as Punch and Judy in this country.

Passing through Aden, "a hard, barren, arid, volcanic rock," redeemed with but one single flower "the Aden_lily," the reader is ushered into the new and beautiful city of Bombay, with its Wellington Pier, its Yacht Club, its University, its Courts of Justice, its Town Hall, and its magnificent railway station. The there is a glimpse of the inner life of the seething City; and Mr. Arnold, drawing aside the veil of privacy from Parsee life, describes a musical afternoon on Malabar Hill, the ladies with their "lovely dresses of every conceivable hue, rose colour, amber purple, silver, gold, azure, white, green crimson;" a Gujerat girl in red and gold singing the "List Rise of Summer," accompanied by her sister on the pinno; a ring of Parsee maidens chanting a "song circle" of singular grace, the whole entertainment concluding with "God Save the Queen," which, thanks to the efforts of Canon Harford, supported by some other loyal and patriotic enthusiasts, has taken root in India, and is now the National Authem of the East.

At P. one nautch dances and plays were the order of the day. At Paroda, the capital of the Guekwar's dominions, interest centres in the Court jewels; in very deed priceless rubies, diamonds, sapphires, and pearls, to the tune of three quarters of a million ster.in;, make the mouth of envy water, albeit many of these superb trophics are kept in a "marmalade pot!"

Bhawnagar in Kattywar merits attention as one of the most enlightened of Native States. Here we find a rallway constructed and managed in a way which would do credit to any county in England; then there are a College, a High School, a dispensary, a horse-breeding establishment, a Cottou Exchange, and a spacious hospital. Well may Mr. Arnold head the chapter which proclaims all this "A Model Native S.ate."

Ahmedabad merits a glance if only for its exquisite mosques, "built mainly of white stone, delicately and marvellously carved."
Dilwara astonishes with its Jain temples, erected at an expense of Dilwara astonishes with its Jain temples, erected at an expense of eighteen millions of money, and fourteen years of labour. Jeyporc—the City of Victory—attracts attention as a town "that might be built in the fantastic architecture of dreams, or fabled by some poet desiring strange and unparalleled combination of colour and outline. There is nothing like it in India or the world." To say nothing of the "Chanda Mahal," or Silver House, the "Hall of Victory," the Diwan-i-Khas, and numerous other magnificent buildings, there is the matchle's gateway of the "Mardan'," or "Men's Abode," bearing the enviable distinction of being the finest portal in the world. "Ulwur, an uninteresting city, demands an allusion on account of the superb State maintained by its Mahurajuh; and now the train rattling along the city, demands an allusion on account of the superb State maintained by its Mah raj h; and now the train rattling along the plains and valleys brings the travellers to Delhi—the imperial city of the great Moguls—and what pen can do justice to the associations which are linked with this famous capital? Who can depict in adequate terms the scenes of horror when Nadir Shah gave his sildiers license to plunder and debauch the luxurious metropolis of the East? Who can portrap the sad and remarkable vicis itude of fortune, when the last of the Moguls handed his sword to the representative of the British Government, and accepted the position of a pensioner at the hands of a Power which had erected an Empire on the ruins of the House of Timour. Further, too, what writer has ever succeeded in doing justice to the valour, the courage, the endurance of British warriors during the stupendous struggle of 1857? Not a stone but what proclaims a deed of daring, not an arch but what tells forth a tale of heroism. A quarter of a century has not dimmed the glory of Delhi's imperishable defence; the record possesses perennial freshness, the "thrilling story of devotion" never palls, and who cannot realise with Mr. Arnoid that "cold must be the

HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH MARRIED.*

"Happy though married." We don't like the title. Why not lappy because married? The greatest uninspired investigator of hearts and thoughts refused to admit impediments to the marriage of true minds. Not, however, to marriages of convenience. He postulated love in a high sense as the foundation of the mixture: not such as "alters when it alteration finds" in the person, or "accidents" of the being, whom he has, for better or worse made his own.

or worse, made his own.

Marriage of this ideal kind is, we know, out of date. Every man "must marry money, you know," and every girl wants to begin by keeping her carriage because her parents left off in a begin by keeping her carriage because her parents left off in a position so to do.

"Whichever you do, whether you marry or abstain, you will repent," says one sage. "Bring a wife into your house, and you bring in either an angel or a devil, you know not which," quoth another. The old saying that mankind were originally made in couples, whose separation Jupiter, when, one day, ira e, decreed, is scarcely more explanatory. Be the attractions skin-deep, or purse-deep, there it is, and results in hooking, and, in the end, matrimonially landing, the fish.

Why, from the time of Solomon (who was "very much married") downwards, marriage should have been, by common consent, a topic fir jesting, we have never been able to divine. The end of a girl's spring life, as Schiller calls it, scarcely seems a subject for the banter; which has, nevertheless, always attended it. Our author gives us here the sagest advice as to the selection of a partner for life, and as to our subsequent duties the selection of a partner for life, and as to our subsequent duties towards him or her, and we are sure that no one, if any such there be, who has strictly followed his counsels, will deny their excellence. His "intentions are serious," most serious, as befits the matter in hand, yet the genius of the subject is "one too many" for him. The lovely goddess "Queen Jocus circumvolat" has not, in becoming the topic of his pages, laid aside the substantial ment of counsel is almost hidden in the garnish of lively, and always well-told, anecdote.

"Quips, and cranks, and wreathed smiles."

Scarce a bit of the pudding which is not choke-full of plums; the substantial meat of counsel is almost hidden in the garnish

An "oldster" may have witnessed not a few weddings without having heard such an answer to the parson's "Wilt thou have?" as "Oh, dear no, sir; but you are the first person who has asked my opinion about the matter." Still less is he likely to have "assisted" at such a scene as took place at a double (civil) marriage in France, where one of the bridegrooms became jealous on account of certain plances directed by his bride towards the on account of certain glances directed by his bride towards the other bridegroom. An open quarrel cusued, and, after a brief interval, the affair ended—not, fair reader, in "smoke," produced from the muzzle of a pistol, but—in an exchange of brides, which, having been duly effected, the ceremony came to an end which was at least pacific, and, let us hope, satisfactory to all concerned. concerned.

A man was once at a teetotal gathering, "run in" in a state of inebriety so confirmed that he could but just articulate "'Sh all rite, sur, I'm the 'horrid example.'" Our "Graduate" may, for aught we know, have had this tale in his mind when he hit on the capital idea of enforcing his precepts with "horrid examples" of the consequences of neglecting them. In more than one passage, however, he gives us exemplars, not to avoid, but to follow. Cobbett for men, for the fair sex poor Mrs. Carbut to follow. Cobbett for men, for the fair sex poor Mrs. Carlyle. Her letters, which her unfeeling husband was not ashamed to make public, seem to have formed his especial study. He might better have recommended as a model Chaucer's Griscldis—"patient Grizzel," as our country folk call her. We should be grieved to think that any of our fair readers would ever be mated to a lord as cruel as was the Thane in fable, or as the ill-conditioned, vain-glorious "Hans-teufel" (devil at home) of Chelsea was in reality. was in reality.

Of course the fruits of matrimony come in for their share of notice. Kingsley, Arnold, Luther, are all held up—and most deservedly—as models for imitation, as parents. We have always been particularly pleased with Kingsley's remark, "I wonder if there is as much laughing in any other home in England as in ours." To enter on this subject is, however, to explain the fersilest of explant as a public telescopy. We will embark in the frailest of craft on an illimitable ocean.

end by quoting a precept which, as the veriest outsider can see, is alike in drawing-rooms and on drags, on racecourses and at regattas, in travel and at tennis, flagrantly violated :

"Madam! no gentleman is entitled to such distinguished consideration as your husband. Sir! no lady is entitled to such deferential treatment as your wife." (By the way, how many persons, even "premier cru," neglect even to raise their hats on reasually meeting their better halves ?)

We can say of this, what we cannot say of every book of its kind: that, dealing with a delicate topic, it does so in a rational, yet entertaining, manner. No one will be the worse, and many can, if they choose, be the better for its perusal.

NATIONAL REVIEW.*

The world may well marvel how the part can be held to be The world may well marvel how the part can be held to be greater than the whole—how a sober, practical, lace like our own can ever have had a doubt whether to prefer the interes's of the entire Empire, or those of the infinitesional fraction of it which forms a "party." So engrained in the public mind is the importance of "Party" that even the writer of the first article—and a very good one it is—in this August number of the "National" does not state his question as "Empire or Party?" but as "Party or Empire?" as though the claim of "Party" to the first place were generally admitted, and it were incumbent on him to disprove it. However satisfactorily the constituencies have answered the it. However satisfactorily the constituencies have answered the "Empire or Party?" question, it is a circumstance at once lamentable, and of evil omen for the future of the Empire, that it should have been in the power of a demagogue, however able, to force it on them for decision. The causes (mainly connected to force it on them for decision. The causes (mainly connected with the individuality and peculiarly constituted moral sense of the late Premier) which brought the country to the verge of a cataclysm, are well shown by the writer of this able paper, while the real needs of Ireland, steady and unflinching enforcement of the law, and fulfilment of the first duties of Government—namely, protection of person and property—are forcibly placed before the reader by a "Candid Conservative," some of whose remarks, however just, may be unpalatable enough to many. We doubt, however, whether even he has sufficiently insisted on the broad distinction between the two portions of the population, the "Saxon" two fifths, who do, and the "Celtic" three fifths, who do not, obey the law: to talk of "Irishmen" as if they all sprang from the same stock, and were to be regarded accordingly, is misleading. No one can, in the face of history, deny that Irish manufactures (always excepting that of whisky!) have met with step-motherly treatment: ing that of whisky!) have met with step-motherly treatment: and on this the "Conservative" rightly insists. Perhaps few more gratuitous wrongs have been inflicted on Ireland than the restrictions on the growth of tobacco, the culture of which in England forms the subject of an article by Mr. Eliot James, whose opinions are not favourable to its prospects of success. To whose opinions are not favcurable to its prospects of success. To this we can only say, let it be fairly tried after all restrictions, not absolutely indispensable, shall have been abolished.

A very interesting Paper by Lord Egerton of Tatton is devoted to the remedies for agricultural distress. That the voluntary introduction by large landowners (p. 761) (Lord Egerton instances the Ecclesiastical Commissioners) of "peasant proprietorship" is a very real remedy, and that its adoption would lead to the cultivation of many farms now standing vacant, we never had a doubt. Nor is this a mere theory; for Lord Tollemache has given it practical effect, and has, to some extent, realised, notwithstanding the difficulties referred to by Lord Egerton at p. 759, the celebrated "three acres and a cow" saying.†

"Hydrophobia" is "writ large" on the muzzle of everylog one meets, and the fair authoress of "Vera" could hardly have selected a more generally interesting subject than M. Pasteur's selected a more generally interesting subject than M. Pasteur's treatment of the fell disease, which may at any moment be a matter of fearful concernment to us all. We shall not attempt to spoil, by excerpting from, a paper of such thrilling interest, and which no one will fail to read to the last word. It may not, however, he superfluous to warn sufferers against the effects of fear, respecting which our authoress tells (p. 785) a very striking story. Pasteur, himself, as is well known, is nothing if not encouraging in his converse with his patients. "Attendez, your allez voir comme tout cela va devenir grand," is his own pet phrase.

Those who are—and how lew are not?—Interested in matters the atrical will find much to entertain them in Mr. Archer's paper on "A Well-Graced Actress," in which Sara Bernhardt, Mrs. Kendal, Miss Ellen Terry, and Miss Eastlake are in turn thoughtfully criticised. Mr. Archer seems to take a somewhat gloomy view, which it is not easy to dispute, of the present state, and immediate future, of our stage, so far as the fairer sex is concerned.

† We have already shown from figures the absurdity of this cry, except as a political device. But the solution of the not very intricate problem, of the proportion of land to population in the United Kingdom, was doubtless far beyond the "mental arithmetic" of the population whom the cry misled, and who, judging by recent county elections, will not be so easily "gulled" a second time.

Lady Marian Alford's excellent book, "Needlework as Art," nor will anyone lay it down unfinished. It is a complete and well-written history in brief of needlework. How much this, like all other arts, has always been used for religious purposes, and how much, consequently, it has been encouraged by priests of all kinds, we know. This Mr. Perry clearly brings out; nor are the innumerable young ladies who work "vestments" for the last new curate following in the footsteps of ignoble predecessors.

Lady Jersey and Mrs. Alexander respectively contribute spirited pieces of verse, 'The Waking of Eng!and" and "The Siege of Derry." Mr. Mallock's "The old Order changes" comes to an appropriate close; and a paper by Mr. Bradley on the much underrated Alexander Hamilton, the author of the Constitution of the United States, and the designer of their financial system, excites the reader to know more than can be comprised in the space of a review article concerning a very remarkable man.

THE ANNUAL REGISTER FOR THE YEAR 1885.*

"The Annual Register for 1885" amply maintains the high character which it has for so many years enjoyed; indeed, the work is, if possible, more than usually interesting. First, as to English history; the period embraced involves the death of Gordon, the Russian "scare," with its consequent Vote of Credit; the Redistribution Bill, the General Election, and Mr. Gladstone's ambiguous utterances in regard to Home Rule. To these memorable matters 200 pages of summary are devoted; enough is given "verbatim and literatim" to satisfy any ordinary inquirer, and the narrative of events is concise, clear, and consecutive. Foreign history disposes of a second instalment of 200 pages. Part II. is devoted to a chronicle of events, retrospect of literature, science, and art, obituary of eminent persons, and an index. It would be idle to suppose that there are no inaccuracies in a work of this nature—errare est humanum; but we have not succeeded in detecting anything calculated to mislead, and we can confidently recommend the compilation to the numerous circle of persons who are anxious to refresh their memories as to what has happened in the bygone year. At all times desirable, it is more than ever necessary in these days, when "ancient history" seems almost to surge ahead of the events of which it is composed, that we should take stock of what has gone before, and read the present by the light of the past. For this purpose it would be difficult to select a more valuable or trustworthy guide than the "Annual Register."

WIT AND WISDOM OF REV. SYDNEY SMITH AND OF THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD.

The two volumes just received of Messrs. Longmans and Co.'s series, eulogising respectively the wit and wisdom of the Rev. Sydney Smith and the Earl of Beaconsfield, are in every way worthy successors of the predecessor which we have praised till our stock of language is exhausted.

The Army and Navy Magazine for August (W. H. Allen and Co.) makes its appearance in excellent time this month, and contains much matter of interest to the Services. There are several continuations of papers commenced some months ago; Colonel G. A. Furse contributes some useful hints to officers on "Operations against the line of communications," the concluding words of which are worth quoting: "All the working for the purpose of getting rewards is not healthy; it is too sordid a motive, and the thing has been greatly overdone in our petty wars. Disinterested aims, simplicity of purpose are more in consonance with the character of the true soldier; renown for valour, ability, and a conscientious and disinterested performance of his duty is what he should covet.' Captain C. B. Norman tells the story of two hazardous rides. "Military Railways in Germany," by Otto Waldau, is an essay with interesting and valuable information, and Yeorah lightens the serious matter of the volume by a bright and cleverly written sketch—"A Regimental Pet."

Books for Review.—"United," a novel, by A. P. Sinnett (George Redway); "The Literary Manual; a Complete Guide to Authorship," by Percy Russell (London Literary Society), third thousand; "Journal of the East India Association," July 1886 (W. H. Allen and Co.).

MR. R. G. BHANDARKAR, Professor of Sanskrit in the Deccan College, has received a pressing invitation to attend the Oriental Congress which is to meet in a short time at Vienna, and there is every probability of his accepting the invitation. It would be impossible for Bombay, or Oriental learning to have a better representative.

It is stated in Rangoon that an English barrister will shortly proceed to England to advocate Theebaw's restoration!

A letter from Cabul to the Persian journal Schems says:—
'A joint campaign by England and Afghanistan against the Khan of Badakshan seems imminent. The Khan continues to maintain an independent attitude towards his suzerain, the Ameer Abdurrahman, while at the same time he receives Russian emissaries at his Court, loads them with favours, and openly shows that he acts by their direction. An adjutant of the Ameer has been sent to Faizabad with an ultimatum, calling upon the Khan to make an unconditional submission. Should there be no satisfactory reply an Afghan army will march from Jellalabad into the valley of the Amu Daria to attack Faizabad, while an Anglo-Indian expeditionary corps will start in the same direction from Chitral across the Hindoo Koosh. Badakshan will then lose its semi-independence and become an Afghan province, where the Russians will find it more difficult to intrigue. After Badakshan will come the turn of Afghan Turkestan, which will also be made to submit and lose its old privileges."

MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SINGH sends to the Times of India a letter in which he says:—"Although I am a naturalised Englishman, yet I was arrested at Aden without a warrant, one having been issued since I re-embraced Sikhism while staying at Aden. Before quitting England, the Indian Government, in great trepidation offered me £50,000 in full discharge of all claims upon it, provided I promised never to return to India; but I declined this offer as I would not accept £50,000 to give a receipt in full. My health having broken down through residence at Aden, I am now travelling on my way back to Europe in order to drink the German waters. Although the Indian Government succeeded in preventing me from reaching Bombay lately, yet they are not able to close all the roads that there are to India; for when I return I can either land at Goa or Pondicherry, or if I fancy an overland route, then I can enter the Punjab through Russia. In that event, I suppose the whole of the British army in India would be sent out, as well as the assistance of our a'ly, the Ameer, invoked, to resist the coming of a single individual, viz., myself. What a wonderful spectacle! The taxpayer of India no doubt will be glad to hear that I have resigned the miserable stipend paid to me under that I have resigned the miserable stipend paid to me under that I have resigned the miserable stipend paid to me under that I have resigned for pecuniary aid to the Oriental liberality of both my guardian when I was a minor, thus setting aside that illegal document entirely. As soon as I am restored to health, I hope to appeal for pecuniary aid to the Oriental liberality of both my brother Princes as well as the people of India. Should, however, the Government place its veto upon their generous impulse, then I shall have no alternative but to transfer my allegiance to some other European Power, who I daresay will provide for my maintenance. I find it very difficult to collect my thoughts at present, owing to bad weather."

The Government of India have authorised General White to increase his mounted infantry from 200 to 800 men. These will be stationed in parties of 60 or 70 in twelve of the principal p.s.s where they are most needed. There seems to have been an impression abroad that the Government have not complied with the demands of the local authorities for the mounted arm of the service, but in reality this is not the cass. At first no cavalry were sent with the expedition, as originally it was conducted solely by river route, and it would have been impossible to supply the steamers and flats for their conveyance; but as soon as General Piendergast expressed a desire to have mounted infantry, his proposals were sanctioned, and he was authorised to mount 200 men, the number he asked for. He afterwards applied for a squadron of cavalry, which was at once sent from Madras; and on his subsequent request the remainder of the regiment, the 2nd Madras Lancers, proceeded to Mandalay. During the rains, as is well-known, the country is not suit d for cavalry, but in the cold weather mounted men can move about, and most probably in October or November another regiment—in all likelihood one of the Bengal Lancers—will be sent to aid in the work of pacification.

The breaks on the railway below Umballa extend over twelve miles, the line being breached in three or more places. The damage appears to be more serious than was at first supposed, for it is now said that it will be impossible to restore communication for some time. The mails meantime will have to go vià. Lahore and Ferozepore to Rewari. The waters having subsided, a clearer idea of the damage has been obtained. It appears that one bridge of ten spans, near Barara, has been wrecked, the girders being carried away by the flood, while about a mile and a half of embankment near it has been demolished. There is also a large gap between Mustafaband and Jagadhri, while for seventeen miles the line is more or less damaged. The authorities are making every effort to restore communication, but the district has also suffered severely, and local labour is hard to get for work on the line. A responsible postal officer has been dispatched from Simla to superintend the transmission of the mails which are now being passed over the breaks by carriers and ekkas. The efforts to carry the up-country overland mails through the flood to Saharanpore cost the life of a Native mail agent, who was drowned in carrying out this duty.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1886.

THE GOVERNORSHIP OF MADRAS.

THE rumour which was for some time prevalent that Sir J. Gorst was to succeed Sir Grant Duff in the Governorship of Madras turns out to be incorrect, although for some days it was supposed to have the support of authority. Sir John has been otherwise provided for, and will, it is to be hoped, find his official place at home an easier and pleasanter one than had he been appointed to the rule of the Western Presidency of India. For it must be confessed that matters there have been anything but smooth or satisfactory. The retiring Governor is, to a certain extent, an optimist, especially in circumstances where he is himself mainly responsible for the working of events. In his assured faith that governors, like kings, can do no wrong, he has refused to see errors or failures in his own administration. So long as he has ruled over the once benighted Presidency, all has been sweetness and light. Everything has been ordered for the best, and the best has followed as a matter of course. In his public speeches Mr. Grant Duff spoke always words of honey, if not words of wisdom, and in his official despatches he has written as if with milk on rose leaves. If there were no such things as facts all this would be satisfactory enough, and the local administration for the past five years might be cited as a further proof of the wisdom and beneficence of British rule in the East. But, unfortunately, the facts remain after the rose-colouring put about them has faded, and there are now some very ugly facts to be looked at in connection with the late administration of Madras. It is said that there has been a breaking down of the official machinery in nearly every district of the Presidency-that there has been laxness, irregularities, want of control, and weakening of authority. More than this, it has even been asserted that much has been done to bring the integrity and good purpurposes of British rule somewhat into contempt in Native eyes. The story of what has been called the "Madras Scandals," and which has been going the round of all the Indian papers-Native as well as Englishis one which can reflect nothing but discredit on high places. The Government of Madras could hardly have been ignorant of what was going on within its own sight, but in order to keep things quiet ignorance was affected, and the usual result has followed. Light has at length been let in, and every blot has been blackened. Statements have been made and substantiated which have placed the Madras Governor and his Council in a very awkward position. Practices connected with land-jobbing and other matters infringing their covenant have been charged against Civil Servants, and it seems to be impossible that ignorance should have prevailed of this at headquarters. "A commercial spirit," says a local journalist, " has grown up among the British officials, and those who have the most pay have the most capital; there has been a demoralisation, and loss of tone and concealment is no longer possible." Concealment should never have been possible, and could not have been so under a strong ruler. Such a ruler Madras now wants. Into the merits or demerits of the Crole-Sullivan case it is not necessary to enter. What is required is the presence of an able, fearless man, with confidence in himself to do the right heedless of consequences to individuals. It may tax the powers of a Hercules to cleanse an Augean stable, but it must be cleansed nevertheless. The prospect which the Madras Governorship to-day offers to an honestly ambitious politician is not an alluring one, even with the handsome salary which it carries. But for the credit of English rule in India a good man must be found, who will have the courage to undertake the work of reform, and the capacity to carry it out.

A CASE has lately been decided in one of the Courts in India of considerable importance to officers proceeding abroad by sea without insuring their luggage. A Dr. Maddox sued the Indian Steam Navigation Company for compensation on account of Laggage lost in the wreck of one of their vess: Is The facts were these: he took a passage to Madras in the El Dorado, which was totally lost off the coast of Portugal in 1885. Dr. Maddox himself escaped, but the whole of his luggage went to the bottom with the ship. The vessel ran on some well-known rocks in day-time and the certificates of the captain and two of his officers were suspended by order of the Marine Court of Inquiry for negligence. The law court to which Dr. Maddox took his case decided that he had no grounds for action, as on the back of his passage ticket there was printed a condition to the effect that baggage was carried at the passenger's risk, and that the company would not be responsible for loss. The judge held that the plaintiff was at liberty to refuse this condition, and that, not having done so, he accepted it, his not having read the conditions being no excuse to his benefit. Few people, perhaps, on receiving a passage ticket, trouble themselves about conditions printed on A CASE has lately been decided in one of the Courts in India of a passage ticket, trouble themselves about conditions printed on the back of it, any more than passengers by railway do concerning their tickets; but they run the risk of loss without compensation. Better, therefore, insure.

THE Pioneer, the other day, found room in its columns for a letter on the transfer of the Punjab Frontier Force to the orders of the Commander-in-Chief. The transfer will certainly deprive the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab of much of the consideration. tion and influence he has hitherto possessed, especially in the Trans-Indus portions of the Province. The Lieutenant-Governor will lose in prestige by the transfer infinitely, and beyond measure more than the Commander-in-Chief will gain; and, as the Pioneer's correspondent points out, the Commander-in-Chief has no political relations with any of the Princes or peoples of India. In regard, therefore, to what may be styled the political working In regard, therefore, to what may be styled the political working capital of the Empire, the transfer involves loss, and no corresponding gain. The force, when brought under the levelling influence of centralisation, will lose, rather than gain, in efficiency. The officers may find their advantage in obtaining a larger share than hitherto of the good things which are in the gift of the Chief; but it would appear that they are not, in the meantime at any rate, to realise their cherished dream of an escape from the Dismal Derahs to the fine climate of Rawal Pindi, or the gaieties of Barrackpore. The force is to remain strictly local. No avoidable changes of any kind are to be made in any of its relations or circumstances. It is hardly surprising, therefore, that the exact necessity for the transfer is still not very apparent.—Civil and Military Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

Ar a numerously attended meeting of the committee of almoners held recently, Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Hay, of the Bombay Army, and late District Superintendent of Police, Bombay Presidency, was elected out of forty-nine candidates, to the office of warden in Christ's Hospital London School, in succession to Lieutenant-Colonel Sedley, resigned.

PERMANENT COMMERCIAL EXHIBITION OR MUSEUM.—The interest taken by the London Chamber of Commerce in the establishment of so-called commercial museums (which are more truly permanent exhibitions) in Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, and France, has, we learn, taken a practical turn. The Council of the London Chamber has decided to despatch their secretary (Mr. Kenric Murray) on a visit to the principal representative museums on the Continent, to a view of studying how far it would be desirable to create similar institutions in this country. Mr. Murray will, on his return, report upon the area of the buildings used as museums, the financial organisation of those museums, and the annual expenditure, the number of visits which they have received, and the services which they may be considered to have rendered to the trades of the country in which they are situate. Special attention will be given to the German Export Samples Departments, an improved system of which may possibly, through the co-operation of the Chambers of Commerce in the United Kirgdom and throughout the Colonies, be made to serve a useful purpose to the commercial interests of this country. Mr. Murray, it is understood, has been supplied in Foreign Office introductions to Her Majesty's representatives in the different countries through which he will pass. Over a dozen of the largest Continental towns, in which commercial museums exist, have been selected for visits, and Mr. Murray's examination of these museums will consume a greater part of the month of August. The report, it is expected, will be published in time for consideration, if desired, by the Court of Common Council on the resumption of their sittings in September.

Mr. J. R. Reid, C.S., Chief Sccretary of the Government of the North-West Provinces, is going home on two years' furlough, to pronounce the following panegyric, from which it would appear that Sir Altred Lyall has had a model Chief Secretary:—"Mr. Reid has made over charge of his office, and in him the Provinces loss for the time an officer who at every stage of his service has added in an unusual degree to the strength and vigour of the administration. The modesty of his nature and his retiring habits have possibly concealed from popular estimation the full extent of his activity and influence; but no official has ever more fully or deservedly commanded the confidence of those who were brought into personal contact with him. Many difficult and delicate duties necessarily devolve on the officer who occupies the very important post which Mr. Reid has just vacated; but it may without flattery be sail that neither the strength nor the popularity of Sir Alfred Lyall's Government have ever suffered by his discharge of them. As a Revenue Officer, Mr. Reid leaves behind him no superior in a service which contains many worthy disciples of Bird and Thomason. During the last few years the Land Revenue system of these provinces has had to hold its own against radical and doctrinaire ideas which woull rashly, and perhaps wrongly, anticipate the natural process of evolution and development; it is a fortunate circumstance that the Government of the time had the advantage of the services of so able and dispassionate an expert. Mr. Reid was not, like some, a sccretary born in the purple. He entered the sccretariat after a prolonged service in the various branches of the executive, with a high reputation won in the settlement and afterwards as District Officer, and with a practical experience which extended to all departments of the administration. It is no small matter that a post such as his should be held by a man to whom district officers can look with confidence as one having a practical knowledge of their difficulties and

The Spectator is rather late in the field with the suggestion that the Prince of Wales should ask Lord Dufferin to send home for show in the Indian and Colonial Exhibition the gates of Somnath. But that is not a great pity. The gates of Somnath may rest where they are for some time to come without depriving the English public, who seem to be getting plenty for their shilling, of any thing that would do them much good. These same gates are not, on the whole, things that could be carted to Kensington with any profit to the people who pay their money to see Indian curiosities, though, if their history be taken with them, they are greater curiosities than anything that can be met with in the Exhibition. Without their history they are not of much account, and the history is one of such unmixed folly that to send the token of it to England would be like telling a story against ourselves. The gates of Somnath and Lord Ellenborough's proclamation are inseparable. "Our victorious army bears the gates of the temple of Somnath in triumph from Afghanistan, and the despoiled tomb of Sultan Mahamoud looks upon the ruins of Ghuznee. The insult of eight hundred years is at last avenged. The gates of the temple of Somnath, so long the memorial of your humiliation, are become the proudest record of your national glory, the proof of your supremacy in arms over the nations beyond the Indus." It is one of the jokes of history, but we are forbidden to enjoy the fun, and as the world has long since ceased to laugh about these gates of Somnath, which we brought from Ghuznee only to discover that they were not the gates of Somnath after all, there is no reason why this forgotten folly should be uncovered at Kensington.—Bombay Gazette.

The divorce suit instituted by Captain Thornton, of the Bengal Staff Corps, late Cantonment Magistrate at Secunderabad, and at present Political Assistant at Bhopal, came before the High Court on Monday on an order for the trial of the issue of jurisdiction in consequence of the objection raised on behalf of Mrs. Thornton, who also asks that the proceedings may be stayed pending the decision of the English Divorce Court in a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights brought by her against her husband. Against Lieutenant Stransham, the corespondent, at present at Bangalore, the petitioner asks for the sum of Rs. 10,000 damages Mr. Justice Scott delivered his decision on Thursday on the points argued by the Advocate-General. Mr. Latham, it will be remembered, submitted on behalf of the respondent that the Court had not matrimonial jurisdiction over British subjects residing at Secunderabad, on the grounds that the Governor-General in Council had exceeded his legislative powers in the Indian Divorce Act, in so far as he had by that Act instead of by executive order extended the jurisdiction of the Indian Courts so as to include British subjects resident in the territories of Native princes. His Lordship overruled the objection, and held that the Governor-General had not so exceeded his authority, and that to proceed by act instead of order was still within the legislative powers conferred, although the more convenient course of an executive Government notification is usually followed. Mr. Justice Scott further held with regard to the objection to the jurisdiction on the point of the residence of the wife that the petition sufficiently satisfied the Act. His Lordship also refused the stay of proceedings asked for, holding that the petitioner had a right to continue irrespective of the English suit. It was, however, desirable that the wifes should have an opportunity of giving her evidence orally here asto the alleged adultery. To enable her to come to Bombay the suit would therefore be set d

September.

Competent military opinion in Upper Burma has pronounced most strongly in favour of completing the railway to Mandalay with all possible speed as the surest way of effecting the pacification of the country; and it is, therefore, most unfortunate that the India Office have taken up the attitude of refusing to sanction the cost of the line unless the money can be found by curtailment of railway expenditure in other directions. The Government of India have already curtailed all possible expenditure on lines under construction; they are compelled to complete their frontier system with what rapidity they can, as a second Russian scare would again involve an unproductive outlay of two or three millions sterling; and now that they see their wisest and most economical policy in Upper Burma is to open out the country by a railway, they are checked at the outset by the difficulty of convincing the Scoretary of State that such a policy should be adopted at all costs. There are now 25,000 troops in Burma, and the expenditure in connection with these is very heavy; the country is quieter of late, but it is by no means pacified, and there is in the remoter districts a feeling among the Burman leaders that, if only sufficient pressure is kept up by means of a guerilla warfare and organised dacoities, we may in despair release our hold upon the country. The building of 200 miles or so of railway line linking Toungoo with Mandalay, and runging through the heart of the country between the Irrawaddy and the Shan States would do more than 10,000 additional troops to dissipate this feeling and bring the Burmans generally to see that our rule is one which we really mean to maintain. The surveys are now being carried out, and we hope that when the cold weather sets in funds will be available for the work of construction. It should be commenced simultaneously from the Tounghoo side and from Mandalay, so that no time may be lost. The plant could be taken at small cost by river to the latter place; and as employment could be

Tropical Agriculturist:

A MONTHLY RECORD OF INFORMATION FOR PLANTERS OF

Tea, Cacoa, Cinchona, Coffee, Indiarubber, Sugar, Palms, Cotton, Cardamoms, Kola, Caca, Cinnamon, Nutmeys, Fibrous plants, and other Products suited for Cultivation in the Tropics.

[Published at Observer Office Colombo, Ceylon, on or about the 1st of each month. Commenced in June, 1881.]

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies (Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the Tropical Agriculturist stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the Tropical Agriculturist lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dver. FLS CMG

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repertory of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

"VOICE OF INDIA.

A MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing moximity (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Yoice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian teople.

ing between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian becopie.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally decile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public mon desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intolligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

The overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 20th July; from Allahabad to the 18th July; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 17th July.

A BILL has been introduced into the Legislative Council at Simla to declare and amend the Land Revenue Law of the Punjab; the Bill amending the Indian Companies' Act was referred to a Select Committee, and the Lower Burma Gaols Delivery Bill was passed.

THE HON. MR. ILBERT moved for leave to introduce a Bill declaring the Law in force in Upper Burma.

The last item in the list of business indicated above is better known as "The Upper Burma Laws Act, 1886," and its object is to put in force the law in the territories formerly governed by King Theebaw. It enacts that the country formerly known as British Burma shall be termed Lower Burma, and the new territory lately annexed be termed Upper Burma. It contains some seven clauses, among which is one declaring the Acts which are to be in force in Upper Burma and barring the application of other Acts unless specially extended. Another clause makes one or two modifications in Acts so applied, and a third clause gives the usual indemnity for executive Acts done since the occupation of the country. Provision is also made regarding customs duties on the old frontier, this being rendered necessary by the annexation. Special enactments are declared in force in the Mandalay District only, where a European population may be said to be already established. Among other things the Act clearly defines the boundary between Upper and Lower Burma.

GENERAL WHITE is organising a large body of mounted infantry for work in the dacoit infected districts.

Bon Shway, whose gang killed Mr. Phayre, is reported to have proclaimed himself king, and to be levying taxes in the Minbo district.

Two more levies of military police are to be raised for Upper Burma, and 1,000 picked and experienced police from India are also to be sent to the new Province.

THE Calcutta Criminal Sessions, on an application from the prosecution in the Statesman libel case, Mr. Justice O'Kinealy granted leave that it should be tried by a special jury.

The actual receipts from four sales of Bengal opium and three months' pass duty in Benday amount to Rs. 2,63,81,010, which is Rs. 56,010 better than the estimate. Bengal opium has realised Rs. 5,35,965 below, and Benday opium Rs. 5,92,975 above the estimate.

THE Allahabad Bank, Limited, has just declared a dividend and bonus at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum for the past year.

It is stated that the Accountant-General, Hyderabad, has formulated a scheme for the establishment of a Chamber of Commerce at Hyderabad.

In relation to the report which has been telegraphed from Madras that the Hon. C. G. Master has been selected for the Viceregal Council, it is pointed out that there is at present no vacancy in the Governor-General's Council, Mr. Goodrich's term of office not expiring till November.

A DEPUTATION from the Central India Association has presented an address to the Maharajah Holkar congratulating him on his installation.

MR. GOWRISHANKAR UDAYASHANKAR, C.S.I., the vertable ex-Dewan of Bhaunagur, has undergone the coromony of admission to the holy order of a Sanyasi.

COLONEL WATSON, of the Kattywar Agency, has arrived in Bombay, en route to England on leave. The Jains are contemplating a memorial in his honour in recognition of the services rendered by him to the community in settling their dispute with the Thakore of Palitana.

A FURTHER development of the Madras scandals is now being awaited. The Hon. H. E. Sullivan, Senior Member of Council, has presented to the High Court a petition praying that Mr. Eardly Norton, the barrister who conducted the defence in the recent dacoity prosecution, should be called upon to justify the statements made by him in the course of the trial.

MR. J. P. CORNFORTH, J.P., has been appointed to be a member of the Bombay Municipal Corporation, in succession to Deputy Surgeon-General H. Cook, who resigned on going home on leave.

THE members of the Finance Committee, who are deputed for the purpose, commence their tour on the 1st proximo, and return to Calcutta in the early part of October.

The entire Committee will reassemble for the preparation of their report on November November 1st.

It is said that the trustees to the debenture-holders of the New Dharamsee Mills having failed to secure private offers for the concern have resolved to sell it by auction.

It is understood that the Government of India has at last consented to take over absolutely the Umritsur and Pathankote Railway from the 1st of April next.

THE line will then become an integral part of the North-Western system, by whose management it is now being worked.

It is said that a Cotton Ginning Association will shortly be established at Broach.

It is intended to hold a small Camp of Exercise at  $\mathbf{R}_{a}\mathbf{wal}$  Pindi during the cold weather.

Hotes of the Week.

DURING the past week there has been a further fall of id. per rupee in the rate obtained by the India Council for its drawings upon India, and the unprecedented low rate of 1s. 4d. per rupee was recorded for transfers upon London. The depression in the Silver Market has been even greater than in the Exchange Market, the Indian banks being unwilling to buy at even 3s. 6d. per ounce, a quotation indicating a fall of nearly 2d. in a fortnight. The tendency is still downward, and the prospect is, indeed, a gloomy one for those who have to remit from India, or who are dependent upon such remittances.

Cirr editors in their money articles may be justified in recommending investments in rupee paper, as even at present prices the investor secures 48 per cent for his money, but the real sufferers are not those who invest, but those who have to make both ends meet as best they can—the toiling bread-winners in India, and the stinted bread-eaters at home, who have to do the best they can with the family remittances. For these the silver lining on the cloud is not yet visible.

THE Statist tries to throw a ray of hope upon the darkness in recalling attention to the fact that, when the present Chancellor of the Exchequer held the position of Secretary of State for India, the question of suspending the coinage of silver in India was among the proposals under the consideration of Ministers; and adds that "the return of Lord Randolph Churchill to power is regarded with satisfaction by those who advocate the adoption of some assumed remedial action on the part of the Government." But this is very poor consolution. Such a step as that suggested will hardly be attempted pending the sitting of the much-talked-of Royal Commission to inquire into the whole Silver question, and even if it were the heroic remedy might fail. Our faith in even a Royal Commission is not strong—but what is to be done?

THE general question is not easy to answer, but where it touches upon the effect of the falling rupee upon the salaries and pensions of the Civil and Military servants of the Crown serving in or connected with India some satisfactory reply must be found before long. When the present rates of pay for the Indian Services, Civil, Military and Medical, were fixed, the rupee was roughly calculated to be the equivalent of nearly two shillings. When it fell to 1s. 9d. there was, of course, a good deal of grumbling, but the situation was accepted in the hope of better times coming. But now that the value has fallen to 1s. 4d., with a still downward tendency, there is general consternation and a common questioning as to what Government will do. Something must be done, in common justice, or Indian Service will be at a discount =as well as the rupee.

Mr. CHARLES MARVIN clearly shows in a letter to the Times that the telegram which has been going the round of the Press to the effect that, "according to intelligence received at St. Petersburg from Khabarovka, the delimitation of the Afghan frontier has been finally settled," has been misunderstood in England, where it has been taken to apply to the present Anglo-Russian Boundary Commission. points out that the reference is to a totally different frontier dispute-viz., that between China and Russia-there being no Khabarovka in Central Asia, while last spring China sent a Commissioner to Khabarovka on the Amoor to settle a frontier dispute with Russia. "Apparently an error has arisen in confusing the Amoor with the Amoo or Amu-Daria (Oxus), on which the disputed Afghan point of Khoja-Seleh is situated." The dispute there has not yet been "finally settled," for it is not to Russia's interest that it should be. She will play with England in the amusing comedy of "The Joint Boundary Commission" a little longer.

THERE will be joy in Babudom at Calcutta at the news that Sir Stenart Bayley is to succeed Sir Rivers Thompson as Lieutenant Governor of Bengal in March next, for the Babus dreaded that the coming man was Sir Lepel Griffin. They have an idea that Sir Lepel would rule over them with "a strong right hand"—too strong for their seditious philosophies. They have therefore wished him at the Punjab, or even a hotter place. Sir Steuart Bayley is a "safe" man; he will rule quietly and "sympathetically," and the Native Press will return him evil abuse for whatever good he will try to do. But that is the state of life which every Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is called to.

SIR LEPEL GRIFFIN would be lost in Bengal. In the Panjab, should he be chosen for its ruler and accept the post, he will be the right man in the right place, and his appointment would be hailed with delight by all the Sikh Sirdars and Chiefs of the Northern Province.

Many of our readers will thank us for re-publishing today the strong and well-reasoned letter which Sir W. P. Andrew addressed a few days ago to the Times. Years have not dimmed the clear sight which so long ago saw danger to India from Russia's stealthy (but now rapid) advances, nor has time blunted the pen which wrote so forcibly as to how those advances might be most successfully met. Whether the Euphrates Railway project be undertaken by our statesmen at this late hour or not, the veteran engineer has the satisfaction of knowing that in the end his views have been accepted by his countrymen, and his warnings acknowledged to be justified by events. But must the fatal words "Too late!" be now the only answer possible?

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

CALCUTTA, AUGUST 8.

The continued and rapid fall in exchange is likely to prove a The continued and rapid fall in exchange is likely to prove a source of serious difficulty to the Indian Government. List week the rupee nearly touched 1s. 4d., or twopence below the rate taken in the Budget calculations. A fall of one penny is supposed to cost the Government £1,000,000 sterling, so it would seem that Sir Auckland Colvin will have to provide £2,000,000 more than he deemed necessary when he made his financial statement last March. The question whether the deprecation of silver is beneficial to trade or otherwise is one which has been hotly discussed, and there are numbers of able advocates on both sides: but there can be no doubt as to its advocates on both sides; but there can be no doubt as to its very serious effect to the Government and to all Europeans with fixed salaries. The only ray of comfort which those who suffer from the present state of affairs can discern is that the worse these affairs become the more likely are they to force themselves upon the attention of the British Government and public, and the more probable is it that some effort will be made to check the evil. Meanwhile, there is much doubt as to how the Indian Government will meet this extra call on its resources. The general belief is that the salt tax will be considerably raised next year, and that the income-tax may also be increased. Already year, and that the income-tax may also be increased. Already several organs of public opinion are suggesting the reimposition of cotton import duties which were so recklessly thrown away some years ago, and there can be no doubt such a step would be most popular in India. It is doubtful, however, whether the Government is yet prepared to venture upon it in face of the opposition which it would probably meet from home.

The silver difficulty apart, the financial position is satisfactory. The monsoon rains are general and plentiful. The railways are doing well, and, although the price of Bengal and Benares opium is falling, that of Malwa is well sustained. It is still too early to estimate the probable outturn of the income-tax, but there is

The latest crop reports from all parts of the Lieutenant-Govenorship of Bengal are most favourable—a very important fact, as this is perhaps the most critical period of the year, fact, as this is perhaps the most critical period of the year, inasmuch as the winter rice is now being transplanted, while sugar cane and jute are approaching maturity. Some districts report that a bumper crop is probable, while in all it is likely to be quite up to the average. The only exceptions to the general chorus of satisfaction would appear to be the tea and indigo planters. The former complain of the want of sun, which interferes with the quality of the leaf, while most indigo districts report their preparets as only middling and the outturn as likely interferes with the quality of the leaf, while most indigo districts report their prospects as only middling and the outturn as likely to fall short of last year. The heavy rain of the last few days has caused some apprehension of a recurrence of the inundations which last year did so much damage in the Moorshedabad and Nuddya districts. The Lalpoor embankment, the breaching of which by the Ganges resulted in the flooding of a large tract of country, is again threatened. On this occasion, however, it is carefully watched daily. Telegrams as to the state of the river are being circulated among the people, so that if the embankment gives way the people will have timely notice and the danger will be reduced to a minimum.

BURMA.

PAGAN, AUGUST 4. On the 30th of July a strong body of insurgents, led by a Phoongyee, named Boh Oudama, descended from the hills and attacked the military post at Salenmyo, on the western bank. The insurgents failed to carry our stockade, and surrounded Silanmyo Lieutenant Cotton, commanding at Salenmyo, signalled for assistance, and two columns were sent to his relief from Sinbuyyoon and Mimbu.

On the 1st of August the Sinbuyyoon column reached Salenmyo.

Major Atkinson, of the Hampshire Regiment, was shot through the head and killed while leading the attack on the stockals erected by the insurgents. After some sharp fighting, during which six Europeans and four sepoys were wounded, some severely, at the stockade, the insurgents were defeated with evere loss.

BELOOCHISTAN.

CALCUTTA, AUGUST 8. The Hurnai railway is being rapidly pushed on. A liberal allotment of funds has been made, and it is now believed that the line will be finished to Pishin by the end of March.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, AUGUST 8. Mr. Stevens, an American gentleman, who is attempting to travel round the world on a bicycle, has arrived in India, and has published an interesting account of his adventures in Afghanistan. Finding that the Russians would not allow him to carry out his original plan of proceeding by Merv to the Oxus, he applied to Sir West Ridgeway for permission to join the camp of the Boundary Commission, with a view of finding his way thence to India. Sir West Ridgeway replied that the plan was impracticable. Thereupon Mr. Stevens went from Meshed southward to Birjan, where he succeeded in crossing the Afghan frontier and reaching Farrah. Thence he hoped to go to Quetta by way of Candahar, but the Governor detained him and eventually sent him to Herat. He was kept some days outside Herat, and was him to Herat. He was kept some days outside Herat, and was then sent under escort to the Persian frontier. The attempt to side across Afghanistan was thus baffled.

Mr. Stevens proposes to wheel himself to Lahore and to Calcutta, and then go by sea to Canton, to ride to Northern China in his bicycle, and finally to take ship for Japan and America.

Intelligence received from Bosaha to the 18th ult. announces that all preliminary surveys of the Afghan Boundary Commission for the delimitation of the frontier between Duks'i Wells and the Amu Daria have been brought to a close in view of a difference which has arisen between the Russian and British Commissioners with regard to the point on the Amu Daria at which the frontier line should terminate. It is added that the question has been referred for decision to the two Governments, to which have been forwarded at the same time all the necessary data and information that have been collected by the two Commissions on the spot. Both Commissions will meanwhile remain in the neighbourhood of Bosaha.

We have received the following telegram from the Secretary of State for India, dated August 4, 1886 :"Captain R. F. Atkinson, 2 id Buttalion Humpshire Regiment, killed; No. 1,613, Private F. Ribards, 2nd Buttalion Humssire Regiment, and No. 24, Private Wright, 2nd Battalion Liverpool Regiment, severely wounded, July 31, at Salenmyo."

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The State of Rewah in Central India is more often heard of as the locality of some valuable coal-fields which the Government of India has undertaken to work than as a seat of political interest. But a recently issued a liministration report places the State in But a recently issued a limistration report places the State in the category of those which, through stress of circumstances, have temporarily passed under British management, and have been all the better for it. The recent history of the State is peculiar. About five years ago the Maharajah, vexed with the hindrances that turbulent Rajputs and designing Brahmins had given to his attempts to govern the State, asked the British Government to take over its administration. This meant the appointment of a Public of State, with large powers of control for nothing Political Superintendent, with large powers of control, for nothing less than this would have sufficed to give the State anything worthy the name of an administration. The country was in as bad a condition as it could be in, although in reading of it we seem to be reading a rejection of the tales tell of States of much greater renown in India than Rewah. That there were no law greater renown in India than Rewah. That there were no law courts was not necessarily a sign that the institutions of the country were not adapted to the limited necessities of a backward people. But the farming of the land revenue—farming, too, in a fashion which often gave the ryot two oppre-sors instead of one—entailed the direct and grievous oppression of the people, while it deprived the State of its revenues. There was no administration of criminal justice worthy of the name, and the convicted and the unconvicted autority of the name, and the convicted and the unconvicted autority of the name, and the convicted and the unconvicted autority of the name, and the convicted and the the unconvicted suffered common punishment in a common cell. There was an army, but it was left to runs the roads in rags, and often to pay itself in the easiest way that was open to iv. It is a familiar story, and Rewah was not worse off than many of the neighbouring States were when their rulers were left entirely to their own devices. And the story of its rehabilitation is almost as typical as that of its disorder. A Political Superintenden came and ruled the land with strength and honesty. His firstep, like that with which Sir Salar Jung began his administration in Hyderabad, was to abolish the abominable system of farming the revenues; he instituted law courts; he reduced the army, pulling off its rags and paying off its arrears; he introduced a capable Dewan who had learnt to do good work in the North-West Provinces, and he introduced a working settlement of the land. The result has been a new reign of order in the State, the restoration of its finances, and a condition of things which, in comparison with that which had preceded it, may be described as prosperity itself. One can only hope, in reading this record, that too much has not been attempted. If that well-intentioned error has been avoided the five years' tutelage has been of immense advantage to the State, and the young Maharajah will enter upon his inheritance when the days of his minority are at any order conditions to which his father and his father's subjects end under conditions to which his father and his father's subjects were strangers.

THE PACIFICATION OF UPPER BURMA. (Rangoon Gazette).

We are apt to speak and write now as if every one expected the pacification of Burma to be the merest child's play, and as if it were quite astonishing that so much time and so many troops are required. It is true that every one expected the annexation of Upper Burma to be a very simple matter; but annexation and pacification are two very different things. The former provid to be even easier than was anticipated; and the latter, most people will admit, is proving harder. Certainly few persons who knew the country expected that so many troops would be required; but a prolonged guerilla war with the robber bands which were known to infest the country was foreseen as inevitable by every one who seriously considered the position. The chief mistake made in forecasting the results of the war seems to have been that the utter rottenness of Theebaw's position was not fairly grasped. In a general way it was known that the country was rapidly drifting into appropriate that the country was grasped. In a general way it was known that the coun'ry was rapidly drifting into anarchy, but it was not known that the nominal Government had so little real hold on the country, or that anarchy had risen so high as it had done. This course, which facilitated Theebaw's overthrow, retards the work of pacification. Exactly in proportion as the Burmese Government was enfeebled anarchy must have grown; and so it came about that the actual war with Theebaw was the merest walk over, while the pacification, which is really the struggly against. while the pacification, which is really the struggle against anarchy, is proving a much tougher piece of work than was ex-

Had we undertaken the war and annexed the country when w should have done so, that is, immediately after Theebaw's blood stained accession, we would probably have had to face a more vigorous resistance on the part of the Burmese Government, but the subsequent work of pacification would have been much easier. Even then, though, we should probably have had to face a good deal of mere ararchy. In the best of times, and under the most vigorous of Native sovereigns, dacoity has been a recognised institution among the Burmese. It scarcely implies any disgrace. On the contrary, a brave dacoit leader is rather held in honour. Even under British rule such ideas have not completely ceased, nor has dacoity been whelly stamped out. In independent Burma a bold dacoit leader might be employed by the King as general of a military expedition. If he were very bold and unscrupulous, and had the luck to live under a feeble king, he might aspire to become king himself some day. Under such circumstances there must always have been a good deal of actual anarchy, though in Burmese times it was too much a matter of course to attract much notice. In our new province we have now to contend not only with all the anarchy of Native production, which under Theebaw's fostering care would be no inconsiderable quantity in itself, but also with the anarchical elements produced in British Burma during a whole generation; that is all the ruffians of this province who have preterned crossing the frontier to being sent to the Andamans. Our fight is really with anarchy, not with Burmese patriotism at all; and if the fight be somewhat longer, more expensive and more wearisome than we had reckoned on, we must tear this as best we may. It was inevitable that we should do this piece of work some day, and the longer we delayed the dirrier we should have found it.

POONA AS A SUMMER CAPITAL. (Bombay Gazette.)

We can hardly affect to believe, notwithstanding the opinion of Lord Randolph Churchill, of which he made no secret to the of Loid Randolph Churchill, of which he made no secret to the Pioneer, that the question of selecting another summer capital for the Government of India is quite within the range of practical politics; but we must say if all that can be adduced against the roposal is what is being urged by numerous people at this moment who are giving their whole minds to the task, to say nothing of a considerable addition of feeling, the fate of Poona to be the future capital of India is much nearer settlement than we could have supposed, and the opinion of Lord Randolph Churchill on the matter is not by a long way the most foolish thing he ever said. To begin with, the rival claims of Nass ck, which are always mentioned—by Bengal writers—when the subject is broached, are merely a remininiscence of a pamphlet subject is broached, are merely a remininiscence of a pamphlet written by Sir George Campbell upwards of twenty years ago, in which it is quite true that he put that holy place above Poona, which in his estimation, if we remember correctly, ranked second. Sir George arrived at this conclusion in a somewhat remarkable Sir George arrived at this conclusion in a somewhat remarkable manner, namely, by a competitive examination, in which the various possible places were regarded as candidates, and awarded "marks" under various headings, such as "climate," "convenience," &c. A table was given of all the marks awarded, and the totals were duly added up, and according to the result no doubt Nassick headed the poll. It is a remarkable fact that ever since that day, it has been considered by many persons who never saw Poona, and by all who never saw Nassick, a sufficient and absolutely conclusive refutation of the claims of Poona to merely mention Nassick. As in many another competitive examination a mention Nassick. As in many another competitive examination, a little common sense and an actual inspection of the two candidates would have corrected any fanciful estimation of their claims in marks. Poona is unquestionably one of the most salubrious c ntonments in India for the greater part of the year. Other places surpass it for brief seasons, but whilst Poona in the rains by common consent a charming climate it he conditions which is by common consent a charming climate, it has qualities which wear, and is a good all round place of residence for all but a few weeks of the year, and for those few weeks there is Mahableshwar within such easy distance of Secretariats in Poona or Bombay that no practical inconvenience in the disputch of business arises from an elongation, for a trief period, of the bands which connect the motive power with the working parts of the mach no. With regard to the capacities of the locality per se, and apart from climate, the situation of Poona is such as to allow of an almost indefinite the situation of Poona is such as to allow of an almost indefinite expansion in the direction of Yerowda, which, as it has been fixed upon as the site of the great central jail of the Presidency, may be safely put down as the healthiest place within reach, according to the whimsical but invariable rule that jails are always put in the healthiest quarter. An incidental but not altogether unimportant advantage which would attend the location of the Supreme Government in Poona would be, if we may venture to whisper such a thing into the ear of some Bengal critics, that the Government of India would experience the novel and refreshing sensation of living in the midst of a Native population having some rudiments of that first requisite of a political community—rationality. The lamented Walter Bagehot was fond of insisting that this indispensable quality was a gift of race, and almost confined to the Anglo-Saxon, but it is since his time that the political Native Press of Western India has grown into importance, and begun to exhibit the qualities of moderation iuto impertance, and begun to exhibit the qualities of moderation and reasonableness which elevate politics into a subject of rational discussion—qualities which are unfortunately chiefly conspicuous by their absence in the regions to which the Supreme Government is by present custom confined. The political contrast from the venomous and irritating atmosphere by which it is at present surrounded to the more masculine and invigorating tone of discussion in the best Native journals of this side of India would be as refreshing as the physical one, and might have as salutary an effect on the measures of Government.

BENGAL.

ERRATUM.—The name of the Executive Engineer of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, who was killed by the fumes of a chest of ammonia he was opening, should have been given as Winana, not Williams.

THE JUTE TRADE.—Our Commercial Correspondent telegraphs:

"At a meeting of the Howrah Mill Shareholders on Monday it was resolved to join the proposed extension of short-time for another six months. The matter now seems virtually settled."

The Protection of Girls.—Miss Mary E. Leslie, whose name is no doubt well known in connection with certain philasthropic institutions in Calcutta, is stirring up the question of the inadequacy of the law for the "protection of young girls" in this country.

Considerable progress was made last year in the drawing, engraving, photographic, and lithographic offices of the Surveyor-General's office at Calcutta. The total number of maps issued was 235,636, valued at Rs. 1,86,380, which was an increase of 36,579 in number, and Rs. 13,858 in value over the previous year. This department is likely in future to be worked more economically, as an arrangement has now been made under which the various local Governments and Departments will be charged for the work done for them as well as for all maps supplied. Among the maps undertaken on special requisition were railway and road maps of the North-West frontier as far as Quetta, a map showing the distribution of the principal religions in India, and a large skeleton map of the whole of India. This last was prepared specially for the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, as was also an elaborate model based on the 32-mile map of India, thowing all the hills of which the scale admits.

MADRAS.

The Scandals Continue.—On July 13th the Advocate-General made an application on the part of the Hon. II. E. Sullivan Senior Member of Council, in reference to the conduct of Mr. Eardley Norton in the recent Garstin Dacoity Case. The petitioner stated that he was subpensed to appear at the last Criminal Sessions of Madras, under the circumstances mentioned in the affidavit filed herewith, as winess on behalf of the defence in the pro-ecution of the Queen-Empress versus The Zemindar of Bodinayakanur and thirteen others, and attended Court accordingly, but was not called; that several grossly defamatory statements were made against the petitioner by Mr. Norton throughout the trial of the case, particulars of which are set out in the affidavit. The petitioner prays that the Court will call upon the said Mr. Norton to explain under what circumstances he applied for a subpens against the petitioner, and to justify the statements made by him upon such application. The petitioner prays also that Mr. Norton may be called upon to explain his conduct in making charges against the petitioner during the tral of the case of a grossly defamatory character, in the absence of any evidence on record to justify the same. The petitioner also further prays that the Court will pass such orders on the petition and affidavit as their lordships may think fit, and that Mr. Norton may be ordered to pay the costs of this petition and the order to be made thereon. The Advocate-General said he proceeded under the 10th paragraph of the Letters Patent, which gave the High Court jurisdiction over all advocates a mitted in such Courts, and referred to the case of Mr. Newton, barrister-at-law, practising in the North-West Provinces, who was suspend d by the Chief Justice of those provinces for a period of five years, but which order was subsequently quashed by the Privy Council on the ground that no misconduct had been proved. The Advocate-General having read the affidavit in support of his petition, their lardship passed an order that the petit

BOMBAY.

Mr. Premenund Royenund, the well-known Native broker of Bombay, has filed a petition in the Insolvency C urt. Some years ago Mr. Premehund passed under the now defunct Act 28 of 1865, with liabilities amounting, we believe, to about three crores of rupees.

THE TRADE OF BOMBAY.—Some neteworthy indications of the increasing trade in the harbour of Bombay was, says the Bombay Gazette, given at the last meeting of the Port Trust. Applications for fixed berths in the Prince's Dock were received from three well-known lines, the Agent of the Austro-Hungarian Lloyd's intimating that the steamers of that line have received orders to go into the dock until further orders, and information being given from other agencies that new lines of steamers will run fortnightly between Liverpool and Bombay, and monthly between Antwerp and Bombay. The answer which the Trustees have given to the applicants, declining to allot any more preferential borths in the Princ's Dock, was necessitated by the increasing demands upon the accommodation in that basin, and it will be inferred from their hesitation to pledge themselves to give preferential berths in the new dock when it is opened that the Trustees by no means think that it will be in excess of the demands of the shipping of the port.

THE Cama Hospital, on the Esplanade, Bombay, was opened by Lady Reny on the 23rd inst. The hospital will be under the immed ate superintendence of Drs. Edith P. chey and Ellaby.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

In appears that Captain Hearsey, of Laidman v. Hearsey fame, has solicited the function of the Viceroy to a prosecution of Sir Alfred Lyall or a charge of "writing, printing, publishing, and circulating a criui ally false and maliciously wilful and untrue defamatory document concerning your petitioner."

The composition of the two committees that are under orders to assemble at Simla to consider certain ques ions connected with the requirements of an army in the field is as follows:—The British Committee:—Lieutenant-Colonel Pearson, Commanding Suffolk Regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel Langtry, Commanding 8th Hussars; Major Marshall, Commanding L.A., R.H.A., Meerut; and Major Lugard. R. V., as Secretary. The Indian Committee:—Brigadier-General Sir Hugh Gough; Leutenant Colonel Hawes, 4th Punjab Infantry; Major Meiklejoho, 20th Punjab Infantry; Captain Massy, 19th Bengal Lucers; and Captain Hogge, 14th Sikhs, as Secretary.

OBITUARY.

Dn. A. Gondon, C.B.—Archibald Gordon, Esq., M.D., C. B, and L.H., Inspector-General of Hospitals and Honorary Surgeon to Her Majesty, died on the 3rd instant at Woodlands, West Hoathly, in his '5th year. He entered the Army as an assistant surgeon in June, 1836, was promoted to surgeon in September, 1848, surgeon-major in October, 1854, deputy inspector-general in January, 1856, inspector-general in March, 1867, and was placed on the half-pay list in July, 1870. He served with the 53rd Regiment in the Sutlej Campaign in 1846, including the affair of Buddiwal, and actions of Aliwal and Sobraon, receiving the medal with clasp. He was in medical charge of the 24th Regiment throughout the Punjab Campaign of 1848-49, and was present at the battles of Ladoolapore, Chillianwallah, and Goojerat, receiving the medal with two clasps. He also served in the Eastern Campaign of 1854-55, and was present at the affair of Bulganic, Battle of Alma, and capture of Balaklava, and was principal medical officer of the 2nd Division throughout the siege and fall of Sebastopol, and was also principal medical officer of the Kinbourn Expedition. He was in receipt of the medal with three clasps and Turkich medal, and was appointed a C.B. and Knight of the Legion of Honour. Dr. Gordon was principal medical officer with the Expeditionary Force to China in 1857, and was present at the capture of Canton (medal with clasp). He was again principal medical officer throughout the campaign in Oude in 1858-59 (medal).

MAJOR WILLANS.—A Shillong correspondent writes:—" I regret to report an accident here to Major Willans, Royal Engineers, which ended fat lly. In view to charging an ice machine, he was endeavouring to remove the cork from a jar of ammon a. The cork stuck fast, and Major Willans struck it, when the jur exploded. Major Willans received the fumes of the ammonia into his lungs, He was for the time rendered insensible, and rolled down the hillside upon which he was standing. After a time he recovered, got up, and walked to the house, consoling himself with the belief that he was all right. He consented, however, to see a doctor, who thought seriously of his case. He was in high fever on Saturday night, but about 4 P.M. on Sunday, called for some tea, and drank it quickly, sitting up in a chair. Then saying, 'I feel so tired, I must lie down,' he went to his bed, but had scarcely reached it when he died. The exact cause of his death is not clear. Though attributed to the ammonia, the report does not say what its precise effect upon the system was. Major Willans had been in Assam for many years, and has left his mark. To him are due the admirable system of hill roads at Shillong, many of the principal buildings there and elsewhere, and the Cherra Poonjee Mountain Railway on the water counterpoise system, which is just complete, but which he, Major Willans, has not lived to see in thorough working. Major Willans was an exceptionally accomplished engineer, and will be regretted besides by all those who knew him for his admirable personal qualities. He was buried at Shillong with military honours.

It is proposed to hold a rifle meeting at Simla in September at which the various teams of Northern India will compete.

THE ENGLISH FLORIN. TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—Why should Her Majesty's silver money be worth 2. in this country, and worth only 1s. 4½d. in India? Both coins have on them Her Majesty's image and superscription, but one is called a florin and the other a rupee.

It is not denied that the members of the gold sing have ma legieat sums of money by depreciating the value of the rupee; and they will undoubtedly make every effort to prevent the English florin from being declared current in India, and to prevent the English Mint from increasing its coinage of silver in proportion to the increased demand.

We cannot expect English shopkeepers to accept Indian respects readily in payment of debts, but we know that 200 millions of our subjects in India, and every European living in Asia, will eagerly accept English florius. All that Her Majesty's Government has to do is to declare that florins will be accepted in payment of taxes in India.

Why should the English Government set its face against the popularity of the English florin, which might take the place of the dollar throughout the vast Continents of Asia and Africa.

August 3rd.

Your obedient servant,

THE ADVANCE OF RUSSIA TOWARDS INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

Sir,—Many years ago, in giving publicity to a letter written by me to Lord Palmerston, you wrote: -"Twenty years ago the neglect of the Euphrates route to India was cited among the marvels of British apathy." Is this to endure in the face of the gigantic strides with which the Colossus of the North last seem advancing to try conclusions with us in the East and elsewhere?

The Russian fleet threatens Port Lazareff, in the Cerca, on the pretext that we have occupied Port Hamilton. The present Czar has declared Batoum to be no longer a free port in spite of the premise made by his predecessor in the 59th Article of the Treaty of Berlin, which, however, had barely been executed whom preceedings were commenced to fortify the port.

It is reported that another difference has occurred between the English and Russian members of the Afghan Bound by Commission, and that the latter have referred to St. Petersburg for instructions, no doubt on purpose to cause delay. Next we hear rumours of a Russian "scientific" expedition to Mesopotamia and the Valley of the Euphrates; and it is said that Euchia has

of the arrears of the war indomnity. The recent speech of the Czar at Sebastopol, the massing of troops in the Crimea and Bessarabia, the increase of the Black Sea fleet, all appear to menace the future peace of the world, and especially that of Turkey and England.

For nearly two centuries the conquest of India has been Russia's dream. The time now appears to have arrived when the might of Imperial England must intervene to stay her onward march towards our Empire in the East. The Trans Caspian Railway from Michaelovsk, on the bay of that name on the Caspian, was opened as far as Merv on the 14th of July last. The leading South Russian organs have jubilant articles on the successful and rapid completion of this railway. With this and other railways it is asserted that Russia will have being a position to savinusly coarse England through With this and other railways it is asserted that Russia will always be in a position to seriously coerce England through always be in a position to seriously coerce England through India. The position, we are told, is altogether changed on the Afghan frontier. Russia has hitherto been dependent on the Cis Caspian supplies, the transport of which occupied many weeks; the fertile portions of Persian Khorasan will later on support a mighty Russian host; and that Candahar can at any mement be made the objective point of a powerful expedition.

It would appear, therefore, scarcely possible that anyone who has studied the question can view unconcernedly the position which Russia is so rapidly gaining, or that anyone interested in India should now object to a reconsideration of our Indian frontier policy.

Hitherto Afghanistan and the inhospitable districts beyond Are been, as it were, a protecting barrier, behind which we were comparatively secure; but let this be penetrated or turned we must be prepared to meet our enemy face to face. But how can we do this with such a precarious population as India has around wus and in our rear?

If not delayed the advance of Russia will continue to be as rapid as it has been in the past. In 1863 the frontier line of Russia was from the northern end of the Sea of Aral to the Issik Kul Lake. The conquest of Tashkend, Bokhara, and Issik Kui Leke. The conquest of Tashkend, Bokusta, and Samarcand followed at short intervals, and in 1873 we see the Bursian army marching triumphantly into Khiva. Nine or ten years after this Russia declared that she had no choice but to march on the casis of Merv and the formidable military position of Sarakhs and annex them, which placed the Russian army almost within striking distance of Herat. Not satisfied with these acquisitions we saw recently how ruthlessly she stized upon Penjdeh, when the Sovereign of the country was in India, the guest of the Viceroy of the Queen-Empress.

Seeing, then, the onward march that Russia is making in Central Asia, and with what rapidity she consolidates the additions to her Empire the consolidates the additions to her Empire the consolidates the additional to her Empire the consolidates the consolidates the additional to her Empire the consolidates the consoli tions to her Empire, there appears to be little doubt that the people of Afghan-Turkestan and Herat will pass under her sway as certainly as have the Turcomans and other Trans-Caspian tribes unless the power of England stay her advancing standards.

It is evident that we cannot afford to live any longer in a fool's paradise, and believe in the pacific assurances of Russia, who never makes a promise but to break it the moment it is to her interest to do so

The future policy of England is to rely upon her own vigilance and valour, to complete and perfect the railways to the Khyber and Bolan passes, carrying on the latter line to Quetta, and eventually to Candahar, where we ought to occupy a position in strength, able to repel any movement towards the Bolau, and to assail in flank and rear any force advancing towards the Khyber. This view I advocated nearly thirty years ago, and to which I adhere. Let us therefore without delay fix the line that Russia is not to pass, as the prestige of our invincibility and our power of dominion would be seriously affected by the invasion by the Muscovite of the dominions of our ally, Abdurrahman Khan, whose territory we have pledged the honour of England to hold

With Candahar strongly fortified and connected with the rail. way system of India in the rear and the Hindu-Koosh in our possession we should be in an impregnable position.

Batoum is evidently intended as the base of operations against Armenia and India, and threatens the existence of our protectorate over Asia Minor.

A late number of the Broad Arrow says :- " To all intents and purposes Batoum has been a place of arms for some time past.

Mr. Gallenga, the Times correspondent, pointed this out in passing through the place in 1882. The following year Mr. Marvin visited the port twice and in his 'Region of the Eternal Fire,' if we remember rightly, he mentions the case of a contractor who, being asked to send in tenders for repairs to the Turkish redoubt, and heading his tender too plainly was year. Turkish redoubt, and heading his tender too plainly, was re-minded by General Komaroff that there 'were no redoubts in Batoum, fortifications being forbidden by the Treaty of Berlin,' and that 'he must correct his application throughout as being a tender for garrison barrack repairs.' More recently the members of the Afghan Frontier Mission passed and repassed through the place, and have confirmed repeated statements about the existence of the unarmed batteries inside the free port, and the arsenal, full of heavy gues and all he essential munition of war, just outside it—a railway, moreover, connecting the two."

A recent correspondent at Constantinople says:—"The place has not only become important as a fortress, but as an arsenal has not only become important as a fortress, but as an arsenal and general military depôt. Among the buildings eracted there are four large powder magazines at Sckindir, nine depôts for stores and clothing at Bazurchane, seven military hospitals, and a general arsenal, which contained lately 70 Krupp guns, 100 cannon of different patterns, and 3,000 torpedocs." On this and other subjects the tone of the Russian Press is very defiant towards England. We must take note that regarding Batoum Russia has addressed a direct challenge to England, and we must shape our policy accordingly. Russia has by this repudiation enabled England to recover her freedom of action and to take such steps regarding the Straits as her interests may demand. such steps regarding the Straits as her interests may demand, however inconvenient to Russia. By repudiating one part of the Treaty, Russia debars herself from using any other portion

A Berlin newspaper of the 28th of July says:—"The expansion of Russia in Central Asia had now reached such a point that, sion of Russia in Central Asia had now reached such a point that, leaving out of account some barren mountain districts, every st-p forward must be taken in Persia, China, or the s, here of England's authority. English policy must adapt itself to these facts, though this can only be done with success when England's own military strength makes an impoing impression as against that of Rus a. Since Lord Salisbury has again taken the lead, and probably for a long time, it is to be expected that this view of the situation will be adonted."

The movements of Russia have excited the deepest attentior, not only of thoughtful Englishmen, but of various countries in Europe as well as in America; and there appears to be a general desire to know what steps, if any, are being taken to connect the Mediterranean Sea with the head of the Persian Gulf along the Euphrates route, and so reopen the ancient highway of nations between the East and West.

The example of Russia's persecering energy in establishing her Eastern communications should not be lost upon us, for she advances boldly, regardless of cost or any other obstruction, knowing well that the additional prestige which she will thereby gain, not only in the East, but in Europe also, will amply repay her for any sacrifica any sacrifice.

The general features of the projected Euphrates Valley Ruilway have been so frequently explained in your columns that a very brief summary may suffice: 1. It would connect Alexandretta with the head of the P rainn Gulf, making Kurrachee the European port of India, saving between England and India in distance 1,000 miles, and reducing the time for mails from twenty to ten days.

2. It would enable us to maintain India with a smaller European garrison, and save large sums for transport of troops, which pean garrison, and save large sums for transport of troops, which could be sent from England to Kurachee in fourteen days.

3. It would subject an enemy advancing towards the North-West Frontier of India to attack in flank and rear, and combined with the branches already described to the Bolan and Khyber from the Industries and India provided to the Bolan and Khyber from the Indus line, would render India practically secure.

4. It would make the power of Engla d quickly felt in the East, and would enable our military establishments in India to give support to our power and pressige in Europe, giving England the first strategied recision in the mould the first strategical position in the would.

5. It would facilitate our projection of Asia Minor, and give

Persia access to a port on the Mediterranean

Persia access to a port on the Mediterranean.

6. It would be easily defensible, both termini being on the set, accessible by the forces of England and India, the flank being protected by the Euphrates and Tigris; while Cyprus, as a place d'armes, would cover the terminus at Alexandretta.

7. The length of the railway would be about 920 miles, and the capital required under £6,000,000.

This work, essential alike to the protection of India and to the preservation of the Turkish Empire, was recommended to the preservation of the British Government by the Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1872, of which the present Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs was chairman.

In 1883 Lord Salisbury, in his place in the House of Peers, declared:—

declared :-

"The popularity of the scheme and the great attention given to it are only some of the many signs which should make Her to it are only some of the many signs which should make Her Majesty's Government consider that the subject of connecting the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean is one of the most important questions of the day. . . . It is, therefore, a matter for which Her Majesty's Government will be held largely responsible by the public if they do not adopt at an early period a 'definite policy on the question—a policy to which they are prepared to adhere, and one which will respond to the feelings entertained by the public of this country.—I am Sir, your obedient servant, Sir, your obedient servant, 29, Bryanston-square, W., Aug. 3.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE rifle match between the Commander-in-Chief with five of his staff and six of the Jutogh garrison was recently shot at S mla. The distances were 200 and 600 yards, with seven shots at each range. The match was won by the Chief's team with 358 points against 292.

In a return rifle match between the Commander-in-Chief's Saff and the Simla Volunteers the former won by fourteen points.

The Secretary of State has decided that all officers vacating their regimental commands, &c., and coming under the provisions of G.O. 200 of 1882, 192 of 1883, and clause VIII. of 432 of 1884, and who elect or come under the new leave rules for the Staff Corps, will be entitled, on electing to reside out of India, to draw during such residence the leave allowances admissible under rule 1. The limit of absence from duty will not be held applicable to such officers, but as regards their eligibility and liability for employment, they will remain as heretofore. All officers are not eligible to elect the new rules whether they are going on leave or not; officers applying for privilege or station leave are not required to elect.

MAJOR R. C. STERNDALE, Retired List, Calcutta Volunteer Ritle Corps, has been for some time officiating as Contonment Magistrate, Dum-Dum, a position which the Government of Bengal wished to confer permanently, but which the Government of India have negatived, because Major Sterndale cannot be viewed as a Military Officer, and none but military officers are eligible for the post of Cantonment Magistrate; and that it is only in the case of temporary vacancies when the services of military officers are not available that the appointment of covenanted Civil servants or uncovenanted officers to officiate in such posts has been allowed. The maintenance of this rule is still considered necessary on administrative grounds, and an exception to it could not be made without entailing serious difficulties.

It has been decided that the Presidency house rent of rank cannot be considered to be included in the consolidated salary of a staff officer serving at a presidency town, and is, therefore, not exempt from income-tax. The poor subaltern who passes his examination by the higher standard in Hindustani, and gives his reward to the moonshee who taught him, finds to his cost at the end of the month or so that he is to be mulcied five pies incometax peri rupee on the three hundred and sixty paid to his moonshee, as also on the balance of his own pay, after deduction of tentage and horse allowance, because the moonshee's allowance, added to his pay and allowances for that particular month, aggregate over 500 rupees!

Colonel H. M. Bengough, half-pay, Assistant Adjutant-General, Mysoro Division, has translated from the Russian military magazine, the Svocunei Sbornik, an article on "Night Attacks." The Russians have come to the conclusion that experimental night attacks should be made during peace, and that rules for the guidance of troops making the attack should be formulated. The Russian author lays down the following as his experience in the Right attacks which occurred in the Russe-Turkish War. (a) It is most difficult to identify your position. (b) Leading is almost impossible. (c) Success is a great matter of chance. (d) All firing is useless, possilly injurious. (e) A slight incident will produce a panic. The three last of these deductions appear applicable to the defence as well as to the attack. All military writers on the subject agree that surprise is the chief element of success in a night attack, and for this reason alone all firing should be positively forbidden, and the attack delivered with the bayonet alone. The defendants in knowing their own position, and not requiring to be led, have a double advantage over the attacking force, but the latter can concentrate their whole attack on a given point, which may possibly be very weakly defended owing to the defenders not knowing whether any other point will be assailed. It is always possible on dark and stormy nights to deliver an attack home before any combined skilled defence can be made; and to prevent mistakes the attackers should wear a distinctive badge, which at close quarters would prevent their comrades mistaking them for the enemy. Nights attacks on good troops in a good position to meet with any chance of success slould be delivered in the morning about dawn, the attackers being well and closely supported.

Home Rule for India.—The Indian Mirror says:—"We think that Mr. Lalmohun Ghose was not indulging in a chimera when, lately at a political meeting in England, he observed that if Home Rule is granted to Ireland, India will not long be content without it, and that the concession of Home Rule to India within measural le distance of practical politics. It would, perhaps, be a surprise to many English politicians, and specially to our Anglo Indian friends, to learn that not long after the British Government will have satisfied the Irish Home Rule party they will have to contend with an Indian Home Rule party, perhaps more formidable than the Irish one."

FLY-CATCHING has been long known to be an exhilarating as well as an intellectual pastime, but we fancy it has not occurred to many persons that the occupation can be productive of direct pecuniary gain. That there is money in the business is a point which can hardly be doubted now, for we learn from the Mainichi Shimbun that in Tokio flies are quoted at sen 3 per 100. The commodity is devoted to the sustenance of kajika, a freshwater fish which sings, and, being a songster, has no spare moments in which to do its own fly-catching.

Indian Medical Service.—Surgeons on probation in Her-Majesty's Indian Medical Service who were successful at both the London and Netley examinations. The prizes are awarded for marks gained in the special subjects taught at the Army Medical School. The final positions are determined by the marks gained in London added to those gained at Netley, and the combined numbers are shown in the following list:—30th July: W. G. Thorold (gained the Herbert Prize of £20, with the Montefiore Medal and Prize of 20 guineas), 6,215 marks; P. Hehir (gained the Martin Memorial Gold Medal), 5,940; L. J. Pisani, 5,875; B. K. Basu, 5,672; N. P. Sinha, 5,545; W. R. Edwards, 5,518; C. Mactaggart, 5,352; J. F. Evans (gained the Montefiore Second Prize and also the Prize presented by Surgeon-General W. C. Maclean, C.B.), 5,317; G. J. H. Bell, 5,288; J. T. Daly, 5,279; H. Fooks, 5,242; E. Hudson (gained a prize in pathology, presented by Sir Joseph Fayrer), 5,190; A. C. Deare, 5,175; A. W. Dawson, 5,107; W. H. B. Robinson, 5,048; H. A. Sheppard, 4,783.

CRIME IN THE BARRACK-ROOM.—His Excellency Sir Herbert Macpherson, the Commander-in-Chief of Madras, has issued the following general order:—"Two soldiers of British regiments have lately been brought to trial before general court martial on charges of shooting with intent to commit murder. One soldier was convicted of this most serious crime; the other was found guilty of the lesser offence of shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm. The first case was a premeditated attempt against the life of a superior officer, for an act done in the execution of his duty. In both cases the sentence was five years' penal servitude, the shortest term permissible by law. By such conduct on the part of soldiers, not only are the lives of their comrades endangered but the good name of the army is tarnished. It is no excuse that the offender bears no ill-will towards the person against whom the violence is committed, or that he is under the influence of liquor; but the crime is immeasurably aggravated when the offender's object is to deter a non-commissioned officer from performing his duty, or to revenge himself for a fancied injury. Offences of this nature are properly made punishable by penal servitude for life, or by any less punishment with the intention that punishment shall be awarded according to the nature and degree of the offence. The lives of Her Majesty's subjects must be ensured, and, above all, officers and non-commissioned officers must be protected in the execution of their duty, therefore in aggravated cases the Commander-in-Chief will not hesitate to confirm sentences which inflict upon such offenders the highest sentences sanctioned by law."

The inquiry into the recent firing on peaceable traders at Beeling by a party of Madras Natice Infantry, says a Rangoon correspondent, is not likely to reveal anything very creditable to the discipline of the sepoys. They seem, like the townspeople of Beeling, to have been completely deceived into the belief that the caravan people were really dacoits, but as the latter did not kill or wound anyone on the side of the sepoys, it might at any rate have been sufficient to have kept them prisoners instead of shooting them. The Madras sepoy has done useful service in Burma, and no two regiments have worked harder than the 5th and 26th. Yet some of the latter in the recent affair near the old Allanmyo frontier, where Messrs. Parsons and Dobson were wounded, are said to have refused to follow their jemadar when an advance was ordered, and to have deserted in the face of the enemy. "This cutting up of regiments into small parties of twenty and thirty men," adds the correspondent, "is most fatal to discipline, and yet every regiment in Burma is subject to it owing to the exigencies of the service. Where the detachment has no European officer present with it, the effect is till worse; but the Madras jemadar with Mr. Parsons is said to have done his duty well, and it was his men who were wanting in the first of soldierly qualities. The old Coast Army has done excellent services in its day, and the material and good qualities of the majority of Madras sepoys is probably as good as ever. But they have been accustomed in all previous military operations to have English leaders to an extent which the present organisation does not provide for. Our experiences in the last few months have not shown that the Madras Native officer makes up for the want of European officers with Madras regiments."

BOOKS. NOTICES OF ### EASTERN LIFE AND SCENERY.*

Ladies are proverhially clever in the art of letter-writing; they can throw a veil of interest around the subject of which they treat in away unknown to the minds of the sterner sex. Especially is this the case in regard to descriptive letters intended to convey to the reader an idea of scenes and scenery through which the writer has passed. Mrs. Walker is no exception to the rule. She chats brill antly about all the thousand and one little incidents, the sum of which make up the total of daily existence. Herself a keen admirer of nature, she possesses the happy knack of imparting the same feelings to others. Hence in "Eastern Life and Scenery" we not only have a most readable account of wanderings and journeyings amongst a variety of classes, and in different localities, but we get the most complete and interesting different localities, but we get the most complete and interesting account which we ever remember to have seen of the inner life of the Turkish nation. From the palace of the pasha to the home of the peasant all passes in review; and what is the picture of human existence thus pencilled by a hand guided by an experience derived from many years' residence in the East.

Society, in the sense in which it is understood in the West, is brionsly impossible, owing to the seclusion of the women which the law of Muhammad enjoins. None the less, however, in the law of whether there are "visits in passon and visits by rever visits of havems there are "visits in person and visits by roxy, visits of polite inquiry, and visits of inspection; visits of salutation, of congratulation, of condolence, visits on every festive occasion—public, private and religious." Nor are festivities wanting. Dinner parties—of course, all the guests are of the feminine gender—are endless, but to a "Frank" by no means equally pleasant; for the attitude of kneeling upon the cushion, which is provided in the place of a chair, is both difficult of accomplishment and painful when accomplished; while to a pers n accustomed to the polished Palfis of modern society, it does not add to the refinement of the repast to be compelled to use fingers for forks, and withat not to leave, as a token of inexperience in the ways of Eastern life, a spot of grease on the metal table, the polish of which supplies the place of a table-cloth. Especally, too, is the feat difficult of accomplishment, as etiquette denies to the left hand the privilege of assisting its neighbour. One can well imagine Mrs. Walker's abject despair when, on a certain occasion, the dish upon which fate ordained she should operate was a whole lamb! How could such a creature be carred with one hand and no knife? Her distress was evident, so with a one hand and no knife? Her distress was evident, so with a kindly feeling of sympathy two ladies of the harem put out each a hand, and taking hold of the legs of the offending (reature, they began "to pull baker, pull devil," till the baby sheep, unable to resist such "gentle" piers are, fell into the dish rent in piecer. The defeat was complete, and now Mrs. Walker could ply her fingers to her heart's content. What a strange thing is custom! Children are taught from their earliest infancy to pay respect to those around them; indeed, to such an extent is reverence for their elders carried that even in dress the tiny creatures "ape thie'r betters" by way of indicating that whatever adults do must be right. The sight of a harem of toddling babies one and all arrayed in garments befitting the serenity of advancing years all arrayed in garments befitting the serenity of advancing years is ludierous in the extreme; but laughable, indeed, must have been the scene when a tender child of but two summers, drank milk at its mother's breast, arrayed not in the traditional swad-elling clothes, but "buttoned up into the full uniform of a superior officer, with sword-bet, fez, and epaulettes! As a result of this per etual imitation of their seniors, the children grow up As a result of but, on the other land, they are affectionate, civil, and well-behaved—virtues which are not always displayed by the youth of the West; and the most that can be said against them is that amidst the chatter of the harem, and the babel of female tongues, they learn early in life—far too early, forsooth!—the habit of intrigue and alventure which is characteristic of Stamboul's existence.

A Times writer calls the East the "land of benevolence," and it is satisfactory to find that Mrs. Walker is able to confirm this view. "A devout and scrupulous Moslem," thus she writes, wicw. "A devout and scrupulous Moslem," thus she writes,
"hould perform some act of charity or benevolence on every day of his Efe. It is common here to see even the poorly clad and rarely paid soldier drop, as he passes, his mite into the bowl of she street beggar. There are no workhouses in Stamboul, none of the establishments for the relief of poverty so liberally provided and alas! so insufficient in our own country. But neither are they required in the same degree—not that the poverty is less in properties to the population, but the charity exercised in the simplest and most patriarchal form is unbounded." Never, parhaps, was the instinct of charity more touchingly, more nobly performed than at the time of the Russian invasion, when, inpoverished and ruined though the nation was by war, means were yet found to "shelter, feed, and clothe thousands of the sarving refugees." Turkey may be decaying, but she is not in a demandly hopeless, so long as the pen of truth can indite this was imposy to the tenderness of soul which such generous actions

Of course there is a chapter on Slavery, and equally, of course, the facts of the case as portrayed in these "sketches" are totally at variance with all the preconceived notions of the Exeter Hall school of enthusiasts, who love to depict the slave as a poor miserable wretch, ill-treated, uncared for—a mere human chatted in the slave and had seen in the high reason and had seen in the high reason and had seen in neglected in life, and cast out in the highways and hedges in death. "Halaiks are usually bought very young, at three or four years of age, and, as the Turks are proverbially tender-hearted towards children, these little ones are treated with great care and kindness. They are the pets of the household, and are not unfrequently adopted by the harem, in which case they are not unfrequently adopted by the harem, in which case they become free, sharing in all the advantages of the children of the family, and in due time are suitably married. A pretty intelligent slave-girl, or adopted daughter, is very often chosen, and carefully educated to become the wife of a son of the harem. Little slaves who continue to be Halaiks are brought up is servants." They are well fed, I dged, and clothed, and in rich barems are "surrounded with every comfort, and even luxury"; indeed, the humble "negress," whose fate compares unfavourably with the happier lot of her white-faced ri al, is for the most part treated with a certain amount of consideration; and it is not uncommon for the "woolly-haired" cook to be called up to the drawing-ro in to receive the encomiums of the numerous guests who have partaken a meal encomiums of the numerous guests who have partaken a meal prepared by the "lady from Africa."

It would be easy to extend these remarks to an unlimited extent, but enough has been said to indicate that Mrs Walker has much to tell the public; and as the public in turn have much to learn, it may be hoped both sides will be content with the appearance of these "Sketches" of Eastera life and slavery, which have but one fault, that the "Sketches" are conspicuous by their absenc. One illustration in each volume does duty for everything, a circumstance the more to be regretted, since Mrk. Walker is an artist well able to depict with the brush the scenes she has so well described with the pen.

TACTICAL STUDIES FROM THE FRANCO-GERMAN WAR OF 1870-71.*

For years past Germany has taken the lead in warfare even more than in diplomacy. The curse of the "pull devil, pull baker," system which we dignify with the name of party government is, that it is fatal to any continuously consistent policy or diplomacy, and that, if British influence in Europe should, under a statesman like Palmerston or Beaconsfiels, go up like a rocket, it is pretty sure to find, on the first change of Government, some down like the stick. Failing the nation which might well be the first, we must, for lessons in the arts alike of diplomacy and of war, full back on the second, and so Britain does not "win the field."

In matters military it is especially incumbent on our country to hold a proud pre-eminence. Every material of war, metal, coal, and, anove all, a supply of soldiers so good that French generals rejoice to think how little it has been utilised, t are ours. Yet the "dreamy" German has simply left in the lurch the "practical" Briton. Ever since, in 1866, it was found, that every bridge, broken down by the retreating Austrians and Saxons, was, and on the spot, replaced by the Prussians with beams, nafters and instead of the property and ready for use of the moments. and joists, duly numbered, and ready for use at a moment's notice, the military ascendency of Prussia was placed beyond question; nor was the Prussian success in 1870-71 a matter of surprise to any one who had a fairly competent chance of judging military matters in France and in Germany respectively.

None the less is the camp tign of 1870-71 replete with lessons for the student. Captain Stone has, with sound judgment in our opinion, confined himself to the earlier part of the campaign, from the battle of Woerth (Worth) to the surrender of Sedan; a period of less than a month. This early part of the invasion of France undoubtedly presents to the military student a field of investigation altogether unequalled; such battles as Wörth, Spicheren, Mars-la-Tour, Gravelotte, and (crown of all) Sedan (in none of which the combatants fell short of 100,000, and more than once exceeded double that number) being created into the than once exceeded double that number), being crowded into the brief space of twenty-six days. That Germany generally managed to have the gros bataillons, and that victory followed their banner, does not imply that the French did not show a desperate courag . Casar would hardly have written Galli impetum non sustinent had he witnessed their splendid stands, in the face of overwhelming numbers, at Mars-11-Tour (p. 69, &c.), at St. Privat (p. 122-4), at Bazan (p. 151, 164), and their magnificent conduct at Coulmiers.

Captain Stone, showing us the respective strength, organisation and positions, of the contending armies, prefaces his work with a Dary of the operations undertaken by each during the twenty-six days to the events of which the book is devoted. This will demand the careful attention of anyone who desires to derive any substantial advantage from studying the details of the various substantial advantage from studying the details of the various battles. These are most copiously illustrated, both by mapsof the adjacent country, and by exceedingly detailed sketches of the positions of the opposing forces at different periods of each battle. Nothing can be more instructive than these, neither pains no expense having been spared in producing them. The narrative is adequately full, without being in any way overlaid by detail; and is, as a rule, wonderfully clear.*

The summaries of the events of each conflict, and the comments, unfolding the errors committed on either side, are especially valuable, and (though Captain Stone has, wisely, relied, in cases of doubt, on German authority) on the whole impartial. Wherever anything likely to escape the reader's notice occurs, his attention is forthwith directed to it. Thus (p. 54) "The French position at Spicheren is unique... in the annals of war;" (half of it being on a wooded hill, half in the valley; with the natural result, that it was cut in half on the hill-side). Again, "It is (p. 80) a necessity of modern warfare for artillery to be able to act on occasion independently of escort. The German leaders seem to have thoroughly understood this principle, and almost seem to have thoroughly understood this principle, and almost every battle brings to light some instance of a brilliant success achieved on the part of the Germans, by boldly pushing their artillery to the front when occasion required."

It is scarcely too much to say that the campaign of 1870 was in its essence an artillery duel; strategy having, more particularly on the side of the invaders, been largely busied with the concentration of heavy fire. At Mirs-la-Tour, at Gravelotte, and, more especially, at Sedan, it was to the artillery that the result of the day was in great degree attributable.

This is but one of the lessons to be learnt in Captain Stone's pages; but it cannot fail to suggest to the reader the question (into which our author, properly enough, does not enter), What is the state of our own artillery? Could we stand a Mars-la-Tour or a Gravelotte?

or a Gravelotte !

We have said enough concerning Captain S:one's "Tactical Studies" to indicate that we consider them of the highest value. The work is, in fact, indispensable to anyone who seriously dewotes himself to the military profession. The author has visited the scene of each battle more than once. No one could desire a better cicerone; and the maps and plans are models of

LITERARY AND ARCHÆOLOGICAL RESEARCH IN NEPAL AND NORTHERN INDIA.†

Mr. Bendall appears to have undertaken his frip to Nepal and Northern India with the encouragement of the University of Cambridge, to whose Vice-Chancellor the record of its results is, appropriately, dedicated. The traveller, combined with the qualification (indispensable for the attainment of any appreciable result in the field of Indian archæology) of being an approved Oriental scholar, that of being no mean adept in the photographic art, presenting us with pictures from his own camera of scenes releated during his travels in Napal Rainutana and Central art, presenting us with pictures from his own camera of scenes selected during his travels in Nepal, Rajputana, and Central India. Photography has become an all but essential adjunct to travelling, and, if one's enemy were to write a book of travels, one could only wish that he might not be able to illustrate it by rays stolen from the sun-god. What might not have been the result, had such travellers as Herodotus and Marco Polo been the fells from the Orbo from the orbits of the first supering more than a counter able to filch from the Orbof Day something more than a counter-feit presentment of the scene; which they have so vividly and picturesquely described? If we do not altogether follow in the Tootsteps of our progenitors by worshipping the Sun—which the Persian Ambassador, Malcom Khan, is said to have averred that we should do, had we ever seen him—we utilise him in a way of which they rever dreamt, and which may fairly be regarded as an

Of Sun-worship, or, as our author calls it, "Sun-cult," there are many traces (pp. 4, 9, 32, &c.), and we gladly learn that there is every probability of a work on this abstruse subject being published by so high an authority as Dr. Bhagvanlal.

Mr. Bendall seems to have found Nepal the most fruitful, as

Mr. Bendall seems to have found Nepal the most fruitful, as it is assuredly the least explored, field for his perquisitions, MSS. of great rarity being obtainable. He had, to be sure, the all but unique advantage of the aid by word and deed of Mr. Brian Hodgson. "at once the greatest and least thanked of all our Indian Residenta," as the author justly styles him. What can successive Secretaries of State have been about, that Mr. Hodgson's invaluable services to Oriental literature have been simply ignored in the countless distributions of honours which have taken place since his retirement? Had he have a peting of same countly but since his retirement? Had he been a native of any country but

1: might be hypercritical to point out that the statement, at p. 99, indicating that the Germans, during the battle of Gravelotte, had occupied Roncourt before 2 P.M., scarcely tallies with those at p. 132. Lut the hour of this occupation can easily be assigned; and it is far from insignificant in its influence on the later operations of the our own, his breast would not have been broad enough to disply all the orders which would have been showered on him! In not very gratifying contrast to the enthusiastic research of Mr. Hodgson, Mr. Bendall prints (p. 17) the following slovenly docket of one of his successors :-

"List of Sanskrit works supposed by the Nepalese Pandits to be rare in the Nepalese Libraries at Khatmandoo.

"R. Lawrence, Resident, Nepal.

"Residency, the 2nd of August, 1868."

Mr. Bendall, wisely in our opinion, confines his narrative to the actual results, from an archeological point of view, of his travels, wholly omitting the usual "garnish of anecdote" with which modern stories of travel are too often somewhat overlaid. His spelling of Oriental names is of the strictest; but he is sufficiently modest to hope, in a doubtful way, that the native friends whose help he acknowledges, may be able to "recognise their ow mames," while he tells us that, as regards Benguli at least, all attempts to put the sounds "into 'popular' spelling appear often as ridiculous in the eyes of the Hindus as in our own."

We could not pretent to converte our readers the results of

We could not pretend to convey to our readers the results of Mr. Bendall's investigations without going into needless technicality. In our judgment he made the best use possible of the few months to which stress of work in England restricted his trip. The University of Cambridge did well to encourage the travels of a man who, in so short a space of time, has brought home many rare and important MSS., and not a little valuable information. The egotism occasionally visible in the narrative is a defect which wider experience of authorship will hardly fail is a defect which wider experience of authorship will hardly fail

The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine for August (W. H. The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine for August (W. H. Allen and C.) contains several valuable and interesting papers, amongst which may be singled out for special notice the exhaustive paper by the Editor on the "Ordnance Department and our Artillery Deficiencies." At present this subject is attracting great public attention, and the writer of the article, having exceptional means of information, throws the weight of his influence with those who are demanding a Royal Commission of Inquiry into the whole matter. Major Elliott's paper contains some very startling statements which can hardly fail to attract the notice of the authorities, who are really on their trial at the bar of public opinion. The illustrations in the magazine retain their usual now well known standard.

The Buchanan divorce case was lately resumed at Lahore before Mr. Justice Plowden. Some other Native witnesses were examined, and the case was then adjourned till the 16th December, an application having been filed for the examination of further witnesses, by commission, in England.

LADY DUFFERIN'S SCHEME. - The Indian Mirror writes :concluding a paragraph on Lady Dufferin's scheme, the Pioneer announces that more money is wanted for the purpose, and observes that subscriptions must be multiplied. The Government officials in almost all parts of the country have already collected subscriptions for the purpose by the exercise of their all-powerful pressure. But when the fiat has gone forth that more money is wanted, we think the official pressure will be soon commenced to wanted, we think the official pressure with the solid continenced to be exercised for the second time. We see Lady Dufferin's Fund is generally becoming almost a plea for an unauthorized but none the less oppressive tax." The Indian Spectator says:—"English friends are beginning to complain, and we think justly, that Lady Reay's appeal on behalf of her suffering sisters has had but poor response. If it rested with the women of Bombay, the matter Reay's appeal on behalf of her suffering sisters has had but poor response. If it rested with the women of Bombay, the matter would have been otherwise. For, besides their finer instincts, women alone feel the need of organised medical relief of which they could avail themselves to the full. But in India the gentle sex are seldom allowed the privilege of dispensing public charity, even though the means may be within their reach. Everything is managed for them by their male relatives, who are nothing if not discreet. They won't do a thing in time, and won't allow anybody else to do it for them. The consciousness of their own inability makes them resent the more an attempt made by others inability makes them resent the more an attempt made by others. Now, in this case, the explanation is that the promoters of the movement do not belong to the people! The fact of the latter being Englishwomen, the mere accident of their being connected with men in authority is urged as a sufficient plea for inaction. What an excuss! May we ask why it was that the Queen spoke to the Countess of Dufferin on this subject, and why it is that the latter, Countess of Dufferin on this subject, and why it is that the latter, with her friends, has been striving so earnestly since her arrival to carry out Her Majesty's behest? It seems to us that the action taken by the despised foreigners is entirely due to our own inaction. If we are so squeamish about co-operation from outside, how is it none of us ever proposed a scheme of our own untainted with foreign co-operation? But now that the scheme has been launched, let us beg of our Native friends to carry it through. The cost of a few caste dinners, or the value of a few presents by widows to their guardian priests, would meet the requirements of a fund on which so largely depends the health of the nation. Even official initiative is not to be spurned at a time when we have hardly an idea of what organised national charity means."

UPPER BURMA.

ACCORDING to a telegram from Calcutta which the Times publishes this morning the Government of India has now determined to adopt very comprehensive measures for the settlement of the difficulties in Upper Burma. A concerted and extensive plan for the thorough pacification of that country will be undertaken in the coming cold season. Large reinforcements, including two or three regiments of Native Cavalry and additional police, will be sent from India so as to bring the garrison of the united provinces to more than 25,000 mer, and to enable the troops to traverse the country from end to end. Sir Herbert Macpherson will assume the supreme command, arriving for that purpose at Rangoon early in October next. He will report direct to the Commander-in-Chief on all matters connected with the operations, and to the Madras Government on routine matters concerning the Madras troops.. Better late than never! But had such an extensive plan been adopted in the first instance many valuable lives might have been saved, and the work of pacification have possibly been less tiresome and troublesome. The easy way in which Mandalay was reached and taken, no doubt misled the British authorities, Civil and Military, to think that "all was over save the shouting," and that the inhabitants would soon settle down to ways of peace and pleasantness under civilised rule. The explanation of the easy work. which the Military had to do at first is now said to have been owing to the Burmese having been thrown into a state of stupefaction by the rapidity of the march upon Theebaw's capital. "Feeble as Theebaw was," says the Rangoon Gazette, " he seemed an invincible monarch to the boldest dacoits, and in the first surprise at his easy overthrow these gentry hesitated to attack the men who could so rapidly and surely dethrone such a mighty potentate. Now, the first surprise on this point has worn away, and the leniency of our methods has probably inspired some contempt in the minds of men who cannot disassociate the idea of strength from a certain amount of brutality in dealing with opponents." This is likely enough, for it is in thorough accordance with Oriental feeling, but our contemporary is right in doubting whether public opinion in England would have approved of the method which commends itself evidently to English opinion at Rangoon as to the way in which the act of annexation should have been followed up. "By some striking severities, such as shooting down everyone found in armed opposition to British troops, cutting off their heads and putting them on poles in the villages, we should probably have inspired the rebels with a wholesome awe." Probably; but it is well that this method was not followed, and it may even be accounted no shame to English sensibility that "instead of doing this we nearly went into hysterics about the brutality of photographing the death struggles of a few miscreants condemned to death." Allowance, however, must be made for editorials and letters written almost within sight of savage lawlessness and under the smarting experiences of commercial losses and stoppage of trade. Notwithstanding his desire to have their heads on poles, the Rangoon editor is inclined to give even the dacoit devil something of his due. He owns that although he is a desperado yet he has in him "an cdd mixture of dacoit and patriot," the former of course "enormously preponderating." There is always a difficulty in knowing how best to deal with this complex character; but if it be true, as we read also in the article we have quoted from, that "trade seems to be reviving, the river towns are improving in appearance and comfort, and the great majority of the people seem to be settling down peaceably and contentedly under British rule," Sir Herbert Macpherson's task next winter ought not to be one requiring the expenditure of much gunpowder. A correspondent who had recently returned from Mandalay to Rangoou writes to a local paper that the difference along the river since the British occupation is won-

Barracks are springing up everywhere, roads and landing-places are kept in some sort of order, and all along the Irrawaddy trade is brisk, and the people appear cheerful and contented. A few months of order and work will give them more money than they ever possessed in Theelaw's time, and make them appreciate, in a still greater degree than they do even now, the solid advantages of British rule.

This ought to be satisfactory to all but those pessimists who will for ever continue to ask, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" but who will not accept the invitation by which that query was answered. It is safe and easy from the neighbourhood of Exeter Hall to declaim against British rule everywhere abroad, but, so far as Upper Burma is concerned, there seems to be every reason to believe that its good influence is being recognised there. Even our "decapitating " Rangoon contemporary declares that "it would be absurd to expect pacification to be really completed in the few months which have elapsed since annexation."

INDIAN FORESTS.

INDIAN FORESTS.

On 16th July an interesting meeting took place in the Conference Hall of the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, when Dr. Brandis, C.I.E., F.R.S., late Inspector-General of Forests, gave a graphic description of the Forests of India, and a review of the system which has been adopted during the past forty-five years to prevent the destruction of the timber, and resources of the native woods. R. B. Clapman, Esq., C.S.I., occupied the chair, and amongst the audience we observed Baden Powell, Esq., Dr. Cleghorn, Colonel Beddome, Mr. Drysdale, of the Indian Forest Service; also Sir George Birdwood, General Frederick Cotton, General R. Maclagan, General Macled Innes, General Crotton, R.E., Dr. Thornton, Mr. Farmer, late of New Zealand; Mr. Wardle, Mr. Simmonds, Dr. William Markly, of Oxford, and many Wardle, Mr. Simmonds, Dr. William Markly, of Oxford, and many others.

Dr. Brandis then read the following paper:—

"India of the present day is entirely different from what it was forty-five years ago. Some of the most important Provinces have since that time become incorporated with the British Empire. Not including the recent acquisition of Upper Burma, an aggre ate area of 270,000 square miles, now inhabited by forty-one millions of people, has, since 1840, been added to the British Indian Empire. A network of telegraphs, roads, and railways has brought about a revolution in the trade and in the whole manner of transac ing business; and their rapid means of locomotion are working quickly a complete change in the habits of this populous, but formerly flow, country. Canals and other irrigation works have brought under cultivation several millions of acres. At the same time internal customs-lines, and other obstacles to the free interchange of products between different Provinces have disappeared; the duties on both import and export trade have been removed, and the value of the external trade has during this period increased more than sevenfold.

To the observant traveller, whose experience of India has not been limited to a cold-weather tour by steamer and railway, or to a few weeks' shooting in a comfortable and well-appointed camp, one of the most remarkable of the many changes which India has undergone during this period has been the rapid extension of cultivation within British territory. Over entire districts the forest has been cleared, and vast areas of (formerly) dreary waste have been converted into smiling fields and productive gardens. At the same time the demands of wood and timber for the construction of railways and other public works have caused a des ruction of the forests during this period which has been most remarkable.

India was probably not originally, like Northern Europe, a forest country; the drier provinces of North-Western India were probably always bare and without fruit; and in the extensive and densely-peo; led plains of Northern India the forest had pro-batly been cleared several thousand years ago. But a large portion of the country has a moist climate, and is hilly, and in the moister districts, on the hills, and in some places in the plains there were, forty-five years ago, and there still are large areas of forest; but since then the forest has everywhere been broken into by the extension of cultivation and by the rapidly-increasing demands of railways and other public works.

In the British Isles the number of species of indigenous trees is about thirty; in India there are considerably over 1,500. among this large variety there are only about a hundred that are in general use. In a warm climate like that of India timber decays rapidly or is attacked by insects, and only those few kinds are in general use which are durable and otherwise suitable to be worked, not too hard or not too heavy. Naturally the demand has always been greatest for the most valuable kinds. The foremost of these is teak, the king of the Indian timber, and thus it came to puss that as long ago as the commencement of this century measures were taken in order to preserve the raural resources of this valuable timber. Effective measures on a resources of this valuable timber. Effective measures on a sufficient scale, however, were not taken until the rapidly-progressing destruction of forests and timber in more modern times showed the necessity of such action.

The system which has now been adopted in this matter, is to select suitable areas of forest lands which are at the disposal off the State; to constitute them State forests under the forest law; to buy off, or to commute by the grant of land, any rights which the population in the vicinity may have in these lands; to mark off on the ground the boundaries in an unmistakable manner; to place these areas under effective protection; to improve them by sowing and planting wherever necessary; to open them out by roads or by the improvement of water communication; and to arrange cutting; and the work generally, by a systematic plan of operations. These State forests now aggregate thirty millions of acres, which is about 5½ per cent. of the total area of British territory in India.

The primary object of these measures is to maintain a permament supply of timber and charcoal and other forest produce and the sale of this produce yields at present an annual revenue to the State of over ten millions of rupees, of which revenue to the State of over ten millions of rupees, of which revenue however, two-thirds are expended upon establishments, upon planting, upon roads, and upon other works of improvement, so that the net income from these estates amounts to only about 31 millions of supees. These State forests, however, are expected to do a great deal more for the people of the country than to provide a permanent supply of wood and timber. During seasons of drought and famine, which unfortunately, owing to the peculiar climate of India, occur from time to time, and to which the country will probably always be liable, the chief difficulty genccountry will probably always be hable, the chief dimentity generally has been the mortality among cattle. Grain can be carried long distances to feed the people, but the carriage of cattle fodder in sufficient quantities is difficult. The cattle, therefore, either die, or must be driven away to distant districts. In the dier parts of India grass grows more pleutifully, even in exceptionally dry seasons, under the partial shelter of trees and bushes. In some of the Rajoutana States the forest reserves, which the Native chiefs had ages ago established, chiefly for shooting, are in times of drought opened to the cattle of the surrounding country; they feed upon the grass, and, to some extent, also upon the branches of the trees and bushes, and much mischief

Acting upon this experience, State forests, to the aggregate extent of 89,000 acres, have been established in the adjoining British district of Ajmere, and the grass, which grows up shundantly under protection on these areas, has already on several occasions furnished a most welcome supply of cattle fidder to the villages in the vicinity of these forests. For similar purposes have State forests been formed in some of the drier districts of the Dekkin and of North-Western India, and this isthe commencement—very small as yet—of a measure, the future importance of which it is difficult to estimate.

II w far the protection and improvement of these large forest areas may have a favourable effect upon the climate of the drier regions of India, of those which are most exposed to drought and famine, we are not yet able to say, but it is certain that the improvement of the forests has, in many instances, done good already in affording shelter against hot, scorching winds, and that the dew has increased in their vicinity. Nor are indications wanting that in a hot cl mate like that of India the forests will eventually have the effect of lowering the temperature in the hot seasor, of increasing the atmospheric moisture in their vicinity, and possibly of augmenting the rainfall. These, however, are as yet uncertain and problematic results, and in framing the measures of forest policy they ought not yet to be taken into

Certain, however, it is that in hilly countries, and especially in countries where, as in India, the rain falls at certain scasons only and then falls in excessively heavy showers, a covering of fore-ts protects the soil from being washed away, and prevents streams from silting up, and fertile valleys from being covered with sand. In this respect denudation has already done much mischief in India, and such mischief can only be prevented by the protection and establishment of forests.

There is no doubt, moreover, that the surface drainage and the water supply of rivers in hilly countries is best regulated by forest growth, and that irregular floods in rivers are to some extent diminished thereby.

The management of thirty millions of acres of State forests demands a large staff of officers. The majority of these officers are natives of India; Europeans are employed in a comparatively small number only of the superior appointments. The buckbone, so to say, of the Indian Forest Staff will, when the organization is completed exercisely be the Forest Staff will, when the organization is completed, eventually be the Forest Rangers, the officers with whom rests the executive management of the forest estates, and who have the control of the forest guards, and the other protective officers. In order to give to these forest rangers, who are all natives of the Province where their forests are situated, the needful and scientific and practical training, a central forest school has been established at Dehra Dan, at the foot of the Himalaya; and a large extent of forest, situated both in the hills and in the and a large extent of forest, situated both in the hills and in the plains, has been attached to it, to serve for the practical part of their instruction. Had the organisation of the forest business in India been completely carried out there would at this time be upwards of 1,500 forest rangers in all the provinces.

In this manner, and mainly through the teaching at the Dehra Dun Forest School, it is hoped that forestry, which originally was the strictly desired to the content of the server of the se an exotic introduction, will eventually become the property of the people of India, and will be developed by them for the benefit of their country.

The directing and controlling staff consists at present of about 170 officers, and is not likely to be much increased. The intention was when the organisation was framed, that really first rate Native Forest Rangers might earn their promotion to the directing and controlling staff by distinguished service as Rangers, and this plan will doubtless be carried out. At present the superior staff is recruited chiefly by young Englishmen, selected on the ground of an examination in mathematics, English, and the clements of the natural sciences, who receive a special training in forestry before they are sent out to India.

The manifold objects aimed at by forest conservancy in India cannot be accomplished by the establishment and good management of State forests only. As forestry becomes, so to say, naturalised in India, it may be confidently expected that the forests in feudatory States and those of private proprietors will be managed on a plan similar to that adopted by the State in a portion of the forest land under its control. And it may also be hoped that communal forests, the property of villages and municipalities of towns, may hereafter be established on the model of the communal forests in France, Germany, and other countries of Europe. No institution will better receive a healthy development of self-government of local bodies than the formation of such communal forests.

In this respect the Forest School at Dehra Dun will be invaluable. A commencement in this direction has already been made, for the chiefs of several Native feudatory States—Patiala, Jeypore, Baroda, and Mysore—have already sent young men to Debra Dùn to be educated for the forest service in their States."

A collection of water-colour sketches, illustrating Indian forest scenery, were exhibited and explained by B. H. Baden-Powell, B.C.S., C.I.E.

THE RUBY MINES .- The Rangoon Gazette with ridiculous pers stence continues asserting that a French corporation is really behind Captain Aubrey Patton, the representative of Mr. Streeter, who has obtained the concession for working the ruby mines of Upper Burma. Who is Captain Patton, says our contemporary, and who is Mr. Streeter, and what is his comme cial position? With a great deal more excuse Mr. Streeter and Captain Patton might ask, "What is the Rangeon Gazette?" As for the facts we can only repeat that Mr. Streeter, the greatest living expert perhaps in precious store, and Mr. Baird, a gentleman whose name is above all suspicion in the commercial world, are the only persons interested in in the commercial world, are the only persons interested in the concession. If the Rangoon Gazette or its readers like to fancy that there is a French syndicate behind them, there is nothing to prevent their doing so; but it may be added one of the terms of the arrangement was that no foreign element should he admitted on the penalty of the concession becoming void. However, the Gazette's appeals to the Government to save Burma However, the Gazette's appeals to the Government to save Burma from French intrigues by granting the privilege of mining to a local firm who "know all about it have thrown a new light on the matter." These statements seem to have been wired home from Rangoon to the Times, and they drew forth a prompt contradiction from the India Office. This contradiction appeared in the Times of June 9th, and was as follows:—"We are informed that the statement of the Rangoon Gazette, telegraphed yesterday to us by our Rangoon correspondent, is intecurate. A French Syndicate, acting in conjunction with an Anglo-Indian houe, made strenums efforts to obtain the concession to work the ruby mines of Upper Burma, but has been outbidden by a group of well-known London but has been outbidden by a group of well-known London merchants, to whom the concession has been promised by the Government of India." So it would appear that the local firm and not Captain Patton's Syndicate were in league with the Freuch. The Rangoon Gazette should look to this.—Pioneer.

"VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

There are in England large clusses willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinious of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing monthly (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Pablic Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Foice of In lia thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally decile and consorvative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical to desense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fectow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 27th July; from Allahabad to the 25th July; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 24th July.

THE Viceroy at the end of the Simla season will probably visit Peshawur and other places on the North-West Frontier, as well as Bombay, Hyderabad and Madras.

SIR GRANT DUFF will probably visit the Viceroy at Simla before resigning office in November.

GENERAL CHESNEY has taken his seat in the Viceregal Council.

THE Viceroy will shortly address a memorandum to the Provincial Governments regarding technical education, pointing out where the present system fails, suggesting remedies, advising the adoption of a more practical system, and inviting opinions from Provincial Governments on the whole subject.

THE question of a Council for the North-West Provinces is new being worked out at Simla on the lines laid down in the despatch received some little time ago from the Secretary of State. No great difficulty is likely to be experienced in framing the Bill.

THE Finance Committee have submitted to Government their scheme for the new provincial contracts. The committee are sanguine that their plan, which is on an entirely new basis, will place the relations of the imperial and local Governments on a thoroughly satisfactory footing; and that it will prevent much of the friction which has marred the working of the contracts that are now expiring.

THE breaks on the North-Western Railway have been repaired, and the ordinary service of trains has been resumed.

Some private capitalists are in negotiation with Government for the construction of a railway between Hurdwar and Rajpuri.

THE Bolan Railway has now advanced within nine miles of Quetta, and the laying of rails is proceeding satisfactorily. The line will probably be completed to Bostan by the end of August.

On the Hurnai route rails have been laid to three miles west of Hurnai itself. The general health of the large number of coolies employed is very satisfactory.

It is proposed to erect cotton presses at Khamgaum, in the Berars, on a large scale, by a joint stock company under an influential board.

FOURTEEN new companies were registered in Calcutta during March, the united capital amounting to Rs.

The Secretary of State has given his sanction to the continuance of the compassionate allowances to junior civilians in the North-West Provinces for a further period of two years. These allowances will run accordingly to the 30th of April, 1888, in the case of officers who are already in receipt of them. No fresh admissions are to be permitted.

Information has been received that the Secretary of State has sanctioned in part the reorganisation scheme for the Telegraph Department. The extent of the Secretary of State's concessions at present are unknown.

THE operations against the bands of dacoits who infested the southern parts of the Gwalior State are drawing to a successful close. The State troops of Scindia and Datia, supported by detachments of the Central India. Horse and the Bhopal Battalion, have been operating in that tract of Gwalior territory which borders on the British districts of Jhansi and Lalitpur on the east, and the Datia State on the north.

Mr. J. D. LA TOUCHE, at present Settlement Officer in Gorakhpur, has accepted a Commissionership in Burma.

Our communications with the troops operating from Manipur against the Burmans about Tammu have been very fitful hitherto; but a daily postal service has now been established between Cachar and Manipur. A line of military telegraph from Lakhipur on our border to Manipur and even further east will follow in the cold weather.

COLONEL BAKER, of the Hampshire Regiment, carried a stockaded position at Kyahbing in the Shan Hills, on the 18th, with a loss of two Natives killed, one Hampshire sergeant severely wounded, and nine men wounded. The Hampshire men were so exhausted by hard marching that out of fifty only thirteen marched back into camp at Mandalay.

A FORCE under Lieutenant King has had a successful encounter with a force of stockaded dacoits at Yuatha, a village twenty-four miles from Shwebo. Lieutenant Delamain showed conspicuous gallantry on the occasion. The dacoits lost thirty-seven killed and 118 prisoners. On our side two Bombay sepoys were slightly wounded.

THERE is much sickness in Mandalay; 250 British and 450 Native troops are in the hospital.

Some idea of the state and health of the troops in Bhamo may be gathered from the fact that of 224 men in the Hazara Mountain Battery, 111, according to the latest information, were in hospital.

Cabul was illuminated on July 10th in honour of the marriage of the Amir's eldest son. The Amir has founded a dispensary in Cabul, and placed it in charge of a Native doctor from Sialkot.

Owing to the intense heat in the Khyber Pass sixty-one out of a party of ninety-one pilgrims have been stricken down, and eleven have died.

THE respective claims of Sir Lepel Griffin and Mr. J. B. Lyall to the Lieutenant-Governorship of the Punjab are being discussed with great interest in that province.

THE Japanese officers who had been sent by their Government to study the Indian military system have arrived in Bombay.

Mr. T. FUTATAZGI, a representative of the Japanese Government, has recently been studying the cultivation and the manufacture of tea in Ceylon. He contemplates visiting India and other tea-producing countries with the object of gaining additional experience.

THE Colombo papers announce the death of the Rev. William Oakley, the oldest missionary in Ceylon. He had for fifty years laboured in that island on behalf of the Church Missionary Society.

THE succession to the Missionary Bishopric of Eastern Equatorial Africa, vacant since the murder of Dr. Hannington, has been offered to the Rev. H. Parker, C.M.S., of the Mangalpur Mission, near Mandla, in the Central Provinces.

With regard to the Afghan Boundary Commission, Colonel Sir West Ridgeway was at Kham-i-Ab on the 5th inst. The position seems to be that the Joint Boundary Commission has settled the frontier so far as is possible, but the Russians hold out for a boundary on the Oxus to Ziarat Khwaja Salar, which, of course, is not conceded. This point must be settled by negotiations between London and St. Petersburg; and it is thought that the sooner the Home Government gives orders for the return of Sir West Ridgeway's party to India the better.

Notes of the Week.

THE acceptance of the Governorship of Madras by the Right Hon. Robert Bourke, after having refused that of Bombay, has occasioned some surprise, but that his appointment will be received in India with approval is certain. Besides his own qualifications for the post, which are many, he goes to India with the recommendation—no small one in that land where individual names have such a power—as the brother of the Lord Mayo whose memory is still held dear by all classes there.

MAJOR STEWART MACKENZIE, of the 9th Lancers, goes to Madras as Military Secretary.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT will resume his Indian command next month, and will be accompanied by the Duchess. Their Royal Highnesses will proceed to Marseilles, arriving there on the 8th September, and will embark in the Surprise, the service yacht of the Duke of Edinburgh, in which they will be conveyed to Malta, completing the journey to Bombay in a Peninsular and Oriental steamer.

Messes. Hamilton and Co.'s auction of the loot taken during the recent Burmese Expedition is said to have realised about a lac of rupees. The bidding for the various articles is reported to have been very lively, but the amount obtained seems to be a small one if the story be true that King Theebaw's baths and tubs, &c., were all of solid gold. The question, however, in which the English and Native soldiery which took part in the Expedition will be interested is, "to whom does the proceeds of this loot belong?" The captors thinks it ought to be considered as prize money.

The Government thinks differently, and seems to be unwilling to allow the troops much pecuniary benefit from their exertions to secure a bloodless victory. The refusal to allow certain columns to share in the gratuity given to the captors of Mandalay, although the strategic movements of these columns helped to that end, is sure to create fresh discontent—a foolish thing to be allowed to spring from a penny-wise economy.

A GENERAL Order has been issued to the Army in India, announcing that the Viceroy is satisfied that the charges brought against Colonel Hooper, late Provost-Marshal at Mandalay, of photographing condemned criminals at the moment of execution, and of causing a prisoner to confess under threat of death, have been established. The order adds that Colonel Hooper's conduct reflects discredit upon the British Army, and that the Viceroy would have been justified in recommending his dismissal from the Service, but having regard to his past career thinks that a public reprimand will be sufficient.

Some of our home contemporaries are not content with this announcement, and think that a severer punishment should have been awarded. But to a soldier whose good name has hitherto been untarnished, could worse be said than that his conduct reflected discredit upon the profession to which he belongs? And now when it is known that the condemned officer has had to leave India broken down in health, mentally and bodily, the tongue of further consure might be silent.

A MILITARY contemporary states that living at home is found to be so expensive by the junior officers of the Army that service in India is now eagerly sought for. The requisitions from cadets from the Royal Military College to be nominated to regiments in India are far in excess of the vacancies open. If this be so, the question not unnaturally suggests itself, "What has become of the extraordinary economy which it was declared would certainly follow in all regimental expenditure when purchase was abolished? Are the present subalterns poorer, or are the mess expenses heavier?"

The same contemporary adds, "But if there is a glut of combatant officers anxious for service in India there is likely to be a scarcity of applicants for the Indian Medical Department. At one time the Indian Medical Service was looked upon as a prize offering much golden fruit from the pagoda tree; but one by one the fat appointments have been taken away, and a service which was considered only second to that of the Covenanted Civilians, is falling into disfavour. Even in the benighted Presidency of Madras there were two heads of the department, viz., a physician-general and a surgeon-general, each on Rs. 2,500 a month, and under them a number of deputy inspector-generals on Rs. 1,800, besides a sanitary commissioner, and principals of colleges and general hospitals on equally pleasant pay and still more pleasant allowances."

This may be so, but all is not lost yet even in Madras, for, according to the Madras Mail, "it is no unusual occurrence for a good medical man to make Rs. 2,000 a month besides his pay." He can sometimes make double this in Bengal or Bombay, but even Rs. 2,000 a month "extra" can hardly be called "genteel poverty." But we should be glad to hear what the officers who are not so fortunate say themselves upon the present prospects of the Indian Medical Service.

THE Times correspondent, telegraphing from Calcutta yesterday, gives his opinion that the employment of a large force of cavalry is "the most satisfactory feature of the plan" drawn out for the pacification of Burma in October next. Lieutenant-General Gloag, whose experience of Burma is wide, will hardly endorse that view. In a letter addressed to the Broad Arrow last Saturday he advocates, instead of horses such as the Indian Cavalry will be mounted upon, the employment of Shan, Thibò, and Pegu ponies, who "can carry eleven stone over a three-foot turf wall and a ditch five foot wide combined, and who are very hardy, and require no shoes." There would be no fear of the paralytic disease Kumri attacking these animals as it is reported to have done the cavalry horses.

A CORRESPONDENT with the Boundary Commission, writing from Camp Karkin on the 30th ultimo, says:—"So long as the two camps were close together we saw a good deal of the Russians, and Colonel Kuhlberg and some of his officers were either dining with us or some of us with them almost every evening. When the camps separated, however, we were not able to see so much of each other. The Russian party, too, is gradually decreasing in numbers. Capt. Gideonoff, the Assistant Commissioner, has started for Bokhara and Samarcand, and several of the topographers have been set to work to survey the country down the left bank from here to Chaharjui. What the Ameer of Bokhara thinks of this long stay of the Russian Commission in his dominions I do not know; but he has deputed some high official to attend upon them, who doubtless keeps him well informed of what is going on. Who the official may be I do not know, as, of course, we have seen nothing of him; but I heard that Colonel Kuhlberg had paid him a formal visit and held a parade of the escort in his honour, so I presume he is a man of rank."

The Chief Commissioner of Assam has published the following notification on the death and services of the late Major T. J.

The Chief Commissioner of Assam has published the following notification on the death and services of the late Major T. J. Willans, R.E.:—The Chief Commissioner announces with deep regret the death of Major T. J. Willans, R.E., at Shillong, on the 4th inst., and, in doing so, desires to publicly record his recognition of the services which this officer has rendered to the Province of Assam. Major Willans came to the Province in January, 1875, and since that year, besides officiating on three occasions as Superintending Engineer and Secretary to the Chief Commissioner in the Public Works Department, has held continuously the important and responsible post of Executive Engineer of the Shillong Division. From the 1st January, 1885, he was appointed Superintendent of Work, Southern Circle. Major Willans's work during those years was not confined to the division or circle placed immediately under his charge. He planned and constructed most of the important engineering projects which have been undertaken in the Province since its separation from Bengal, the most important and difficult of these being the Cherra Punji and Companyganj Mountain Railway now approaching completion. It is with these works in addition to the many designed and completed by him within his own special division, that Major Willans's name will hereafter be chiefly associated. Untiring energy and activity, keen interest in his work and in his profession, readiness of resource, persoverance, and a happy cheerfulness amid difficulties and disappointments, were among the qualities which, apart from his professional acquirements, contributed mainly to Major Willans's success as an engineer, and gained for him the confidence of every Chief Commissioner under whom he served.

(BY TELEGRAPH.) (Times Correspondents.) INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUGUST 15.

Yesterday the Government notified its intention of raising a loan of 120 lakhs of rupees on the following conditions. The loan will form part of the Four per Cent. Loan of 1842-43. Tenders will be received by the Comptroller-General till the 10th of September. Persons tendering if not resident in India, must name a resident agent, and all tenders must be accompanied by name a resident agent, and all tenders must be accompanied by the receipt of a Presidency bank or public treasury for a deposit of not less than one-hundredth, or if the tender be for less than five lakhs, then of not less than one-fiftieth of the amount tendered. The rates must be specified in Indian currency, and not contain fractions of an anna. Allotment certificates will be issued to each successful tender, and the whole amount of each allotment must be paid in three instalments—namely, 35 per cent. on the 24th of September, a similar amount on the 1st of November, and the balance on the 29th of November. On payment of the full amount Government promissory notes will be issued bearing interest at 4 per cent. payable on the 1st of Februsry and the 1st of August.

The change of Ministry has revived the hope that the new Secretary of State will sanction the immediate construction of the Bengal-of State will sanction the immediate construction of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway, which will not only give a more direct route between Bombay and Calcutta, but also open a large and fertile grain-producing country, which is now practically closed to commerce. For years past the mercantile community, especially that of Calcutta, has been pressing this matter upon the Government, but has hitherto been baffled by the unwillingness of the India Office to move. The scheme is that a public company should take over the existing narrow gauge Nagpore-Chatisgah State line, convert it to broad gauge, and continue it to join the East Indian Railway at Sitarampore. It is understood that the Indian Government is not only favourable to the proposed line, but also considers it one of the most pressing of the various projects of railway construction now under consideration. It may therefore be hoped that Sir R. Cross will give the subject his early attention. early attention.

The new frontier railways are progressing steadily. The Scinde-Tishin line is finished to a point beyond Sharingh. The Scinde-Sagar line is being laid at the rate of a mile daily. One hundred and fifty miles are now completed, and the rails have reached a point nearly opposite Dera Ismail Khan. It is expected that the whole frontier system will be finished by April.

Some damage from floods is reported from various parts of the country. Telegrams from Cachar state that there has been incessant rain for ten days and that the flood is as high as that of cessant rain for ten days, and that the flood is as high as that of May, 1883. From Sylhet reports come that the rising of the rivers has stopped traffic, and has caused much suffering among the villagers, of whom many are houseless and short of food. Floods have also occurred in Tirhoot, and, according to the latest reports, the swollen rivers threaten to cause much injury to the indigo crops, and have already made it certain that the outturn will fall short of expectation. Anxiety is still felt regarding the condition of the embankment at Derhampore, the breaching of which last year caused extensive inundations in the Nuddya and Moorshedabad districts. The embankment is said to have already shown signs of leaking, but it is being carefully watched, and a large force of coolies is employed in strengthening the weak portions. The last news is that the river has fallen slightly.

It is stated that the Viceroy will visit Gwalior in November, and that the Council of Regency will mark the occasion by abolishing the transit duties the following the collicitions of warmless.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUGUST 11.

On the 9th there was a sharp engagement with 250 insurgents, strongly stockaded at Lazay, near Sagain. Our force consisted of eighteen of the Hampshire Regiment and fifty of the 5th Bombay, under Colonel Poole. Two of the Hampshire Regiment and nine Sepoys were wounded. Ten of the enemy were killed. Singoo, on the west bank, was threatened by 400 Shans and dacoits.

Reinforcements have been sent to Singoo. There is much sickness among the troops in the Bhamo, Yemethen, Katha, and Napeh districts. The post at Napeh has been abandoned owing to the garrison being disabled by sickness. Of thirty-two artillerymen at Napeh, only two were able to march when the garrisou was withdrawn.

As Major Auchinleck, with a detachment of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, was returning on the 5th inst from Lepantoza, he was attacked by a party of Bosweh's men who were lying in ambush in a thick jungle near Thabyabin. The British troops drove out the rebels, but were unable to come up with them. On the British side there were three men wounded.

CALCUTTA, AUGUST 15.

The following corps are placed under orders for Burma, to arrive there by October 20:—No. 1 Mounted Battery, Eastern Division; No. 9 Mounted Battery, Northern Division; 2nd Battalion Queen's 1st Rifle Brigade; 2nd Munster Fusiliers; 7th Bengal Cavalry; 1st Madras Lancers; 1st Bombay Lancers; 3rd Cavalry, Hydeabad Contingent; 1st and 5th Bengal Infantry; 1st Beloochis; one Madras Infantry Regiment, and 3rd Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent. The whole force in Burma, which will then number over 30,000, will be under the immediate command of Sir Herbert Macpherson. Several new brigades will be formed. of Sir Herbert Macpherson. Several new brigades will be formed, one of which will be commanded by Colonel Lockhart, lately in charge of the Ghilgit Mission. TRIAL BY ASSESSORS.

(FRAGMENT OF AN UNPUBLISHED DRAMA.)

The Court shall require each of the assessors to state his opinion orally, and shall record such opinion. The judge shall not be bound to conform to the opinions of the assessors. -Code of Criminal Procedure.

While avoiding prolixity a Sessions Judge should be careful to be intelligible and precise in recording the opinions of assessors. -High Court Circular.

THE JUDGE.

Sir Assessor Ganga Singh Yawning, dozing, fidgetting, With a bored and weary air, Sir Assessor Makhan Ram, Writhing with uneasy ham On an unaccustomed chair, The end of these proceedings slow
Is near, as you'll rejoice to know,
And, all else done, 'tis now your place
To state your views upon the case; They matter not one litte d-Ganga Singh and Makhan Ram, But, seeing that the law expects
This effort from your intellects,
Speak your sentiments, have your fling,
Makhan Ram and Ganga Singh. The charge is murder, rank, blood-red; Five Chamars on oath have said That Puran Thakur, the accused, Because Dalip Chamar refused To work when ordered, on the head Smote him thrice and felled him dead. This tragedy took place, they swore, At dawn of day in Toodulpore.

The while they told the tale of blood You, Makhan Ram, in absent mood Were scratching with a fatuous grin The ancient boilmarks on your shin.

Next came the case for the defence; Thakurs ten gave evidence That on the morn this blood was shed, Poerun at the break of day, Miles from Toodulpore away, Miles beyond the Jamna far, Was buying at the Sonk Bazaar A milk-white cow with one red car.

While thus the Thakurs ten deposed, You, Ganga Singh, serenely dozed, Till starting up with smothered score, You nearly tumbled on the floor.

The testimony pro and con Exercise your minds upon, And to this question answer say, Is Poorun guilty? Yea or nay? Shall he be absolved or swing? Makhan Ram and Ganga Singh!

Assessor Makhan Ram. What can this humble slave reply Except jo kuch huzur ka rai?

ASSESSOR GANGA SINGE. And what decide this bondsman poor But only just jo rai huzur?

THE JUDGE.

Very much surprised I am, Ganga Singh and Makhan Ram, This is a most shocking thing, Makhan Ram and Ganga Singh.
What will the Sudder Adalat say If you skirk your duties in this way, Turning your function high to sham, Ganga S ngh and Makhan Ram? Make another effort, pray, And haste, for time is on the wing, And when the court adjourns to-day It has a tennis match to play, Makhan Ram and Ganga Singh,

(The Assessors consult together.)

BOTH ASSESSORS. These suppliants now would crave to tell Their verdict to The Presence.

The Judge.

Well?

ASSESSOR MAKHAN RAM The milk-white cow if Poorun bought, 'Twas some one else the murder wrought.

Assessor Ganga Singh. But if 'twas he, we think as how Its plain he didn't buy the cow.

Both Assessors.

And one thing most of all is clear-

THE JUDGE.

I'm all attention, let me hear

BOTH ASSESSORS.

The milk-white cow had one red ear !

THE JUDGE.

Assessors, with due meed of praise Your verdict sage I must commend; Like two-edged sword it cuts both ways, And has a keen and pointed end. Engrossed on creamy foolscap fair I'll send it to the Sudder, there The upright Judge whom men call Straight Will give it due regard and weight,
Or e'er in Poorun's case he saith The final word, release or death.
And now, my friends, you may depart:
I thank you both with all my heart,
And trust that fortune still may bring, As oft as on the bench I sit. Assessors as approved and fit, Assessors of as searching wit As Makhan Ram and Ganga Singh.

-Pioneer.

PUNJAB FRONTIER FORCE. (Pioneer.)

We drew attention some months ago to a standing grievance of the Punjab Frontier Force, and now that orders may issue any day placing that brigade under the direct orders of the Commander-in-Chief in India, the opportunity would seem a fitting one again to refer to the subject. Briefly the case is this. When various regiments were disbanded in 1882, one cavalry regiment (the 4th) and one infantry regiment (the 3rd) were broken up in the Frontier Force. The officers of these had to be absorbed in the remaining four cavalry and ten infantry regiments respectively, and promotion consequently was greatly retarded. In Bengal two cavalry and five infantry regiments were disbanded, and the officers for the time absorbed in the same way; but now a tremendous run of promotion has taken place, as the 16th and 17th Cavalry have been again raised and second battalions formed of three Goorkha regiments. So Bengal has not really suffered to any appreciable extent; but the Frontier Force has not been We drew attention some months ago to a standing grievance of to any appreciable extent; but the Frontier Force has not been increased to its old strength, and the block of promotion is very disheartening to the officers serving in it. Sir Frederick Roberts knows how great are the c'aims which many of the officers on the frontier have to liberal treatment, and his Excellency will now have a good opportunity of striking a balance of promotion between the Frontier Force and the Native Army in Bengal. There should not be much difficulty in this set true proceedings of should not be much difficulty in this, as two more battalions of Goorkhas will be raised next recruiting season, not to mention three Sikh infantry regiments which may be formed at any time, should financial difficulties pass away—or a second Russian scare set in.

SCREW GUNS WITH EUROPEAN BATTERIES. (Pioneer.)

Some rather wild writing has been indulged in in Bombay regarding the screw-guns with which the European mountain batteries are armed, an alarm having been raised that the guns are becoming unserviceable from the escape of gas at the ring where the pieces of the gun are screwed together. The fact of the guns having been cast just before the battery left Calcutta was spoken of in these columns; but the Bombay critic improved the occasion at once by drawing a moral against Woolwich:—
"It would appear as if reliance cannot be placed in any grade of Woolwich and the columns of the columns of the columns." Woolwich gun: let us only trust that the new 12-pounder may not exhibit any eccentricities as a further and more practical acquaintanceship." As a matter of fact, we believe, only two of the screw-guns recently sent from Jutogh to Burma were pronounced unserviceable in Calcutta. But they were not condemned because of the escape of gas at the joint. The trunnion ring of one was broken, and the other had a flaw in the metal which had not been discovered in the original proof. These two guns had not been sent home for the inspection of the Ordnance authorities, the battery getting others of Woolwich make from the arsenal at the battery getting others of Woolwich make from the arsenal at Fort William. But the point is that the guns of this battery were the original guns made by Sir William Armstrong at Elswick, where the new screw pattern was first introduced. They were were the original guns made by Sir William Armstrong at Elswick, where the new screw pattern was first introduced. They were given to the battery then known as 1-8 R.A., commanded by Major Free, who used them in the Kurram Valley during the Afghan War, and they have been in use ever since. Woolwich had nothing to say to them; and though we are not concerned to defend Government factories, we may state that two or three, if not more, of the Elswick guns sent to India have had to be repaired in the factories here. The further statement made in the Bombay paper that "several screw-guns have been provisionally condemned" owing to the escape of gas at the joint is absolutely incorrect: no such provisional condemnation has taken place. These guns are more complicated than the ordinary rifled muzzle-loader guns are more complicated than the ordinary rifled muzzle-loader and require more complicated than the ordinary filed muzzle-loader and require more careful handling, and a regimental order has been i sued emphasising this. Everything is not to be sacrificed to gaining five seconds or so in coming into action. In discussing the general question of the rearmament of the horse artillery and field batteries in India, we lately spoke inadvertently of the 7-pounder guns. It is almost unnecessary to say that the present armament is the 9-pounder rifled muzzle-loader upon the of the 7-pounder guns. It is almost unnecessary to say that the present armament is the 9-pounder rifled muzzle-loader, upon the worthlessness of which gun we strongly insisted immediately after the Delhi Camp of Exercise. We then said:—"The muzzle-loading 9-pounder has had its day," and our recent remarks obviously referred to this gun. We do not share in the apprehension that the new breech-loading gun, 13 batteries of which are shortly coming out for our First Army Corps, will prove a failure simply because it has been made at Woolwich. Its trials at home, carried out with even wearisome repetition, have been most satisfactory; all the latest improvements in the way of preventing danger at the breech to the gunners, and ensuring accuracy of fire and efficient bursting of the shell, have been adopted, and the gun as it now stands can compete successfully with any rival. We should be glad if thirty instead of thirteen batteries in India were down to receive the new gun before the end of the current year. end of the current year.

MIGRATION TO THE HILLS.

(Indian Spectator.)

The question of the annual migrations of the Governments is being hotly discussed. Anglo Indian writers vie with their Indian contemporaries in condemning the practice, and on the whole a fair case seems to have been made out against the "exodus to the hills." That we largely share the views of our friends on the

With the Supreme Government the case is different. The Viceroy and his colleagues, with their office establishments, say away much longer from the capital. Their movements are necessarily more costly, and the allowances and other items swallow a good deal more than we could afford. In these matters of length of stay, then, and general expensiveness of the trips, the public have a legitimate grievance.

We, of course, regret, and as keenly as any of our contemporaries, the "loss of touch" which has been so eloquently dwelt upon. But is that loss invariably a loss and a matter for regret? In critical times the Government of India has seldom found that "sweet reasonableness" in Bengal, which should be a comfort to its soul and a guide to impartial administration. Constituted as Bengal society is, such a condition as Government being in touch with public opinion seems to us to be past praying for, either as regards the Anglo-Indian Babu or the Babu indigenous. The two are as immiscible as oil and water. The public opinion that influences officialism in Bengal is very seldom the opinion of the people; and however anxious the higher authorities may be to get at genuine popular sentiment, they are generally helpless in the presence of official and social pressure on one hand, and the indiscriminate hostility on the other, of those who but too zealously represent the bulk of Her Majesty's subjects. The situation is one of extreme difficulty, and this difficulty is likely to be perpetuated by the permanent location of the Government of India at the scat of race antagonism. Suppose the Viceroy and his colleagues work more or less as a peripatetic Government, visiting the principal centres of the Empire, and making a stay of about two mouths at each? The Local Governments ought to be able to accommodate them without much inconvenience to themselves.

THE REMFRY MEMORIAL TABLET.

The Remfry Memorial Tablet, which has been lately erected in the Dalhousie Institute, Calcutta, was unveiled by the Hon. H. L. Harrison, in the presence of a gathering of the friends and admirers of the late Mr. John Remfry. The tablet, which is placed between two of the marble pillars in the main hall to the right of the stage, bears the following inscription:—

"In grateful remembrance of John Remfry, Late of the firm of Hamilton and Co., Of this City,

To whose philanthropic desire in the welfare of his young fellow townsmen is due the conception of this institute; and whose active and untiring efforts led to its erection as a Memorial Hall, and as a place of resort for mental improvement and social recreation for all classes.

Born at Truro, Cornwall, Englind, 16th June, 1804. Died at Clapham, London, 27th December, 1884."

Mr. E. F. Longley, in opening the proceedings, paid an eloquent tribute to the character of Mr. Remfry, the first honorary Socretary of the Institute, "a single-minded man of kind heart, who was the friend and adviser of many a young man on his first arrival in India, and who for years laboured for the benefit, interest and welfare of the employés in Calcutta." Considering that an Institution to promote the moral, social and intellectual improvement of these young men was desirable, Mr. Remfry, in 1859, almost unaided made an effort to start such an institution, and succeeded. He for years faithfully and energetically carried out the duties, very arduous at times, of honorary secretary, and to the day of his death he never ceased to retain an interest in the welfare of the good work which he was so instrumental in founding. The Hon. Mr. Harrison, in unveiling the tablet, said that:—"It was to him a sad as well as a grateful task, sad because to those among them whose memory of Calcutta went back to almost the quarter of a century, it seemed but yesterday that they all had in the midst of them Mr. John Remfry, working, living and labouring exceedingly. Now all that was left for them to do was to attend a ceremony to perpetuate his memory. At the sametime it was a pleasant task, because it was very gratifying to see that gathering; to know that a citizen of Calcutta had endeavoured not only to do his duty but more than his duty, that of leaving behind him a very permanent record of his sympathetic interest in the welfare of both the city and its inhabitants. It was very gratifying to them to know that those who came after him were determined that the memory of his good deeds should not remain unperpetuated. He thoroughly endorsed all that Mr. Longley had said in reference to all the qualities of heart and head which made Mr. Remfry universally esteemed and respected in Calcutta."

Mr. R. Remfry, in a few well chosen words, acknowledged the kind and affectionate terms in which his late father had been spoken of.

The proceedings then came to a close,

A MEMORIAL to 'the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal from the inhabitants and ratepayers of Howrah complains that the dispute about the chairmanship of that body has imported a feeling of race antagonism into the municipal board which has been without a chairman since March. It complains also that the proceedings of the board have become a grave scandal, and prays Government either to transfer the Municipality to the second schedule of the Act and appoint a chairman (because a strong man with special powers is a necessity until present party spirit subsides), or to supersede the present commissioners for persistently making default in the performance of their duty with regard to the election of a chairman, and thus put an end to the scandal complained of.

In the course of his opening speech at the laying of the Foundation Stone of the Ezra Hospital in Calcutta a few days ago, Dr. Cowie said:—"The late Mr. Ezra's largeness of heart and universal benevolence were known but to few others save the recipients of his charity. The following are some of the chief of the good works which he performed. He gave no less than Rs. 5,000 a month towards the relief of the destitute of the Jewish community in India and elsewhere. The Ezra's Benevolent Institution, which was founded by him in 1882, and for the maintenance of which he gave a sum of Rs. 800 a month, is a great boon to the local Jewish community. The institution is attended by about a hundred children, who are fed as well as educated. Not long ago the deceased founded an institution in Jerusalem of an educational character at an annual cost of £1,200. The memory of Mr. Ezra is associated with many other charities and public gifts. Ezra House at the Zoological Gardens cost Rs. 12,000; the drinking fountain opposite his house cost Rs. 4,000; and the synagogue in Canningstreet cost three lakhs."

THE announcement is made in the Calcutta papers of the death of the Rev. Charles Henry Appleton Dali, M.A. The deceased, who was in his seventy-first year, was one of the oldest missionaries in India, and one of the pioneers of the American Unitarian Mission. Till recent years he took an active part in the public life of Calcutta, and was conspicuous for the energy with which he was ever ready to throw himself into any movement for the moral or social improvement of the people. He was a man of considerable culture and amiable disposition, and he could look back upon a long life of honourable toil and open-handed charity.

MADRAS

THE present season is reported to be the best in Bangalore since 1880, both for rainfall and bountiful crops.

THE Madras Government has placed at the disposal of the Madras Municipality a sum of Rs. 6,000 to build new cages for the wild animals in the People's Park, and a sum of one lakh of rupees for a market or for drainage works. The Commissioners bave not yet decided to which of these objects to give the preference.

The Commercial and Land Mortgage Bank during the first half-year of its operations has made a net profit equivalent to eleven per cent. per annum. The first issue of 5,000 shares of Rs. 100 each has been taken up by over 300 shareholders.

COL NEL OLGOTT, the president of the Theosophical Society, is at Bangalore. Many Natives, including some of the leading officials, are gushing over him, presenting addresses, caskets, and getting up demonstrations.

It is stated that the Maharajah of Myore has generously promised to make up any deficiency in the funds of the Great Southern Race Meeting, and to meet all demands against them.

Some years ago attempts were made by the Mysore Government to raise hops in Bangalore, but proved unsuccessful. Mr. Gibson, the municipal engineer of the station and an amateur horticulturist, has succeeded in growing some very fine hops, the flowers of which have set well, and will be exhibited at the next show. If hops can be successfully cultivated at Bangalore a superior class of beer will be brewed, the duty on hops now being prohibitive.

CAPTAIN TAYLOR, the Port Officer of Madras, will have to retire from the service in November next under the fifty-five years' rule, and it is reported that Captain Street will be his successor.

DAVID DEVAYARAM, a Native Christian, over 100 years of age, has died at Bangalore. The deceased was for half a centruly associated with the London Mission here since his conversion. He remembered Tippu, Wellington and Munro very well, and was acquainted with Mark Cubbon and other worthies of his day.

BOMBAY.

The Hon. Budroodin Tyebjee has been appointed Government Professor of Law, in place of Mr. W. Webb, who acts as a Presidency Magistrate.

It having come to the knowledge of His Highness the Nizam's Government that the railway authorities had given out an extensive contract for the supply of sleepers without calling for tenders in the usual way, the Government at once ordered the cancellation of the contract and caused the usual advertisement to be published, with the result that already tenders have been received at rates so much lower than those previously sanctioned that a saving of at least Rs. 20,000 will accrue to Government on this item alone.

Dr. Peterson as well as Mr. R. G. Bhandarkar will, says the Bombay Gazette, represent the Government of Bombay at the Oriental Congress at Vienna in September. Mr. Fleet will attend the Congress on behalf of the Government of India.

At the sitting of the Insolvency Court, Premchund Roychund, who was described by his counsel, Mr. Lang, as one of the leading brokers and doing a very large business in Bombay, obtained an interim order. An application for the usual six months' protection, the insolvent having creditors in England, was opposed by Mr. Mankar on behalf of Dulputbhoy Bhugoobhoy, a creditor for Rs. 33,000 odd, on the ground that the petition having been filed only on Saturday, the creditor had not had sufficient time to file his grounds of opposition. After a somewhat lengthy argument, Mr. Justice Scott, the Commissioner of the Court, thought that as this was a very heavy insolvency the liabilities amounting to over eight lakhs of rupees, a week's postponement ought to be granted, the insolvent meantime being allowed the protection of the Court.

THE Hon. Budrudin Tyabjee, barrister-at-law, will act as Government Professor of Law during the time Mr. W. Webb is acting as Presidency Magistrate.

SURGEON-MAJOR P. MURPHY, M.D., has been appointed Civil Surgeon, Broach; and Surgeon Major A. Barry, M.D., will serve in a similar capacity at Bijapur.

THE Governor-General in Council is pleased to recognise the appointment of Mr. D. H. Glade as Acting Consul for Germany at Bombay during the absence of Mr. G. K. Heinrichs.

A FATAL landslip occurred at Castle Rock at the extremity of the Southern Mahratta Railway, on the borders of the Portuguese frontier, on the 19th inst., and resulted in the death of one Bennett, a European miner, and four Natives. The slip is attributed to the heavy rain which had fallen recently there. The accident was unavoidable, as every precaution had been taken by the engineering department to guard against all such mishaps.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

THE Census of Simla is to be taken in September on a day to be fixed hereafter.

THE arrangement by which it was proposed that Major Vousden should temporarily relieve Major Davidson as Military Secretary to the Punjab Government is not likely to be carried out.

An official notice has been issued intimating that the traffic on the railway between Umballa and Saharanpur has been resumed. The mails are now arriving regularly at Simla.

The promoters of the Hurdwar Mussoorie Railway are now in direct communication with the Public Works Department in Simla regarding their proposed line through the Doon. There is a difference of opinion as to the estimated cost, the Government Engineers hold that too sanguine a view has been taken by the promoters of the outlay necessary. It is understood that the North-West Provinces Government will shortly depute a railway officer to examine the located line of railway and report generally on the project.

The question as to how far the 'transactions carried on in a club are to be considered private is likely, says an up-country paper, to crop up with reference to a case which, within the last few days, has occurred at a hill station. Rumours of high play at the club having reached the cars of a distinguished general officer, he caused, it is said, an investigation of the whist book to be made. On receiving evidence confirmatory of the rumours, he reported one officer to higher authority, at the same time ordering back to his regiment another officer who was also concerned in the high play. The club committee object to the winnings and losings of members—which, for convenience sake, are recorded in a book—being made the subject of an official investigation, and meditate taking into consideration the question whether the staff officer, who examined and reported on the books, should any longer be permitted to remain a member of the club. There can be no question that the general could not ignore the persistent rumours of high play in which military officers were concerned; but his manner of obtaining the necessary evidence is undoubtedly open to comment.

BURMA.

Mr. PHAYRE's body was buried at Nimboo on the 17th, the Rev. Mr. Finn, the Chaplain of Thayetmyo, conducting the service.

The Rangoon Gazette states that the body of the late Paymaster Reid, H.M.S. Ranger, who was reported at Rangoon as missing, was found on the morning of the 12th instant floating in the Irrawaddy about six miles beyond Kemendine. He was buried the same day, his funeral being attended by his brother officers and a few friends.

Sir CHARLES AITCHISON, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, has received the following telegram from Sir Charles Bernard, Chief Commissioner of Burma:—"Punjab police and levy are doing very well. The men of the levy are capital, and are approved by everybody. The military police are being drilled, and where I have inspected them they were contented and most eager to learn their drill and be ready for work. There may be a few black sheep among so many; but so far we all think the men from the Punjab a decided success."

THE Rangoon Times says:—"The 2nd Battalion, the Prince Albert's Somersetshire Light Infantry, appear to be having rather heavy work with the dacoits. The battalion is divided into small detachments, some at Ningyan, some at Yemethen, some at Ava, and some at outlying stations round about Mandalay; while the head-quarters, consisting of two officers, the band, and a few other men are located in the Mandalay Palace. Many men have died from cholera, dysentery, and fever at Yemethen and Ningyan, some (including that popular and promising officer, Lieutenant Shubrick) have been shot down, while others have either succumbed to wounds received in the engagements with dacoits, or are lying wounded in the several field hospitals."

A CORRESPONDENT writes from Ningyan, Upper Burma, under date the 30th June:—"Ningyan is the headquarters of the Bombay Burma Trading Company in these parts, and there are five or six of their people stationed here. It is a splendid service, but their affairs are at present at a standstill. One of their men, a particularly nice fellow, Bruce, was killed by dacoits about fifteen miles from here the other day, and his head cut off and stuck on a pole in one of the forest villages. An expedition went from here to recover the body, which we found and buried, but the head had been taken away. I have just come back from another trip which we made to destroy some villages, and had a narrow escape. We were fifty strong, with two seven-pounders, and had burnt a village and occupied another, when some rebels fired on a little group who were consulting on the next move to be made. Shubrick, of the 13th, who was in command of the party, and two policemen were killed."

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

With the loss of the appointment of Sanitary Commissioner, at any rate, in its present lucrative shape, the Madras Medical Service has lost another fat appointment, so that at present the efficial plums of this service are few indeed. The present state of affairs offers a marked contrast to what held good when the service was only second to the Civil Service, and in many cases better than it. In those halcyon days there were two heads of the Department, viz:—a Physician-General and a Surgeon-General, cach on Rs. 2,500 a month; immediately under these were a number of Deputy Surgeon-Generals, or rather, Deputy Inspector-Generals as they were called in those days, on Rs. 1,800 a month. At that time the medical arrangements of the Native troops were entirely under the control of this department; so that a Deputy Inspector-General had to superintend not only the hospitals of the Native regiments, but also the various civil dispensaries in his division. There were at least seven of these officers, at Madras, Bangalore, Bellary, Nagpore, Cunnanore, Rangoon, and Secunderabal respectively; the officer at the latter place, as at present, drew Rs. 300 a month extra for the Hyderabad contingent. There were in addition the Sanitary Commissioner of Madras on Rs. 2,000, and appointed irrespective of rank; and the Principal of the Medical College and General Hospital on Rs. 1,600, with allowances amounting to about Rs. 2,000.

on Rs. 1,600, with allowances amounting to about Rs. 2,000.

At present all military arrangements have been transferred from the Indian Medical Service to the Army Medical Staff, and a certain number of Indian Medical officers are placed under the Surgeon-General of the British forces, who arranges about the Native troops. Then, again, the Army Medical Staff and Indian Medical Service share the appointments of Deputy-Surgeon-Generals, who only superintend medico-military arrangements. The Departmental Head of the Indian Service is now designated Surgeon-General with the Government of Madras, and simply superintends civil medical work. Similar arrangements hold good in the sister Presidencies.

Though the Indian Medical Service now offers few official inducements, men who know their work well and take an interest in it, if they are lucky, can drop into appointments where they can enjoy large lucrative practices. In Madras itself it is no unusual occurrence for a good medical man to make 2,000 rupees a month besides his pay; 3,000 and even 4,000 rupees have been made. Mrs. Scharlieb is believed to make with salaries between 1,500 and 2,000 rupees. In Bombay 5,000 rupees and 6,000 rupees, beyond pay, have been made. Some of the Mofusil stations also offer a fair field.

At one time the Indian Medical Service was considered far superior to the Army and Navy Medical Departments. At present it is not so; moreover there is no love whatever lost between the Army and Navy Medical Departments on the one hand, and

At one time the Indian Medical Service was considered far superior to the Army and Navy Medical Departments. At present it is not so; moreover there is no love whatever lost between the Army and Navy Medical Departments on the one hand, and their Indian sister service on the other. During the late Egyptian and Soudanese campaigns this ill-feeling was amply borne out, as indeed it invariably is, when the various Departments come into working contact with each other. The Army Medical Department had, for many reasons, to be humoured, so the interests of the Indian Medical Service were to a great extent sacrificed. As matters stand at present, men who simply run the ordinary correr are better off and have more even chances of promotion in the two Imperial services than in the Indian Local Service which must be prepared for further changes and eventually for gradual extinction.—Malabar Spectator.

CURIOUS IDEAS ABOUT FEMALE EDUCATION.—Our friend, the Kossid-I-Mumbai, which we believe is the only paper published Kossid-I-Munbai, which we believe is the only paper published in Bombay for the edification of Mahommedans, pronounces the following opinion with regard to the education of the female of the Mahommedan community:—"Our Islamies have, in emulation of their Parsee brethren, lately opened a girl's school. We wish them joy of it. Let us, however, ask them a few questions. Will the educated Mahommedan girl accept as husband a lucifier with the school of the school o Will the educated Mahommedan girl accept as husband a luciter match-seller, or sherbert walla, or a dealer in mangoes? It is a well-known fact that Mussulman boys are very backward in matters of education. They spend their pocket money in Kawa Khanas, Native theatres and liquor shops. Educate them first before preparing educated wives for them. Girls must be educated according to their means and station in life. A weaver's educated daughter will not accept an illiterate weaver for a husband. A weaver's daughter again will find no welcome in a rich man's house. A little knowledge will be her ruin. Let the weaver's girl have the benefit of a superior training in the art of weaving.

POVERTY AMONGST THE EURASIANS.—How to deal with the daily increase of poverty amongst the Eurasians has now become an important question. There are some occupations to which the Eurasians cannot take, while there are others to which they will Eurasians cannot take, while there are others to which they will not take. They do not go in much for scientific training. The reason they assign for this state of things is poverty, and they ask Government to provide for them educational institutions free of charge. This demand is unfair. They must either abide by the existing rules as regards educational matters, or must shift for themselves as the Natives do. They refuse to take to agricultural pursuits, but are willing to enter military service. We think they are quite fitted for this. They are strong in body, and have a certain amount of pluck. But then another difficulty comes in at this stage. They want to be in the ranks of the British soldiers. this stage. They want to be in the ranks of the British soldiers, whose work they cannot do, and they decline to be in the ranks of the Native soldiers, whose work they consider beneath their dignity to do. Cannot the Government hit upon some solution of the problem ?—Bombay Samachar. They want to be in the ranks of the British soldiers, SIR JAMES FERGUSSON IN PARLIAMENT.—No wonder Sir James Fergusson could not pull on with Mr. Samuel Smith. The ex-Governor of Bombay has shown such unmistakable signs of unfriendliness for his country since his entering Parliament, that the few individuals in Bombay who had undertaken to perpetuate his memory have thought it wise to say nothing further about the movement. Sir James speaks of his experience, and such experience as can advocate the abolition of the import duty—experience which has landed us in the miseries of the Abkari and the forest zoolums, the bitterness of which Lord Reay is trying his best to mitigate. - Jam i-Jamshed.

An Annual Farce.-The last mail has brought an account of the farce which is annually enacted in Parliament. The ministers and members of Parliament vie with one another in neglecting and members of Parliament vie with one another in neglecting the best interests of the country, which is fast going to ruins. The Secretary of State or his deputy, as in duty bound, say something, but nobody pays any attention to what is said. With all respect for the British statesmen, we can't help saying that the manner in which Indian affairs are managed in England is simply disgraceful. - Gujerati.

He served with the Buffs in the China war of 1859-60, for which he received the medal with clasp. He was deputy assistant-quartermaster general at Bombay from 1871 to 1874, and took part in the Egyptian expedition of 1882, and also in the Soudan campaign of 1885. For these services he received the medal, bronze star, and clasps, was mentioned in despatches, and nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath. He commarded the 1st Battalion Princess Charlotte of Wales's (Royal Berkshire) Regiment from 1883 down to his recent retirement. General Huyshe married in 1870, Harriet Helena, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Francis Arthur Trench, kinsman of Lord Ashtown.

THE recent rifle matches at Simla have shown the Army that their Chief is one of the crack-shots in India; fifty-nine out of a possible seventy on one occasion and fifty-seven out of seventy on a second are scores which would hold their own at Wimbledon, and the merit of the shooting will be appreciated in every barrack room in which it is made known.

Miscellaneous.

THE NEW GOORKHA REGIMENTS.—The Indian Government have sanctioned free passages from Nipal for the families of the recruits of the new Goorkha battalions. This is a special concession, and is not to be considered as a precedent for men recruited in the future. Arrangements for bringing the families will be made in the one of the control of the contro made in the ensuing cold weather. As many men at the time of their enlistment, believing in the rates of high pay said to be offered by the Government, brought their families with them, they will not benefit by the present concession.

INDIAN OIL-FIELDS.—These are supposed to be numerous, but have not been carefully examined as yet. The Assam and Burma fields are the best known. Oil has been found on the northwestern frontier and has lately come into use as fuel on the rail. western frontier and has lately come into use as fuel on the railway. In Assam there are oil wells which were worked for a short time by Mr. Goodenough of Calcutta. Subsequently they seem to have passed into the hands of the Assam Railways and Trading Company. But very little information is forthcoming as to the present state of the oil wells, though it seems that the coal mines there are being worked. In Burma it is believed a very fruitful field exists, but accurate information is wanting. Along the Arracan Coast wells have been sunk, and a certain quantity of oil has been obtained, but the efforts to work them have not hitherto been crowned with success. The geological features of the district warrant the belief that petroleum does exist there, but the difficulties seem not yet to have been overcome. It took many years before the skill and capital and enterprise of Messrs. Nobel overcame their difficulties at Baku. At Yenan-gyoung, in Upper Burma, petroleum does exist in very large quantity. Dr. Romanis reports that the production of crude oil was six lakhs nomanis reports that the production of crude oil was six lakhs viss a month, representing, we believe, about 10,000 tons or 12,000 tons per annum. But on account of the unsettled state of the country this production has been much reduced. But the method of raising the oil followed at Yenan-gyoung is of the most primitive description. It is a most important thing to refine the oil as rapidly as possible after it is raised, for the valuable constituents evaporate readily. Not until the system of drilling has been introduced can the capacity of the Burmese field be fully known. But in view of the importance of the subject it seems desirable to But in view of the importance of the subject it seems desirable to have some inquiry conducted by some fully qualified scientific

It is supposed that the flying reconnaissance that is to be made this next season for a line of railway across the Bikaneer desert is indirectly connected with the general scheme of frontier strategical railways. At present (says an up-country paper) all troops from Upper India that might have to be massed beyond the Suleiman would have to travel by the single line of railway that passes through Mooltan. This serves the army of the Punjab of the range of munitions of war and supplies, too, for a really large army would sorely strain the resources of the Mootan line and words with a supplies, too, for a really large army would sorely strain the resources of the Mootan line whereas with a pleasant route from near Aircra at the whereas with an alternative route from near Ajmere or the whereas with an alternative route from near Ajmere or the Sambhar Salt Lake direct to Bhawalpur these disadvantages would vanish. Agra and the North-West Provinces garrisons generally would be in direct communication with the Indus Valley line; while troops from Bombay and Madras, if not sent by way of Kurrachee, could be hurried up through Indore or Ahmedabad to Ajmere, and thence sent to the front by way of the Bikanir line. The desert should not offer many natural difficulties once the hills about Ajmere have been crossed, and the rails could be quickly laid as they have been in the Sind-Sagar Doab.

Sagar Doab. THE NEW THE New Governor of Madras.—Satisfaction at the appointment of Mr. Bourke to the Governorship of Madras is tempered only by one consideration. What Madras gains London loses, and the House of Commons will be the less attractive by the absence of one of the courtly, cultured, and honest men who leaven the mass of politicians. Mr. Bourke is not a man of showy qualities; but his sterling merit and his aptitude for business were recognised by Lord Beaconsfield, an admirable judge of character. In the later times upon which the Conservative party have fallen there has been a tendency to brush aside men like Mr. Bourke. He was left out of the present Conservative Administra Bourke. He was left out of the present Conservative Administra-tion, and finds what we trust will prove adequate compensation tion, and finds what we trust will prove adequate compensation in his new appointment. Whether it is altogether acceptable to the right hon gentleman may be doubtful. He once had the Bombay Governorship offered to him and declined it, preferring to run in the race for political honours at home. That a man who might have had Bombay should accept Madras seems on the face of it puzzling. However, if Mr. Bourke is pleased with Madras, we will undertake to say that Madras will be pleased with him even after it has been hereft of the presence of Mr. Grant with him, even after it has been bereft of the presence of Mr. Grant Duff. Mr. Bourke has family connections with India, his brother, Lord Mayo, having been one of the most popular Viceroys the country ever knew. The new Governor of Madras may be counted upon to renew and knit closer the friendly feelings that eviet between all classes of the population of India and the House exist between all classes of the population of India and the House of Bourke.

THE INDIAN EMPIRE.*

It is easy for a person of very moderate abilities to expand ideas; by doing so he dilutes them as surely as does the vendor of milk when he has recourse to the iron-tailed cow. It is, too, of milk when he has recourse to the iron-tailed cow. It is, too, a simple thing enough to narrate at full length whatever facts authorities may supply. To deal with the numberless matters connected with the geography, natural products, populations, and history of a vast country, nearly 2,000 miles in length and as many in breadth, in such detail as to occupy "128 printed volumes, aggregating 60,000 pages," to arrange under their respective heads, and to bring within the compass of a Gazetteer, all the more important of these matters, finally to compress all that is most material into an octavo volume of no unusual bulk, is, in good sooth, a task to which few would be equal. Yet this is the task which Dr. Hunter has undertaken, and the result, in the shape of the present volume, is before us.

result, in the shape of the present volume, is before us.

Commencing with the physical configuration of the country, we are led to consider the peoples, Aryan and non-Aryan, the sources whence they may be supposed to have derived their customs, and whatever cult they followed, the influence on them of the various invasions to which they have been (as here detailed) the various invasions to which they have been (as here detailed) subject, and, finally, their present condition under our rule; with full particulars of the natural resources of the land, and of the manner in which, thus far, they have been utilised. The scheme of the work is wide and complete enough, nor does the performance lag behind the conception.

To take, as an instance, the conformation of the country, not only is it carefully and thoroughly delineated from the "Abode of Frost" in the Himalaya to the Cape Comorin, dedicated to Kumari,† but the various effects of fluviatile action are traced, Kumari, T but the various effects of fluviatile action are traced, with such suggestive remarks as the following:—"The Indian rivers were originally lines of drainage through great watery regions. In their upper courses they gradually scooped out their beds, and thus produced a low-level channel into which the fens and marshes eventually drained" (p. 169).

The reader who really wishes to learn something about our great dependency from a work, every page of which is replete with information, will probably be more especially struck with interesting chapters which deal with the population. It will be news to few of our readers that the aboriginal (or. as they are news to few of our readers that the aboriginal (or, as they are news to few of our readers that the aboriginal (or, as they are nowadays called, non-Aryan) tribes were not only to a great extent fetish worshippers, but that their rites were of the most blood-thirsty character, involving frequent human sacrifices. How deeply the remnants of their gross superstitions have affected the (originally far more refined) Hindu creed is a subject carefully considered in the chapter (VIII.) devoted to the "Rise of Hinduiem," to which a few words must be devoted. It will, however the possible to many readers to be an about the weak part to be a possible to many readers to be an about the weak part to be a possible to many readers to be a possible to many readers. ever, be anovelty to many readers to learn that while we have abolished the Meriah (human) sacrifice among the Khonds a survival of the superstition gave evidence of its existence near

Calcutta not so many years since.†
The reciprocal influence which Buddhism and Brahmanism to a certain extent exercised, is well, though briefly, indicated by Dr. Hunter, whose remarks on the subject are clearly the result of extended research. It is an enigma all but insoluble how the—in their earliest enunciation so simple—dogmas of Gautama Buddha should, though by no means attractive, have commanded the largest following of any religion on earth. Nor has there, perhaps, been any non-Christian creed respecting which so much has been written. Many of our readers may, however, not be aware that Gautama, besides heing a "divine which so much has been written. Many of our readers may, however, not be aware that Gautama, besides being a "divine teacher among his followers," and "an incarnation of Vishnu among the Hindus," is "a saint of the Christian church, with a saint of the Christian church, with a better the Graph and Bomen colondars" day assigned to him in both the Greek and Roman calendars

(p. 132) The way in which this came to pass is stated by the author (p. 152) in a manner which forcibly recalls the transmogrification of Ya Hasan! Ya Husain! into "Hobson Jobson."

Few distinctions can well be greater than that between the voluptuous, and even sportive, Zeus of the Greeks, and the somewhat staid and severe Jupiter of the Romans; they have little in common but their name, and the sovereignty of Olympus. Even more striking, however, was that between the Siva of the Aryan and non-Aryan races. We quote but a brief passage from the carefully condensed chapter already referred to.

The latest relic of a ferocious form of cult used to be put down The latest relic of a ferocious form of cult used to be put down to the credit of Jagannath; and over and over again has Exeter Hall rung with the tirades against "the awful practice of self-immolation under the bloodstained wheels of an idol's car," from well-meaning individuals whose "horrors" had as much existence as poor harmless Mr. McColl's "impaled Bulgarians." On this subject there could be no better authority than Dr. Hunter, within whose jurisdiction the temple of Pooree at one time was; and we are glad to see that he utterly scouts the idea of their being any "practice of self-immolation" more than we have in London streets when an old woman loses her head and runs under London streets when an old woman loses her head and runs under the wheels of a Hansom cab.

History is treated with the same care and accuracy. Nor can any history need such treatment more than that of India; compared with which Livy's tales about the early years of Rome are truth itself. Such stories as that (p. 273) of Mahmud's well-known expedition to Somnath are given in this volume "revised and corrected;" and though its scope precludes anything like an exhaustive treatment, we find the same striving after accuracy in the narrative of the battle of Plassey, 700 years later, in which Clive's own words are quoted. Especially valuable in the historical section will be found the résumé of the principal events of the more important reigns, such as those of Akbar (p. 292), Jahangir (p. 309), Sah Jahan (p. 302), &c.; and ensily accessible authorities are so copiously cited, that no one who desires further information on any obscure passage need have the least difficulty History is treated with the same care and accuracy. Nor can information on any obscure passage need have the least difficulty in procuring it.

Our own connection with India was originally commercial, and its articles of produce or manufacture will, we fear, occupy average Briton more than any of the subjects to which we have referred. There is, however, balm in Gilead; and such a reader will find in this book a very accurate and well drawn account of the indigenous, as well of the imported, objects of agriculture; rice, with other grains taking the first rank among the former, tea, coffee, cinchona among the latter. The whole process of cultivation as regards these, and those of manufacture so far as concerns objects designed and executed by the artist, or fabricated by the ordinary workman, are fully set forth.

The measures taken, by the constant improvement of internal communications, and of irrigation, to prevent, or to alleviate, suffering from famine the continuous, though not always well-directed, efforts to give education to the people, are presented with encyclopedic clearness, and the unparalleled increase of imports and exports insisted on.

There is, in short, no topic relating to India, respecting which the reader of this volume will not obtain information adequate to all ordinary purposes and conveyed in a pleasant, and, indeed, elegant, and even brilliant, style: while reference is made easy by a full and well-compiled Table of Contents, and a complete Index.

LLOYD'S UNIVERSAL REGISTER OF BRITISH AND FOREIGN SHIPPING.*

Whatever may be the result of the ugly rumours affoat as to England's Navy; whether it be true, as some assert, that we are no match for such a fleet as under certain conditions could be brought against us; whether it be part and parcel of a gun's duty to burst when fired, as has lately happened, one fact remains undisputed and indisputable, that as far as the mercantile marine is concerned Great Britain stands "the foremost ship building and ship-owning country in the world." In these circumstances the public will welcome the magnificent volume just issued by Lloyd's, which, under the title of the "Universal Register," forms complete International Register and Directory of Shipping. The leading feature of the book is the set of tables giving particulars of the most minute description as to every sea-going vessel in the world, even to the humble yachts which grace our shores. Provided a vessel be 100 tons burden or upwards it is included in the Register, where will be found its official number, its classification Register, where will be found its official number, its classification either at Lloyd's or at some foreign kindred institution, its name and rig, the material of which it is built, whether of iron, steel, wood, or "composite," the iron frame being planked with wood; its flag, its tonnage, its dimension, the place, date, and person where it was built, its owners, and, lastly, its port of registry. Then there is a complete code of signal letters assigned not only to British versels, but to the marine of every nation in the world, while, to render the work as perfect as possible, there have been included lists of shipowners, shipbuilders, dry docks, telegraphic addresses of persons connected with shipping, Lloyd's agents, &c. Finally, to complete their conception of an international registry of shipping, the committee of Lloyd's have also included particulars of the war navies of the world.

A glance at a few of the teachings of this valuable work will serve to show the interesting nature of its contents to such portion of the public as give heed to the national pulse of England's greatness—her mercantile marine. Over 50 per cent. of the world's tonnage sails under the British flag, while, taking iron and steel sailing vessels by themselves, the percentage rises to about 90. In other words, out of every ten vessels afloat five belong to this country. Some idea of the superiority which this indicates may be gathered from the circumstance that America, which comes next on the list, cannot boast of a higher average than one in ten, Norway one in fourteen, Germany one in fifteen, and France one in twenty. Thus much for commerce and trade. As to place of construction, it will be found that of the vessels now in existence over 44 per cent. have been built in the British Empire; while for iron and steel vessels constructed in the United Kingdom the percentage rises to above 82. It is gratifying, therefore, to learn that this island is still the principal seat of the iron and shipbuilding industry.

It will, perhaps, occasion surprise, in view of the general depression in trade, especially as regards the shipping interest, to find that, though during 1885 more vessels were removed from the British Register than were added to it, the total tonnage was increased during the year, thus emphasising the tendency of the present day towards the employment of large ships.

Of the many gratifying features which betoken England's

Of the many gratifying features which betoken, England's greatness as a maritime nation, perhaps few are more striking than the circumstance that of the vessels built in the world dring 1885 no less than 70 per cent. have been classed at Lloyd's. Yet the latter is a voluntary society, without State aid, or, indeed, State recognition. It is a mere private institution; but so ably has it conducted its operations, so absolutely irreproachable has been its career as an examiner and classifier of ships, that its certificate passes unchallenged to the remotest corners of the civilised world. In the annals of time it would not be possible to find a more remarkable testimony to commercial integrity and uprightness, while every Englishman cannot be otherwise than proud that in the matter of the world's marine the Committee of Lloyd's is arbiter of the destinies of well-nigh half the ships which stud the ocean. With such a fact before our eyes it may almost be accepted as a truism that the Register now issued is as near perfection as is possible—clear, concise, admirably arranged, ample in its details, and, withal, compact in its bulk. Criticism is disarmed. Praise—pure, unalloyed praise—is all that can be awarded to a volume in every way worthy of the source from which it emanated.

Book for Review.—"Life of Sir Henry Raeburn, R.A." By W. Raeburn Andrew. (W. H. Allen and Co. 1886.)

THE EXPENSES OF THE BENGAL HILL EXODUS.—A Calcutta paper says that in 1885, the last completed year, the cost incurred by the Government of Bengal in connection with the move to Darjeeling amounted to Rs. 70,406. Of this sum no less than Rs. 29,126 was spent in hill allowances to clerks and servants, and Rs. 18,037 on the travelling allowances of clerks and servants. House-rent for clerks and offices amounted to Rs. 6,583, and the only other important item of expenditure was Rs. 14,821 on account of contingencies, considerably more than half of which was spent on postage, telegraph charges, and freight payable to the Eastern Bengal and Northern Bengal State Railways. If, as is probable, a suggestion made by the Finance Committeee is accepted, the strength of the establishment taken to the hills will in future be greatly reduced, and this will, of course, produce a crrresponding reduction in the expenditure on account of hill allowances, travelling allowances, and house-rent. Besides the above sum of Rs. 70,406, a further sum of Rs. 6,558 was spent by heads of departments required or permitted to follow the Government of Darjeeling.

TRADE STATISTICS.—French Possessions in India.—During the year 1884-85 the value of imports from foreign countries to the French possessions in India was Rs. 10,90,323, and that of the exports to foreign countries Rs. 68,06,225. The value of imports has been steadily decreasing for the last five years, while that of the exports has nearly doubled. In the coasting trade the value of imports was Rs. 13,25,991, and that of the exports Rs. 33,05,267. The former is nearly the same as it was five years ago, while the latter has decreased by upwards of 13 lakhs. Trade of Assam.—The trade of Assam with the various tribes across the frontier appears to be steadily increasing, although not yet very large. The returns of the trade for the month of May last have just been published, from which it appears that the total value of the imports was only Rs. 39,004, and that of the exports Rs. 6,783. Hill Tipperah did the largest trade in both imports and exports, the value of the former being Rs. 13,266, and of the latter Rs. 2,270. Manipur come next so far as the value of imports is concerned, the amount being Rs. 10,945. The Lushai Hills sent only Rs. 2,697 worth of goods, while the imports from the Naga, Mishmi, and Singpo Hills were valued at Rs. 2,566. The trade with Bhutan was insignificant.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Consequent on the appointment of Major-General Chesney to the Viceregal Council Colonel Newmarch has reverted to his substantive post as Secretary in the Military Department, and Colonel Collen to be Accountant-General in the Military Department.

THE Government of India have decided that (1) the troops under Colonel Dicken who marched from Tounghoo and occupied Ningyan; (2) under Major Law, who marched from Thayetmyo and occupied Toungdwingyi; and (3) under Lieutenant-Colonel Hamilton who marched from Thayetmyo across the frontier between Mindoon and Menhla, are not entitled to share in the gratuity bestowed on the officers and troops of Sir Harry Prendergast's force.

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN-EMPRESS OF INDIA has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned corps being permitted to bear the words specified below upon their colours or appointments, in commemoration of the operations in the Eastern Soudan in the vicinity of Suakin during the year 1885:—The 9th Bengal Lancers, "Suakin, 1885." The Queen's Own Madras Sappers and Miners, the 15th Sikhs, the 17th Bengal Infantry, and the 28th Bombay Infantry, "Suakin, 1885," and "Tofrek." The latter name is supposed to commemorate the fight at Macneil's zereba.

THE first indent for the new Martini-Enfield rifle for the Army in India has been sent to England. When the rifles arrive, the British troops of the 1st Army Corps will be the first re-armed. The new cartridge-making machinery is being provided at all the Indian cartridge factories.

An officer of the Bengal Medical Service will be appointed to the charge of the Followers' Hospital at Quetta on the vacation of the appointment by the present incumbent.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL G. S. KEITH and Lieutenant-Colonel J. Ward, Madras Staff Corps, have been removed from the appointments held by them in the 33rd Madras Infantry, and placed on general duty.

As regards the Native Army, the Commander-in-Chief has made no secret of giving the preference, when chances of active service offer, to the "best shooting" regiments, other things being equal—an excellent principle to adopt.

THE Government of India will not recognise volunteer rank. A short while ago, the Bengal Government were informed that they should have placed the prefix "Mr.," not "Major," to the name of a distinguished volunteer officer, and now we have the Government of the North-West Provinces and Oudh incurring the displeasure of the Supreme Government in making the following announcement:—"Lieutenant-Colonel W. Charsley Thomas (Volunteer Army), Officiating Junior Deputy Inspector General of Police, to be confirmed in that appointment."

The Punjab Frontier Force.—The following is the General Order sanctioning the transfer of the Frontier Force:—"With the sanction of Her Majesty's Government the Right Hon. the Viceroy and Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to notify the transfer of the Punjab Frontier Force, the administration of which has hitherto been vested in the Government of the Punjab, to the command of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India. In doing so his Excellency in Council is authorised to express the high sense entertained by Her Majesty the Queen-Empress of the loyal and brilliant services which, under the Government of the Province, the Punjab Frontier Force has invariably rendered to the State from the earliest period of its creation. The Governor-General in Council takes this opportunity to place on record his appreciation of the admirable manner in which the force has for so many years been administered by the Punjab Government, and of the wise and well-directed measures taken by that Government from time to time to promote and maintain its efficiency. In arranging the details of this change of control the political exigencies of the frontier have been kept prominently in view, and every effort has been and will be made to interfere as little as possible with the present system of frontier administration. The force will, therefore, continue as a separate unit for frontier duties, and, as far as may be found practicable, its local and distinctive character will be preserved, its institutions maintained, and its existing privileges continued. The transfer will take place from 1st August, 1886, and his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council is confident that all ranks of the force, British and Native, under the command of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, will spare no efforts to worthily uphold the traditions of loyalty, discipline, and bravery which have been handed down to them, and to maintain unimpaired the esprit de corps, efficiency, and soldierly qualities which have ga

THE SIMLA STORM.

THE present Overland Mail brings some very amusing literature in the shape of comments from the Press, English and Native, regarding the vexed question of the Simla exodus, but which is now being widened by the writers into the larger question of where the capital of the Government of India ought to be. The Calcutta papers have, of course, no doubt upon this latter point, nor have the Bombay papers, but both hold diametrically opposite views. The Englishman, like Hannibal addressing his soldiers before a battle, takes the victory for granted. The agitation meeting held "on one of the hottest afternoons in July" to protest against the hill migration has, according to that journal, carried its object. Simla is doomed, and will soon become a desert. Some sympathy is expressed on behalf of house proprietors and tradesmen there, but stern justice must be done, and the dictates of economy and wishes of the dwellers in the "Ditch" have to be obeyed. With theclose of the present Simla season the glory will depart from Olympus, and the sunshine in which the gods and demigods have hitherto basked will settle hereafter on the muddy waters of the Hooghly. Calcutta will be thepermanent home of the Viceroy and his Council, and although his Excellency may be permitted to take an occasional holiday to the hills or the seaside, the heads of Departments and their offices are to remain in the vicinity of charming Chowringhee. Calcutta has made up its mind to this, and so the matter is settled.

Bombay, however, has also made up its mind, but, whilst consenting to the abolition of Simla, it sees that Bombay with a temporary retreat to Poona must be the coming capital of India. Everything in the way of pro. gress and enlightenment is gravitating towards the Western Presidency. What the Government of India requires is not touch with Bengal opinion, but with "healthy English opinion," and this is only to be found at Bombay, which is so many miles nearer to England than Calcutta.

Madras being, perhaps, too much occupied with its own Presidency scandals has not had time to decide the question for itself. It does not, however, think that either Bombay or Calcutta should have the Viceroy to itself. Can he not spend part of the year in Madras—say at Octacamund? His presence in the Southern Presidency might help to make the confusion there now a little less confounded, and might develop the Mysore gold-fields more rapidly in the interests of the speculators or shareholders.

The Press of the North-West Provinces laughs the ideas of Calcutta to scorn as exhibiting "radical absurdity" or "incipient apoplexy." The Pioneer supposes an intelligent foreigner-the Baron Hubner of the day-visiting the country twenty years hence and finding the Government permanently located at Calcutta:-

"A more demented class than these Indian officials"—we may fancy him writing—"it would be impossible to find on the surface of the earth. The spirit which called them in years past to actaof devotion and fortitude has betrayed them now into a fantastic and culpable self-sacrifice. With some of the finest climates in the world and its fairest spots, I think to see them now, lying in the world and its fairest spots, I think to see them now, lying in places within eyesight, everywhere within a few hours' reach, the work being all carried on in the repressive, deadening atmosphere of the plains below. And this because of the querulous murmurs of a small band of business and professional men, who are to this day too much occupied with their concerns to come into perceptible contact with the Government. It is easy to see that a Government which neglects its own interests cannot be trusted with those of the nation.

The same paper points out that "a Government in Calcutta brought British rule in India to the verge of ruin; a Government in the North of India saved it."

It need hardly be said that the Punjab fully endorses the views of the North-West. 'The Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore thinks that the monster meeting at Calcutta was " an admirable expedient for enlivening the monotony of July in that pleasant capital, and altogether the whole affair was highly creditable to the energy of the promoters. "But," it adds, with a brevity of warning, if not of wit, "Calcutta will be none the better for it all."

The Native Press makes objections of its own according to its own feelings. At the Calcutta meeting certain eminent Balús were not invited to the platform: "Where are they?' was asked, and asked in vain." number of schoolboys occupied the seats from an early hour "obliging the adult generation to stand on their legs at the sides and in the distance. And so," says the Reis and Rayet, "the demonstration was by no means impressive. There was no abstinence from effort, only the effort misguided."

Thus speaks public opinion in India. Each representative thereof hears the bell clink as he wishes it to clink. And with this proof of the value and unanimity of such opinion need it be wondered at that there is mockery and laughter on Olympus, and that each official deity, whose pleasure there was for the moment threatened, turns again to Hebe for the nectar, and murmurs happily, "Jy suis et J'y reste?"

A DICTIONARY OF ISLAM.

Being a Cyclopædia of the Doctrines, Rites, Geremonies, and Customs, together with the Technical and Theological Terms, of the Muhammadan Religion.

THOMAS PATRICK HUGHES, B.D. M.R.A.S.

Fellow of the Punjab University, Missionary of the Church Missionary Society, Peshawur, Afghanistan.

"We have at last obtained a real encyclopedia of the Mul ummadan Religion, and we can only hope that the sterling value of the result of so much labour and study will receive its well-merited recognition."—Literary Wo. id.

"An excellent service has been rendered by Mr. Hughes in compiling this Dictionary of Islam to all those who have dealings with Moslems, Islam, or the literature of the Arabs; and the volume before us, as the work of one man, is a marvel of industry, and fairly to be churacterised as a cyclopedia of the doctrines, rites, ceremonies, and customs; together with the technical and theological terms of the Muhammedan religion."—Salurday Review.

"Mr. Hughos' competency for his task can fully be judged only by those as familiar with Muhammadanism as he is himself. He indicates great care and sound judgment. . . . We have read many of its articles with great interest."—British Quarterly Review.

"The work is unique of its kind, and invaluable to all who live in, or love the East."—Daily Telegraph.

"In the 750 pages of his present work he gives an exact explanation of every term, action, and idea of the Mussalman faith, the information being in every case taken from the most esteemed Muhammadan sources, with the comments of the best European scholars.... This most useful work will be of undoubted value to he student of comparative religion."—Homeward Mail.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

A MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the wisness.

known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally decile and consorvative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Purliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our follow-subjects.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1886.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 3rd August; from Allahabad to the 1st August; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 31st July.

THE Viceroy, on his cold weather tour, will probably keep to the railway from Umballa to Karachi, halting at some important places en route. From Karachi he will go by steamer to Broach and thence by rail to Baroda; thereafter to Bombay and onward to Hyderabad.

THE Government of India has sanctioned a small expenditure with a view to experimental boring for petroleum being carried out at Rawul Pindi. For many years the Rawul Pindi barracks were lighted with crude petroleum obtained in the neighbourhood, but the supply has recently

THE Commander-in-Chief will leave Simla early in October, marching through the hills to Dharmsala, Dalhousie, and Bukloh, to see the new Goorkha battalions. His Excellency will afterwards visit Dehra Dun with a similar purpose in view.

THE Indian Articles of War have been specially extended to the Frontier posts of Sibi, Thul Chotiala, and the Fort of Pishin.

THE rails of the Bolan Railway were laid into Quetta on the 25th inst.

It is believed that the difficulty about the Afghan frontier delimitation will be settled by a compromise, under which Russia will yield all Khoja-Saleh in return for

It is reported from Nepal that the Indian corn crop is fair, but that the rice crop is backward and requires more rain.

It is expected that the new line of railway from Lucknow to Sitapur will be ready for traffic by November next, and that the opening ceremony will be performed by the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir A. Lyail.

BUMOUR has it that Mr. Cordery, who is now on leave, will not return to the Residency at Hyderabad, and that Colonel Ross will be confirmed in the appointment of Resident.

COLONEL NEWMARCH has been appointed Secretary in the Military Department, and Colonel Collen, Accountant-

COLONEL SANFORD, the Inspector-General of Military Works, does not return to India for some time, having been placed on special duty for three months by the India Office.

Mr. R. Hardie, Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank of Bengal, has returned from Simla. Mr. Cruickshank reverts to the post of Deputy Secretary, and Mr. W. Westland takes leave to England for three months.

BISHOP MEURIN has left Bombay for Rome in obedience to a summons from the Vatican.

FORMAL notification of the rendition of the cantonment of Morar to the Gwalior State has been made in the Gazette of India.

THE Viceroy contemplates visiting Gwalior in November to instal the young Prince on the gadi.

THE Japanese officers who were deputed by their Government to study the Indian military system have made five days' stay in Bombay, where they visited all places of interest.

probably be largely increased, and lit will be devoted to educational purposes by founding St. Barbe Scholarships.

THE Government of India has decided that bonuses are liable to the Income-tax under the seventh section of the Act.

A QUESTION has arisen in Calcutta as to the liability of indigo planters to pay income-tax. Messrs. Woodroffe and Evans were consulted, and they have expressed the opinion that the income derived from the growing of indigo is derived from "agriculture," within the meaning of that word in section 5b (1), and is therefore exempt from income-tax, whether the indigo be grown under the Zerait, Assanuwar, or Khuskie systems.

THE Brigade commands in Burma have been rearranged, General Low now commanding the brigade at Mandalay, and General Anderson that in the Yemethen district.

THE latest Burma news is that Sir Charles Bernard has returned from his tour up the Chindin Valley to Manda-General Low has been sent to Minhla to conduct operations in that district, which is still much disturbed. From Bhamo it is reported that all is quiet on the frontier, and that the Ka-Chin tribesmen are being induced to work on the local roads, though they have never before been known to accept labour of this kind.

CAPTAIN WILBRAHAM, of the Somersotshire Regiment, has died of his wounds at Mandalay, and Lieutenant Beaver, of the 4th Bengal Infantry, who was recently recommended for the Victoria Cross, has succumbed to fever at Tammu. There is much sickness amongst our troops at Mandalay.

Hotes of the Week.

THAT Mr. J. M. Maclean should have been selected to second the Address on the opening of Parliament is a fact upon which Anglo-Indians may congratulate themselves. There is some hope now that when Indian affairs come before the House there will be one honourable member who, understanding them, can give his hearers the benefit of his counsel and opinion, derived from actual experience, and will, therefore, be listened to. If the other Anglo-Indian members, Sir Richard Temple, Sir Roper Lethbridge and Mr. Jennings, determine that questions affecting India shall not be pooh-poohed or lost eight of, matters, so far as that country is concerned, will not be in the hopeless deadlock of neglect to which they are consigned Session after Session now.

THE official announcement that the Afghan Boundary Commission had not been withdrawn, but that the mission would return to India this winter, has given rise to many curious speculations and assertions. It is certain that unless there is a start made towards India immediately, the passes will be closed, and the way of the Mission blocked altogether. Considerable discontent reigns amongst the Indian native soldiery in consequence of the delay which has already taken place in permitting them to return to their homes and families, and this discontent is likely to be increased if this delay be prolonged. But Russia is evidently determined to throw fresh difficulties in the way of frontier boundary settlement, and so rumour declares that fresh troubles are gathering. There is a small fertile belt of country of a few miles extent which Russia wants; it has been in the possession of Afghanistan for thirty-seven years, but Russia wants it now, and the question is—Shall she have it? Most Englishmen who do not trouble themselves about Indian matters will possibly say—"Certainly; the territory is not worth fighting for." But, unfortunately, the Ameer of Afghanistan thinks that it is, and is under the impression that we are bound to support him with men, arms, and money in case of a Russian advance.

NEARLY Rs. 4,000 have already been subscribed in Ran-goon to the St. Barbe Memorial Fund. The sum will stood in Eugland we may be involved in a war beyond our Indian frontier on the North-West. It will be, indeed, lamentable if such be the case-lamentable for our prestige-lamentable for our pockets. But Russian diplomatists see that by perpetually keeping up an Afghanistan "raw" in the side of England, there is always a Russian opportunity to advance upon fields of new territory and to reap harvests where Bussia has sown no seeds but those of disquiet and disturbance. If the Bear can keep the Lion fully employed in guarding an imaginary frontier near the Oxus, the Bear can play amongst the honey hives of Asia Minor and Armenia to the full extent of its paws. But it is to be hoped that the Lion will not again be fooled in this way. Past lessons ought to have some warning for the future now.

Bombay appears to be very indignant at Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji claiming to represent India in England. Forty millions of the Queen's Mahomedan subjects would decline, it is said, to be represented by a fire worshipper. "Men like Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji," adds the Bombay Gazette, "have valuable work at hand in India if they would only But there is something almost ludicrous in an elderly Parsee gentleman starting off for London to do battle after the manner of Don Quixote on behalf of the Irish nation, and promising the blessings of five millions of Irishmen if the electors of St. Giles and the adjacent quarters would only gratify his individual ambition by elevating him into the House of Commons.

THE Hindus decline also to take advantage of Parsee advocacy on their behalf. Mr. Malabari is a Parsee gentleman who considers that his mission is to reform the Hindu marriage laws, especially with regard to infant marriages, and he has been asking the opinions of several English officials as to his chance of success. The Hon. J. Scott, of Bombay, gives him this consolatory informa-

The leaders of the Hindu community must themselves effect Hindu social reform. But if you wait till individual Hindus take up and carry through singlehanded, without outside aid, any great change in their social system, you will realise the fable of the countryman who sat by the river bank and waited for the stream to run dry before he crossed over to the other side.

The Bombay press says that Mr. Malabari's scheme is the right reform, but that he himself is the wrong reformer, and this is true, if not complimentary.

It is reported from Simla that "besides Lord Northbrook's memorandum another one by Sir Henry Maine has been discovered advocating the annual move of the Government to the hills." This is likely enough. Sir Henry Maine's health was not of the best in Calcutta, and he shared in Sir John Lawrence's detestation of the place. The wonder which has been felt is that the economic Lord Northbrook should have approved of a migration costing many lacs of rapees, and no return to show " per contra.

THE Bombay papers are now singing the virtues of Poona. The Times of India says:-"At Poona there is ample space for building public offices and a stately palace for the Vicercy. At Poona he would be near the great Princes of India. At Poona he would be nearer Europe, and his sea communication with the frontier could never be interrupted." And then comes this remarkable conclusion:
"But it is mere waste of words to argue against Simla." And we think it is.

Not because no arguments can be found, but because it is too late now to argue, for, as the Bombay paper says, "money has been spent on building public offices there, and it would be folly for Government to desert them."

The Government of India have sanctioned the grant of a gratuity of three months' military pay of his rank to Lieutenant J. H. de B. Harrs, 2nd Battalion the Liverpool Regiment, on account of the wounds received by him in an encounter with dacoits near Myingyan, Upper Burma, in February last.

Correspondence.

THE ANNEXATION OF BURMA.

TO THE EDITOR

Sir,-I wish to say a few plain words on the above question with reference to the undermentioned extract from your issue of

"The Times correspondent, telegraphing from Calcutta yesterday, gives his opinion that the employment of a large force of cavalry is 'the most satisfactory feature of the plan' drawn out for the pacification of Burma in October next. Lieutenant-General Gloag, whose experience of Burma is wide, will hardly that nine. In a latter addressed to the Broad Arrens. ueneral Gloag, whose experience of Burma is wide, will hardly endorse that view. In a letter addressed to the Broad Arrow last aturday he advocates, instead of ho uses such as the Indian Cavalry will be mounted upon, the employment of Lhan, Thibb, and Pegu ponies, who 'can carry eleven stone over a three-foot turf wall and a ditch five foot wide combined, and who are very hardy, and require no shoes.' There would be no fear of the paralytic disease Kumri attacking these animals as it is reported to have done the cavalry horses." o have done the cavalry horses.

I think it one of the worst features in the present Burma muddle that Indian or any other horses should be imported into Burma for Cavalry, or for any other branch—and I say this advisedly after very great experience—an experience that was duly acknowledged by General Sir Neville Chamberlain, who was Commanding-in-Chief at Madras, where I was commanding, as a branch colored to Boxel Artillary in Pursus in 1978, 700 Commanding-in-Chief at Madras, where I was commanding, as a brevet-colonel, the Royal Artillery in Burma in 1878-79-80, by refusing to let me leave that country, to take up a higher command to which my promotion to regimental colonel in the Royal Artillery had entitled me, and whereby I was a very considerable loser as far as money was concerned. His words were—I write from memory, so he will excuse me, I daresay, if I make any slight error in the quotation:—"Colonel Gloag's experience of Burma and Burmese affairs makes it expedient on public grounds, in view of the present prospect of disturbances there (1878-79), that he should remain for the present in that country."

that he should remain for the present in that country."

General Sir Frederick Haines, another Commander-in-Chief, owing to repeated representations from myself, and the best veterinary surgeons, ordered the removal of all artillery horses from Burma on account of this disease of the loins, called "Kumri," having attacked and destroyed so many of them. My simple statement need not stand unsupported. There remains on record, I believe, as a reason why they had been kept in Burma so long and at so great an expense, a statement that "the moral effect of a Horse Field Battery on the Burman mind was great." This may have been so, but then in case something stronger than latent and ineffectual moral force was required, the Battery could not have taken the field with more than two guns, Battery could not have taken the field with more than two guns, Battery could not have taken the field with more than two guns, and two waggons, with a store cart, field forge, and a spare gun-carriage, the last three having only two horses a-piece. Let the official correspondence be consulted, and the experience of 1824, 1852, and up to 1880, when, I think, all horses were withdrawn, and the numbers that died and were destroyed on account of "Kumri" be published; and let it be remembered that each horse sent to Burma cost from £130 to £140 when landed in that country. So much for the horse question, from my point of view.

Regarding annexation, General Horace Browne, Sir C. H. Aitchison, Mr. St. Barbe, Mr. Robert Phayre (the two last since shot by Dacoits), and myself, were all against annexation. But we were in favour of a British Resident at Mandalay, strongly supported, and not left as was Mr. Shaw, who never strongly supported, and not left as was Mr. Shaw, who never saw any official except on rare occasions, and could not see the King becaus: he would not, very properly, condescend to take off his shoes and prostrate himself in his umbilical region before the "golden foot," and who did not, month after month, once leave the filthy precincts of the tumble-down building called "a Residency," on the banks of an equally filthy stream called the "Schwetachong." Such a style was only contemplated to do what it actually did, "bring the Resident's position into contempt," for he could not go out because he was ashamed to do so, as he was called "Kullah," which means there what the lower classes of Europeans in India mean when they callinatives nigners. so, as he was called "Kullah," which means there what the lower classes of Europeans in India mean when they call Natives niggers. In another communication, if you will kindly permit me, I will condense a few more facts, which I think the public might desire to know at the present juncture.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

A. R. Gloag, Lieut.-General,

Late Commanding R.A., B.B.D.

It appears that the reorganisation of the Sappers and Miners, Bengal and Bombay, ordered by Her Majesty's Government in December last has not yet been carried into effect. Madras is to the fore on this occasion, as the re-organisation of the Madras Companies has been already carried out.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE MINERAL WEALTH OF BURMA.

(Bombay Gazette.)

A rather embittered controversy has broken out between the Rangoon Gazette and the Pioneer on the subject of the leasing of the ruby mines in Upper Burma. As a quarrel there is nothing in it to interest outsiders; as a help to the elucidation of a matter of some interest to Burma which has lain in obscurity for some time past it is not undeserving of attent on. The controversy, at all events, has ended well. It has led to a distinct disavowal of the report that a Krench syndicate were at the back of an attempt by a well-known London jeweller to obtain a concession of the mines. Not only is there no Frenchman in the case, but at all events, as recently as the 21st of last month, when Lord Randolph Churchill called attention to it during the debate on the Indian Budget, the Under Secretary for India was able to say that no arrangement had been made with a French syndicate, but an arrangement with Messrs. Streeter was under consideration. Whether or not the arrangement has been completed since does not appear. The India Office may have been dissuaded from closing with the New Bond-street jeweller and his friends by the strong condemnation which Lord Randolph Churchill passed upon the idea of allowing either the petroleum springs or the ruby mines of Upper Burma to pass out of the hands of the Government of India. So far as the quarrel between the Rangoon paper of India. So far as the quarrel between the Rangoon paper and the Pioneer is concerned, "Brother, brother, we are both in the wrong" is the most that either of them can say. The Pioneer was wrong in asserting that the Streeter syndicate had obtained the concession; and the Rangoon Gazette was wrong in asserting that a French syndicate was at the back of the negotiations. Apparently the Pioneer was equally wrong in alleging that the French syndicate was represented in the negotiations, not by the New Bond-street jeweiler and his friends, but by a local firm at once identified by the Rangoon paper as Messrs. Gillande.s, Arbuthnot and Co., for the local representative of that firm has authorised the announcement that the report that his firm ever have been in league with the French or any other foreign interest is absolutely devoid of foundation. After this it will seem not unreasonable to hope that since the British occupation there never has been any real danger of a surreptitious intervention of unreasonable to hope that since the British occupation there never has been any real danger of a surreptitious intervention of French speculators in the mining interests of Upper Burma. Any toleration of an enterprise of that kind would be inexcusable. If there was anything which more than Theebaw's hostility and his lawless disregard of his obligations to the British Government and its subjects forced us to occupy his country, it was the quasi-commercial intrigues which threatened, by means of mining, railway, and banking concessions, to introduce French influence on the Irrawaddy. We have disposed of danger thus threatened, and we shall not allow it to be brought even remotely in prospect by permitting Frenchmen to acquire, by a process of ingenious deception, an interest in the to acquire, by a process of ingenious deception, an interest in the country which we would not tolerate in Theebaw's time. Upon that point public opinion will be absolute and unwavering. that point public opinion will be absolute and unwavering. The Government, indeed, must be urged to act circumspectly in this matter. The earth oil wealth of Upper Burma is large, and the monopoly in it which the Burmese Government exercised in the late reign brought in a revenue which was large even when managed by a corrupt and incapable administration, and which under more careful regulation may become an important item in the revenue of the province. The ruby mines, though not of the fabulous wealth this imaginative publicists have deemed them to be, are at all events valuable enough to have tempted the cupidity of capitalists far imaginative publicists have deemed them to be, are at all events valuable enough to have tempted the cupidity of capitalists far and near, and they must not be disposed of to the first comer and in forgetfulness of the fact that the Government hold them in a trust which ought to be discharged faithfully and on calculation. This is not the time to part with any rights that the State enjoys in Burma, and until the province is settled the less the Government think about parting with resources of which it has not ascertained the value the better. The alarm about French intriguing may have a good or a bad foundation, but we cannot be unmindful of the service that has been done by those who have raised it, and who by raising it have given an opportunity have raised it, and who by raising it have given an opportunity for protesting in advance against an alienation of State rights without due regard to State interests.

> KASHMIR. (Pioneer.)

A rumour prevails that Dewan Luchman Dass is to be recalled to the Ministership. Luchman Dass is known to be very much the ablest of Kashmir officials, and his recall to power just as the Maharaja has reached Srinagar would be an event of good augury for the State. Inasmuch, however, as His Highness has never been personally well disposed to him, the step has always seemed more desirable than likely; but of late the politics of the ralace have taken a turn which makes our correspondent's information seem probable enough. The story in full is rather an intricate one; but an outline of it will give a good idea of the tangle of interests and influences in the policy of the State. Sirdar Rup Singh, a man of good family and son of an old official of the State, was at the time of the recent installation of the Maharajah appointed Governor of Jummoo. Besides being generally spoken of as a good officer, he is a man of sturdy independent character; and for this reason that the state large with Sorrel Singh, the naturally came into conflict before long with Sawal Singh, the naturally came into conflict before long with Sawal Singh, the Maharajah's private sorcerer and household favourite. He resisted some extortion of Sawal Singh, who promptly went to the Maharajah, declaring that he or Rup Singh must go. The matter was simmering on for some time, but at last it ended in the natural way by the dismissal of Rup Singh from the Governorship. Dewan Thakur Dass, an aged official, almost sightless, and quite past work, who had been removed from the post when Rup Singh was appointed, on account of his infirmities, was chosen to succeed him. But there is some point in every State chosen to succeed him. But there is some point in every State beyond which autocratic power cannot go, and it seems here to have been reached by this act. The Prince Ram Singh, brother of the Maharajah, who had been chosen to remain behind during the summer at Jummoo declined to act with such a Governor as the summer at Jummoo declined to act with such a Governor as Thakur Dass, and demanded Sirdar Rup Singh. And more, Babu Nilumber Mookerji, taking the side of the Prince, is said to have expressly told the Maharajah that in case of Rup Singh's dismissal he would resign at once. This action appears to be greatly to Babu Nilumber's credit, as he has hitherto been entirely with the Maharajah, and so to a certain extent against the Prince. We may get a fair idea of the rights of the case when so close and the control of the case when the case when the control of the case when the ca adherent has felt bound to dissever himself from his master at the risk of all his own prospects. Babu Nilumber for the last six months has been everything in State affairs, as the creature Sawal Singh has been in Court and private matters. How the conflict of these two influences has ended we have not heard; but our correspondent's telegram would seem to indicate a probability that the Finance Minister has been worsted and has resigned, and that Luchman Dass has been sent for in his stead. That in itself would be a satisfactory conclusion enough; but the circumstances which have led to it can hardly be considered in the same light, and it remains to be seen whether in any case Dewan Luchman Dass would care to take office, or whether, like Anant Ram and others, he would decline to be associated with the present régime.

THE NEW SECRETARY FOR INDIA. (Bombay Gazette.)

The circumstances under which Sir Richard Cross enters upon the India Office do him no discredit, but they reflect very unfavourably upon those who are responsible for them. Unless at this distance we altogether misread the incident the India Office has been given to Sir Richard Cross not because of any belief that Sir Richard Cross was the best man for the India Office, but because it was necessary to find a portfolio for him. The office which in two administrations he had filled with a success that won the approval of opponents no less than of friends, had won the approval of opponents he less than of thems, had been given to a gentleman new to office, and almost new to Parliament. The "best Home Secretary we have ever had," to quote a Radical eulogist of his factory legislation, had been discarded in favour of a new comer of whom nothing could be more pertinently asked than the time-honoured of the company of the c "fly-in-the-amber" question. India may fairly take the new Secretary of State at a higher estimate than Lord Randolph Churchill's; nevertheless that pugnacious nobleman's attempt to get rid of him altogether has given his ultimate nomination to the India Office the appearance of a thrusting into place, and has the India Office the appearance of a thrusting into place, and has made it difficult for the people most interested in the selection to do full justice to him. It will be well, however, for the Indian public to judge Sir Richard Cross rather by his work in the responsible office that he has twice filled than by the efforts of a masterful colleague to prove that he is fit for no office at all. We cannot disregard, even at Lord Randolph's bidding, the fact that the work of the Home Department in Lord Beaconsfield's Administration, and the legislation of Lord Beaconsfield's Home Secretary, were less subjected to criticism than the work and the legislation of any member of the Cabinet. Mr. Cross had no other obvious claims to office in 1874 than those which a man of shrewdness and industry could prethan those which a man of shrewdness and industry could present. But Mr. Disraeli was a shrewd judge of character, and though Lord Randolph Churchill happened to exist at the time, and even to have a seat in Parliament, the new Premier found his Home Secretary in the plain business-like Lancashire member. Until the day when, six years later, Mr. Cross brought in a Bill for buying up at a rather too generous rate the property of the London water companies, his record was absolutely free from failure. He had carried through Parliament a measure for consolidating and amending the Factory Acts, of which the political economist, Mr. Stanley Jevons, declared that it was "one of the brightest achievements of legislation in this crany other country"; he had framed an Act which leads to a perceptible improvement in the dwellings of the poor in the large towns; he tackled the vexed question of the liquor laws, and brought about a settlement of it which has not since needed to be disturbed. He did more than any individual member of the Government to give effect to Mr. Disraeli's Sanitas sanitatum omnia sanitas principle, and he provided the Conservatives with a justification such as they had never had before for the assertion that they were as intent as their opponents upon improving the condition of the people.

He has a faculty for work which none of his recent predecessors, at all events, have excelled, and a persistency and pluck which will help him to overcome many difficulties. His antecedents strongly discourage the idea that he will be content with a perfunctory discharge of the duties of his office. The most energetic of Home Secretaries is not likely to be a perfunctory Secretary of State for India. He is more likely to make than to wait for opportunity, and having made them he may be trusted to turn them to good account. No one in the new Administration has shown more readiness for attacking real grievances, and he may be trusted to deal with them with the shrewd practical instincts of a man of business. It will be noticed that he is a Lancashire man, and that all his political connections have been with that county. This fact will discourage the hope that here and there finds expression in India of a reimposition of the import duties. But Lancashire, if it does not believe in the import duties, believes in the development of the Indian railways, and it is an article of its faith that Lancashire cannot prosper while India is poor. Let Sir Richard Cross, for his constituents' sake at all events, bear that in mind, and his career at the India Office will be a sufficient answer to the dominnering clique who have endeavoured, happily without success, to deprive the country of a continuation of services which in the past have been of substantial value to the nation.

THE DECLINE OF CALCUTTA. (Pioneer)

Perhaps the most important act of Lord Lawrence's Viceroyalty was his decision to break with the traditions of governing India from Calcutta. The Mutinies of 1857 had furnished bloody proof of the danger of making that remote city the centre of the Indian Empire. To that system was by common consent attributed the blindness which facilitated the great catastrophe. That it should be reserved to Lord Lawrence to scatter in 1864 to the four winds so much of the old tradition as still lingered on after 1857 was the logical and inevitable issue of the circumstances in which he came to India. If a Government in Calcutta had brought British rule in India to the verge of ruin, a Government in the North of India had saved it. But when Lord Lawrence arrived in India there stilllingered in the country anuwillingness fairly to face the new position. Long associations connected with Calcutta and deeply planted in the minds of many still in power even threatened a renewal of past blunders, and Lord Lawrence settled the question with characteristic decision. He resolved to put an end once and for all to the habit of regarding Calcutta as the permanent seat of the Government of India because to that habit was due a system which had brought us almost to ruin. He was too much penetrated with the sense of the dangers of the old system to play with such a vital question. To the energy of his measures he owed probably not a little of his temporary unpopularity. He made little count of the old-school Bengal Civilians; he recognised no peculiar political wisdom in Englishmen habitually resident in or about Calcutta; he surrounded himself largely with advisers from other parts of India. Since 1864 the current of events has more and more confirmed the wisdom of that great Viceroy's action. The centre not only of political but of commercial life has drifted further than the old capital. A speaker at the Calcutta meeting had to go as far back as 1852, and to appeal to an authority so antiquated as Sir Frederick Halliday, to prove that Ca

THE HOME CHARGES. (Times of India.

It is very well for a scientific mathematician when he sees a tub leaking to say that the flow of water is due to a law of Hydronamics, but the ordinary man would still adhere to the conclusion that the hole in the bottom had a great deal to do with the leakage. The Home charges are the big hole in the tub of Indian Finance. It can never be entirely bunged up; but it might be made considerably smaller. Until it had been made smaller, it was a suicidal policy to remit taxes and to sacrifice revenue to party politics. The Government of India now point out the difficulties in the way of additional taxation, but the Treasury at home naively remark:—"These disadvantageous circumstances are, and have long been, well known to every one who is conversant with Indian finance." It surely does not require the united wisdom of the Government of India to discover that it is extremely difficult to invent and raise new taxes. Experience, it is said, teaches even fools, but it requires many a sharp lesson to make an impression. We wonder if the Government of India will ever learn that it is extremely dangerous to sacrifice any revenue. Sir Charles Trevelyan abolished the income tax, and his successor had to face a deficit of two millions. Sir Richard Temple was compelled again to introduce the incometax, and, during his tenure of office, there was a net surplus of golden propensity had begun; deficits were an evil of the past, and Lord Northbrook abolished the incometax. The ink on the resolution doing away with direct taxation was hardly dry when the land was smitten with famine, and a surplus was turned into a deficit of more than four millions. Sir John Strachey had to impose a licence-tax. For a little time there was a small equilibrium. Then India was plunged into the Afghan War, and once more deficits became the order of the day. Clouds werefollowed by a brief gleam of sunshine. There was a small surplus, and, instead of it being used to reduce debt and so the Home charges, it was made an excuse for sacrificing revenue to please a strong political section at home. During Major Baring's tenure of office we time after time raised our voice against the management of the Imperial finance and the criminal abandonment of sources of income, but a philanthropist Viceroy could do no wrong. The day of deficit was often foretold. The Finance Minister declared that it was only the pessimist prophecy or irresponsible writers. The day of reckoning has come. But unfortunately those most to blame for the present state of

It would, however, be a grave misfortune if the Government of India came to the comforting conclusion that the present unsatisfactory state of finance is due to no fault of theirs, and is beyond their power to remedy. The Government of India have done wisely to appoint a Finance Commission, but a few petty savings in India will not suffice. The Military and Public Works-expenditure must be brought within more reasonable limits. But, above all, the expenditure in England which exhausts remittances from England and necessitates the drawing of Gouncilbills must be reduced to a minimum. A committee of financiers and economists ought to be appointed in England to inquire into the best way of remitting the tribute from India to England. At present it is impossible for the banker and trader to have the slightest clue as to the principle on which the India Office conduct their transactions. It also might be held to be worthy of inquiry whether it would moderate the fluctuation in the rate of exchange if the Indian Government were to remit bankers' bills, if they could arrange for the deposit of securities by the banks, and the Secretary for India were to sell Councilbills, according as either of these expedients might be less likely at the moment to depress the rate of exchange. This is a difficult problem on which Mr. Wilson might have thrown some light, but it would be absurd to ask the Hon. Sir Auckland Colvin to discuss it, because he is not an economist nor a business man, nor a financier. Depreciation in the price of silver, extravagance in expenditure, reckless remittance of taxes to suit party politics, total absence of a consistent and scientific policy of finance, are the main causes of the present grave crisis in Indian.

CEYLON TEA IN ENGLAND.

(Ceylon Observer.)

It is impossible to read, without some feeling of alarm, the remarks made by our London Correspondent in his last letter relative to the quality of the island tea now being vended in London. It has been repeatedly pointed out how essential it is that our planters should endeavour to secure quality and not quantity alone in the out-turn of their estates. We believe that that caution has been taken well to heart, and whatever may be said of the complaints from Mincing-lane, the faults referred to in our London Letter are referable, not to any shortcomings on this side, but to the conditions which prevail on the other side of the water. But it is of comparatively slight importance with whom the blame rests that so-called "Ceylon" teas of such markedly inferior quality are supplied to the English consumers. The fact remains, and it is one which, if not grappled with, must largely and seriously affect the prosperity of our growing industry.

We were well prepared to hear that ordinary retailers in London and other English cities and towns resorted to discreditable means for lowering the standard of Ceylon teas sold by them in accordance with their practice with so many other articles of consumption; but we were, until recently, quite unprepared to hear other accordances of a similar character brought against firms of known reputation who have made the supply of such teas their speciality.

and have boasted of the good they were doing to our planters and our young but promising staple planting industry. It is dangerous, indeed, to find our enemies among those of "our own household." If we cannot rely upon such men to deal honourably, how little can we feel reliance or expect higher dealing among the class of retailers to whom we have just referred? We shall have to consider in such a case how we may best be assured against a course, the result of which can only be to arrest and destroy that appreciation of our island teas which has so grown within the last few years in England. We thought the question, "Where can we be sure of obtaining pure Ceylon tea?" had been fully and satisfactorily answered, and it is most regrettable to find that our English friends constantly discover that their reliance has been misplaced. It will be of no avail to go on largely increasing the area of the cultivation of tea in this island if its reputation is ultimately to sink in the consuming countries to the level of that of those inferior growths so largely of late years imported from China. We have all seen the results of such exports from the last-named country. We have seen the China tea exports fall off in quantity year by year until there seem to be strong signs that the great tea trade of the celestial Empire is permanently on the wave. There is no room to doubt but that this has been due to the competition of the superior qualities hitherto furnished from the tea-producing districts of India. In that competition Ceylon is now sharing, and so successfully that even India herself is feeling the pinch of it. Are we to go back from that position? Manifestly we must do so, if complaints such as are now made to us from consumers at home are allowed to continue. It is vital to the best interests of this colony to means should at once be considered and adopted for checking the dishonesty or carelessness of those by whom our teas are distributed in England.

"TOM-TOM" POLITICS. (Bengal Times.)

Years, many years ago, we invented a word—Baboodom—and used it constantly, till it became fairly adopted into Indian journalism. It is comprehensive, suggestive, meditates no offence to mind, class, or morals, and is fairly understood. We see our term "tom-tom" politics stands as good a chance of being adopted for use. Before we proceed to vindicate it from a harge of ungenerosity, let us explain what we mean by it, hough we fear our explanation will be rather roundabout. Patriotism and politics are so indissolubly connected in a Native's mind—are identified so clearly as, if not one and the same, are ditto differing—that he has got to regard them as convertible terms. A sharp Babooling, who has crossed the Pons asinorum, has committed to heart the Traveller, has dipped into Shake speare, Milton, Pope; has acquired a smattering of history, and might, perhaps, be able to distinguish between Japan and Madagascar on a map; smiles complacently, as he reads in Native-edited papers, how mass meetings are media through which ignorant rusticity is gradually developing into political enlightenment and buselies between the papers. ignorant rusticity is gradually developing into political entightenment, and bucolic obtusity awakening to a notion that a people rescued from serfdom by Great Britain has suddenly vivified into consciousness, that its political rights are unrecognised by the world generally, and by British legislators in particular. As he lazily puffs his hookah, or, mayhap, a fearful cigar he has been persuaded to believe is a Manilla, and reclines indolently on a tucktaposh among bolsters that offer colonisation to many generations of an annulose family we may cover under the generic appellations of ananulose family, we may cover under the generic appella-tion of Howard, he feels every inch a patriot, and necessarily a politician, because, in the columns of the Kala Admi, a paper in which he has enunciated certain flagitious principles after apwhich he has enunciated certain flagitious principles after approved Chartist models—conveyed from a worm-eaten serial of early eighteenth-century literary poison—he has styled India "our beloved and oppressed mother, from whose overflowing bosom the ungrateful European adventurer has derived his nourishment, waxing fat in his day and generation, while his Aryan brother, with Seraphic meekness, has yielded him his inheritance in the soil of his forefathers." Having thus given vent to his sentiments which after all are not his own he feels that to his sentiments, which, after all, are not his own, he feels that he has fired a volley into the detested intruder on his inheritance—has, in an indirect way, shaken the foundations of the British Empire in India, and therefore deserves well of his country. This Babooling, having convened three mass meetings, will serve our purpose to illustrate how Aryanism professes to be educated through the gathering of people in heavy masses. Many devices are resorted to for bringing about a so-called mass meeting. From among several popular dodges we select one. It is first necessary to impress village gossips with an idea that some great honour has befallen their Zemindar, he having been asked by Government direct to obtain from sensible individuals an expression of opinion on a registry of subjects to be discontinuous. asked by Government direct to obtain from sensible individuals an expression of opinion on a variety of subjects to be discussed at a place and on a date indicated. Spoken of with an air of mystery, the trap succeeds; crowds flock to inquire, ryots gather in shoals, and then a trysting-place is arranged, flags, sweets, music (theatrical nymphs even in some places), recreation, and general "tomasha" are lavishly provided, and, of course, a mob loyally collects at the appointed rendezvous, about fifteensixteenths as learned on their objects and reasons for assembling as an unborn babe. Our Babooling and people of, his class know to a fraction to what extent all minor drilling agencies have been at work, and how the crowd, at a given signal, will cry or laugh, shout or be silent. Then a pundit is incited to propose a resolution, which is carried by acclamation, not because its purpose or object has been explained and approved, or even because supporters understand, in a general way, that it is good for their country and their individual future. Fifty expositions would not elucidate its nature, nor is that ever required. It is enough that "mahashoi" or "Maharaj"—titles of courtesy, intimating master—is understood to desire a particular demonstration; and lo! and behold, there it is. Our Babooling, following up his success in having convened a mob miscellaneously composed, writes an account to the Kala Admi, in which he figures as that "patriot and enlightened zemindar, Bunkum Gudda Soor." He despatches telegrams, meanwhile, to several Native-edited papers, that the meeting was a magnificent success, and our literary friends of this mass meeting proclivity Soor, indite leading articles, in which they say that the patriot life of India is rousing from its torpid slumber; Native political energy is shaking itself free from the chains of despotism in which the malignant spite and irrepressible jealousy of a hungry, blood-thirsting, tyrannical bureaucracy has hitherto bound it. And this is one way of conveniung a mass gathering. Of course, accounts of such conventions, coloured out of all symmetry with fact, are sent to English papers, some few of which are weak, or ignorant enough to take for granted that all one sees published must be true; and not unfrequently write excellent, forcible homilies upon a state of affairs that exists only in their too credulous imaginations. This is about the gist, the be-all and end-all of "tom-tom" politics.

MUHAMMADAN EDUCATION.

(Englishman.)

The demand on the part of the Muhammadans for special schools is very ill-advised, but the question of special scholarships stands on a very different basis. The two principal causes which handicap Muhammadans in the race against Hindus are their comparative poverty as a class, and their system of religious training, which requires the teaching of the mosque to precede that of the school. The latter cause sends them to school late, the former takes them away early. It is not that the Muhammadan boy is duller than the Hindu boy; but he does not begin so soon, and he has not caught up his rival by the time the earlier educational honours are distributed. It is justifiable, therefore, for the Government to create special scholarships for Muhammadans at three stages of the course of education: first, to enable them to continue in English teaching schools the instruction begun in pathsalas; secondly, to carry them from the school to the college; and, thirdly, to help them to continue their studies beyond the First Arts Examination and qualify themselves for University degrees. Such a measure would, in fact, be more than justifiable. It is the bounden duty of the Government to adopt it; for it is not too much to say that here lies the kernel of the whole question. As far as primary education goes, Muhammadans are well enough off. The proportion of Muhammadans to the total population of Bengal is 31'21 per cent., and the proportion of boys of that religion to every hundred boys educated in primary schools, and 32 for lower primary schools. When it is considered that a very large part of the Mussulman population consists of the lower class Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, who were forced to accept the Koran at the point of the sword, and have never risen from the very lowest ranks of life, it must be admitted that these figures leave nothing to be desired. But the higher we go in the educational scale, the smaller becomes the percentage of the Muhammadans, until, when collegiate education is reached, we find that in ever be given is undoubtedly that of special scholarships.

Another demand very generally made on the Government by the spokesmen of the Muhammadan cause is that the medium of instruction to their sons should be, even in Lower Bengal, the Hindustani language. This is a reasonable request wherever the proportion of Mussulmans in the population is very large; but where they form only a small fraction of the inhabitants of the district, it is difficult to see how the concession could be granted without the establishment of special schools. It must be remembered that, although mainly for sentimental reasons, Muhammadans throughout Bengal desire to have their children taught in Hindustani, their real vernacular, at any rate among the lower classes, in all districts where Hindus are in a majority, is Bengali; and little good would be done by pretending to recognise as a Mussulman vernacular a language only used by the; higher classes, and by no means invariably even by them. We think, therefore, that Hindustani should be the medium of instruction only in places exclusively inhabited by Muhammadans, or where Muhammadans largely predominate. The last point to be noticed is the demand for a special standard of examination, and this can be very briefly disposed of. No Mus ulman we o has the real welfare of his people at heart would ask for such a thing. It would be a humiliating confession of inferiority, and the very purpose sought to be served would be frustrated. The letters "B.A.," "M.A.," &c., are not valuable in themselves, but for what they indicate, viz., that the educational attainments of the degree-holder have reached a certain high standard. If that standard were lowered in the case of Muhammadans, an invicious distinction would at once be drawn between Muhammadan and Hindu degree-holders, and a seal would be set on Muhammadan inferiority. The Mussulman must strive to reach the standard he has not yet attained, and all help should be given to him in the honourable struggle. The abandonment of that struggle, with a plea for exceptional indulgence, can bring nothing but dishonour, and if the plea were successful, the result would be barr in of all good to the Muhammadan cause.

RUSSIA AND INDIA. (Pioneer.)

One effect of the joint Anglo-Russian Boundary Commission in Northern Afghanistan has been to make clearer than ever the great ambition of the military party among the Czars subjects. Officers and men among the Russian troops that have been come across by Sir West Ridgeway's party make no have been come across by Sir West R.dgeway's party make no concealment that their faces are set towards Indis, and that sooner or later their battalions will move upon Afghanistan just as they have moved upon the Turkoman steppes. They regard India as an Eldorado: it is to them what Mexico was to the Spaniards in the Middle Ages, and it is useless to try and convince them that as a Land of Promise it will prove a delusion and a snare. They will not accept the picture drawn of the fiery furnace of Sind, the Punjah and Hindusten during many marks of the start, the Punjab, and Hindustan during many months of the year; they imagine that in Central Asia they have touched the extreme of heat, and that India cannot be worse than the steppes. The power of the Russian to undergo privations in bitterly cold weather, with frost and snow environing him, is something phenomeral, but tropical heat saps his strength, and he makes but a poor struggle against the sun. This has been clearly proved in Central Asia when expeditions have been sent across the steppes in the summer; and naturally the sanguine spirits who are always thinking of the invasion and conquest of India do not care to think of the climate of Eastern Afghanistan, Sind, and the Punjab proving their most deadly foe. We should perhaps make it plain that the more sensible Russians who see what Afghanistan really is do not think of an easy walk across that country to Peshawur or Pishin, as it were to morrow. They estimate the difficulties to be encountered at their full value; but they are not dismayed by them. They see, as well as our own officers see, that the impediments of a Russian army is about one-tenth of that of an army acting from India; they smile at our care of our soldiers, and are prepared to sacrifice thousands of men among the snow and ice of the Afghan hills just as Gourko did on the Balkans. They make no disguise that their weak point is that of their national finances: men they have in abundance, and they are prepared to use them freely and even recklessly, but they want money for their Central Asian Railways, as they cannot advance into Afghanistan until their communications are assured. These an io Aighanistan until their communications are assured. These ra lways should be taken as the barometer indicating the Russian policy towards Afghanistan: if work upon them is stopped, it means a rise to "fair weather" in the Central Asian political world; if sudden energy is shown in pushing on the lines with frantic haste, regardless of cost, then we may look for a stormy p.riod. The whole question is, of course, intimately linked with a Tairs in South-Eastern Europe and on the southern shore of the Back Sea: but we must not in India lose sight of the feat that Back Sea; but we must not in India lose sight of the fact that the Russian military party has saturated the army with the idea of the feasibility of an invasion of India, and that this is the so ew which will be used against England should she engage in a Except which will be used against England should she engage in a Exropean war on the side hostile to Russia. We need not be particularly alarmed on this score; all we require is to complete our frontier defences and strategical railways, and to put an army in India on such a footing that we can repel any attack by way of such a difficult country as Afghanistan. It may impose heavy financial burdens on India for the time being; but as we have so often urged it is merely insurance money—and India is certainly worth paving a large premium for worth paying a large premium for.

TEA SYNDICATES.

(Indian Tea Gazette.)

Just as our own Syndicate has decided to cease operations, Ceylon has decided to begin them, and has proposed the formation of a Syndicate to promote the sale of Ceylon Teas in new fields. That they will be successful there is little doubt, for the Ceylon Planting Industry has exhibited in many other matters a vigour and perseverance which is worthy of all praise. The planters of Ceylon are of opinion that it is not a day too soon to prepare for the twenty to thirty million pounds of exports which Ceylon is sure to show in a very few years hence. We in India should be glad on the whole to learn of this movement, for if all the Ceylon produce for the next few years finds its way to the London market, it must have an appreciable effect on the prices of Indian Tea. With seventy million lbs. of Indian Tea which will be probably placed on the market this season, there is not room for a rival like Ceylon except at an all-round lowering of prices, but inasmuch as Indian Tea has no monopoly of the home market, it behoves us, equally with Ceylon, to search for new fields. It was, we think, an entire mistake our Syndicate here deciding to cease operations, but as we fear there is no chance of that body being revived, there is the more necessity that individual owners should seek to occupy the ground opened for them, and continue the movement, even if on somewhat different lines. The fact of owners sending forward to America and Australia small parcels on their own account would not prejudice matters, but rather help the situation, for such supplies would come forward in instalments of a bulk that could be readily absorbed. We strongly recommend, therefore, owners of private estates to experiment with the American and Australian markets, in both of which places the ground has been fairly well opened up. Unless they do so, the good which the Syndicate has achieved will soon be lost, and the markets we have named, finding an uncertainty of supply, will revert back to China.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER FORCE. (Englishman.)

In times of peace the Punjab Frontier Force, it might have been urged, acts essentially as a body of military police in close subordination to the civil officers of trontier districts, while in time of war it is available like the rest of the army for military service. The frontier Militia, it might further have been remarked, is placed directly under the control of the officers of the Frontier Force, but as to its organisation, payment, and administration comes under the jurisdiction of the Punjab Government. So long as the Force has been likewise under the authority of that Government this arrangement has worked harmoniously, but it remains to be seen whether under the altered conditions of a double administration the connection will be found feasible. A divided responsibility will have been introduced, and a sense of divided interests. The Militia, being under the administrative authority of the local Government, will tend to fall under the direct control of the civil officers of the frontier districts. The maintenance of the peace on the border will be divided between officers directly responsible in the one case to the supreme, and in the other to the Local Government. The separation of military and police duties will tend to widen, and it seems almost inevitable that, in a short time, the result will be the withdrawal from the Frontier Force of its task of watch and ward of the border, and its development into a purely military body with purely military duties. The Force having gone thus far in change of character, the Punjab Government might have pointed out that it would be on the high road to losing its strictly local character. The influences desirous of such a change are very strong, and whatever hard-and-fast rules may be laid down now, the delocalization of the force will be difficult to resist. The regiments of the force will not be displeased at a change of quarters which will remove them for a time from the, to them, monotony of border service; while other corps not of the force will welcome tra

BENGAL.

THE decennial festival of the Indian Association was celebrated with great éclat in Calcutta at a meeting attended by upwards of two thousand people, at the Town Hall. A vast procession with colours flying and music, issued from the Town Hall, and paraded parts of the town. In the evening a political piece, specially composed for the occasion, called "the new epoch, was enacted before a large assembly of Natives and Europeans."

In the Statesman libel action the printer was acquitted. Sx native jurors acquitted Mr. Knight, the European jurors finding him guilty. A new trial has been ordered.

A PRIVATE prospectus has been issued for a 2½ feet gauge railway from Howrah to Tarkessur, via Bantra, Mukerdah, Rajpur and Antpur, about 30 miles, with a branch to Anta, eight miles. Capitalists, merchants, zemindars, and others are appealed to for support. It is a rosy appeal, anticipating a large traffic in pilgrias and wayfarers of all sorts, besides local traffic in goods and passengers.

COLONEL WALLACE, Consulting Engineer for Guaranteed Ruil-ways, has mot with a serious trolly accident at the scene of the break near Amballa. He had a narrow escape with his life.

A san affair is reported from Cachar. Dr. W. B. McWha was drowned while out duck-shooting; he was twenty-four years of age, and had just come from England to join his appointment.

MADRAS.

SIR GRANT DUFF will vacate his office on the 15th of October, and leave Bombay for England on the 19th of October.

THE Commander-in-Chief of Madras will leave Ootacamund early next month, and proceed on a tour of inspection. His Excellency is expected to reach Bangalore about the 10th proximo.

In is suggested that some of the Madras Police officers and men who did such good service in the jungly and unhealthy country of Rumpa during the late rebellion should be sent on service to Burma. They are well accustomed to the style of work required for hunting the dacoits.

MINING RIGHTS IN MYSORE.—The Bangalore correspondent of a Calcutta paper, says:—"Great dissatisfaction is felt because the Mysore Durbar refuse to grant further concessions of land for mining purposes. The Government resolved not to do so till the whole auriferous area of the province has been surveyed and reported on satisfactorily, and the future prospects of the enterprise somewhat ensured. In 1880 there were reckless speculations. Men of straw took up concessions haphazard at nominal prices, and made large fortunes by disposing of the same for immense sums to English companies."

BOMBAY.

THE HON. M. MELVILL has prepared a bill for vesting the port of Aden in a trust. The management of the affairs of the port is at present in the hands of the Resident, who, under the orders of Government, administers the Aden port fund. But the increasing importance of the port has made it highly desirable to establish a port trust, in which the commercial community shall be duly represented. This Bill has accordingly been drafted on the lines of the Karachi Port Trust Bill, 1886, the objects and reasons of which are applicable to a great extent to the present Bill.

The Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway, including the Rajputana-Malwa Railway, have adopted Messrs. Lund and Blockley's invention for setting clocks to correct time on lines of railway by an electric time current passed through them at a given hour daily by means of the wires used for ordinary telegraph purposes, which in this case will cover a distance of one thousand two hundred miles. The duration of the actuating electric current is three seconds, and the system is entirely automatic. The necessary apparatus, the invention of Mr. Lund, will be applied in the first place to clocks at the following stations: Colaba, Grant Road, Suret, Broach, Baroda, Ahmedabad, Wadwan, Abu Road, Ajmere, Bandiqui, Rewari, Sirsa, and Ferozepore.

The following telegram has been received by his Excellency Lord Reay from Sir Philip Cunliffe Owen:—"At a meeting of the Royal and Executive Commissioners of the Colonial and Indian Exhibition lately held, it was resolved that services of the Prince of Wales in promoting the exhibition should be suitably recognised, and that piece of plate commemoration of the exhibition should be presented. That for this purpose lists be opened in England, the Colonies, and India, each subscription, in order to make recognition as widespread as possible, being limited to two guineas or under. The committee appointed to carry out details asks me to request your Excellency's co-operation both by giving publicity and receiving subscriptions, which may be sent to it addressed to Secretary, Testimenial Committee, London." The Bank of Bombay has been asked to receive subscriptions limited to Rs. 30 to the credit of the fund.

NATIVE PRESS.

H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE EXHIBITION.—The movement to present a testimonial to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales cannot possibly meet with approval in India. The manner in which it is sought to recompense the Prince for his share in making the Colonial Exhibition a success is in many respects objectionable.—Kaiser-i-Hind.

The Hindus and Hindu Social Reform.—Native Opinion says:—"A foreigner discussing with a stranger the manners and customs of Hindu society, and not discussing them philosophically, but dealing with them, with a view to introduce violent changes into them, is a spectacle which only shows how low the Hindu public has fallen. Strangers and malcontents may abuse and revile them as much as they lke, hideous pictures may be exultingly drawn and disseminated far and wide, of the morals of their females, gross charges may be levelled against their old men and priests, and yet we stall find a number of people calling themselves Hindus who will not only look placidly on, but welcome all the rank productions of an abusive imagination with claps of admiration. We again say that in saying so we are looking at the principle only of such things quite apart from the merits of the question. We strongly take an exception to such transactions. Foreigners and strangers have no right whatsoever to dictate to Hindu society what customs and manners they ought to give up and what to adopt. We consider that the manners of a nation are their own property, and whatever may be the opinion of others regarding their value or nature, no stranger has the right to dictate a change in them. We will just reverse the position, and tell others to judge of our present feelings by what they would in that case feel. It is not given to any society on the face of this world to be perfect, and yet if some Hindus were to find some defect in the manners of the Europeans or of the Parsees, and (supposing they had the power) to force their own views as to how they should be remedied upon them, what would be said of the attempt? And yet we find members of Council and High Court Judges, who are Englishmen, proposing laws to bring the marriage law of the Hindus into unison with the fervid ideas of an enthusiast Parsee. Where are the people to whom the change principally concerns? They are nowhere. Questions of such nomencous importance as marriage laws are talked of, and schemes radically changing them are hatched by others, but is there any, the least consenting sign from the immense mass of the Hindu society? We say there is not, and notwithstanding the long list published in the Bombay Gazette of the July 23, we persevere in asserting that in these questions the Hindu society is kept clean out. And yet as parties to such transactions we find people some of whom are the loudest in their complaint as to the present legislative system of India. Some of these gentlemen protest the loudest that a small clique of officials siting at Calcutta ought to have no right to pass laws for the whole country, and that such a system of legislation is productive of more evil than good. And yet we find Parsees and Europeans and a handful of so-called Hindus, who, however eminent, do not command a farthing's influence with the real Hindus, complacently engaged over proposals to form some radical alterations in the Hindu marriage laws. Why, were it not a fact, the statement would seem too cridiculous to be believed. Whatever the merits of the question, we repeat that the principle is wrong, and ought to

DISASTROUS FIRE AT TINNIVELLY.—A terrible catastrophe is reported from Tinuivelly town. A thatched pandal erected for theatrical purposes caught fire when four or five hundred persons were present. The door of the theatre opened inwards, and as it was closed the panic-stricken crowd pressed against it, and exit was greatly delayed. The door was eventually wrenched off its hinges. Seventy deaths are reported, and thirty persons are seriously injured and thirty sustained slight injuries. The wind was blowing at the time, and caused the fire to spread rapidly.

ALLEGED COWARDICE OF SEPOYS IN BURMA.—The Rangoom Times of the 15th instant contains the following paragraph:—"A valued subscriber to this paper has requested us to point out that nis advices from Mandalay on which he places every reliance, state that in the fight en route from Myingyan to Natogyee, the Sepoy portion of the column under Colonel Le Mesurier ran away, leaving their ammunition and baggage, some of which was captured by the rebels. driver had shown them the example."

The supposed zeal of Hindu widows, unless prevented, to remarry, and the ease with which, even when fairly advanced in years, they are expected to find husbands, is fairly illustrated in a recent case in the Bembay Appeal Court against one Powaba; a widow of the Lohana caste. The Lohanas do not forbid remarriage; and Powabai having gained a decree with costs from her neighbour Ruttenjee Laljee, the latter, pending the success of an appeal was afraid that she might spend her costs, re-marry, and leave him in considerable straits about recovering them if the appeal was successful. No evidence was brought to show that the lady wished to re-marry, or that she bad a suitor. More than this, she is forty years of age. So assured, however, was her adversary that s e "might re-marry," that he brought an action to prevent her getting the costs awarded in the lower Court until the appeal has been decided. The case is a curious comment upon the favourite argument of many Hindus that social reform is not required because widows would scarcely ever re-marry even if custom permitted it.

STORMS AND LANDSLIP AT EIMLA.—A severe storm, or rather succession of storms, passed over Simla on Monday night, accompanied with much thunder and lightning. A tree was struck near the Punjab Public Works offices at Ellerslie, and was shivered into fragments like firewood, many of the pieces being thrown a considerable distance on to neighbouring trees. Ellerslie itself was also slightly damaged, and several window frames were smashed by the concussion. A more serious accident occurred at "Northbank," the house occupied by Mr. C. Bayley, Under-Secretary to the Government of India in the Revenue and Agricultural Department. A landslip took place in front of the house, and a large deodar tree came sliding down, roots foremost, through the front door, right into the dicing-room, wrecking everything. This happened about half-past eleven o'clock, when fortunately no one was in the room. There have also been numerous other slight landslips, and on Tuesday the road to Kalka was reported to be partially blocked.

THE LIFE OF SIR HENRY RAEBURN, R.A..*

The life of a painter is rarely a very eventful one; and the names of the artists who, having once adopted the profession, have shone both in it and in wider spheres of life, may be counted on the fingers. Nor is this to be wondered at. Not only is it given to few to be brilliant in more than one way; but the painter's life is singularly engrossing, and, it must be added, singularly absorbent, attracting recruits from every grade, and inducing them to quit previous avocations of the most diverse kinds—from the characteristics. We all know that a blacksmith's a blacksmith's, for instance. We all know that a blacksmith's anvil inspired the greatest of musicians with one of his most graceful melodies, but one would hardly look in a blacksmith for the soul, the eye, and, least of all, the touch, of a painter. Yet these were all combined in Quintin Matsys, the blacksmith of Antwerp, of whom it is written:

"Connubialis amor de Mulcibre fecit Apellem."

Far different from such an origin was that of Sir Henry Raeburn, the founder and the greatest genius of the resident school of Scotch painters, who came of a good old Border stock, and was educated at George Heriot's Hospital (the Edinburgh equivalent of our Christ's Hospital), of which he was one of the most celebrated pupils.

His natural bent, latent at school, first showed itself in miniature painting, and it is remarkable how early, and with what little help, he succeeded in making for himself a name as a portrait-painter. Martin, the chief of the Edinburgh painters of the time, to whom young Raeburn in the first instance turned, seems to have had a sort of prevision, and, so to say, an anticipatory envy of the lad's future eminence, and resolutely refused him tory envy of the lad's future eminence, and resolutely refused him all aid, except permission to copy his works, and the occasional loan of materials. Raeburn had even to teach himself the mixing of his colours, which, however, he soon learnt to mix "with brains," to use Opie's celebrated, if not very refined, phrase.

His early success was undoubtedly accelerated by a striking presence and a winning manner. Regarding the former it may suffice to quote Scott, who was one of his distinguished "sitters"—sitters so numerous, says Cunningham, that "a gallery of the illustrious heads of a most brilliant period might almost be completed from his (Raeburn's) works alone." "His manly stride backwarde," says Sir Walter, "as he went to contemplate his work at a proper distance, and, when resolved on the necessary point to be touched, his step forward, were magnificent. I see him, in my mind's eye, with his hand under his chin, contemplating his picture, which position always brought me in mind of a figure of Jupiter which I have somewhere seen." That his manner and conversation were such as to captivate a young lady manner and conversation were such as to captivate a young lady of rank and fortune, who came, as a chance sitter, to his studies, and who married him within a few months, may be considered and who married him within a tew months, may be considered the best testimony to their fascination.

Such personal advantages, joined to a thorough, and self-taught, knowledge of his profession, were well calculated to conduce to his rapid rise and ultimate eminence, which were further assured by his never exciting (and, when he had attained eminence, never showing) any of that envy which painters, not less an "irritabile genus" than poets, too often display, "for strife and bitterness find out other brethren of the easel in situations where peace only ought to be."

where peace only ought to be."

To all other advantages Raeburn added a surprising rapidity of production. The secret of his productiveness is attributed in this biography to the fact that "although his pieces were carefully biography to the fact that "although his pieces were carefully finished, yet he painted with uncommon expedition, for his firm touch and sure eye enabled him to execute at once what others could effect only after successive trials and operations." Sir Thomas Lawrence has been heard to say that though he received higher prices for his pictures he was worse paid for his time than Raeburn on account of the latter's rapidity of execution. We cannot, therefore, be surprised that the number of pictures he produced is marvellous, and of the large portion of his works—to the number of 325—exhibited in the galleries of the Royal Academy at Edinburgh in 18.76, a very useful Catalogue Raisonné Hasdemy at Edinburgh in 18, 8, a very useful Catalogue Raisonné forms the appendix to the volume before us.

His speed was doubtless in part due to his peculiar manner of working. "He never," we read, "drew in his head, or, indeed, any part of the body, in chalk, a system pursued with success by Lawrence, but began with the brush at once, the forehead, chin, nose, and mouth being his first touches; he always painted standing and never used a stick for retting his hand or the law of the law ing, and never used a stick for resting his hand on, for such was his accuracy of eye and steadiness of nerve that he could introduce the most delicate touches without the aid of any contrivance than fair offhand dexterity. Those only who have known what real work is are competent to sympathise with the youthful worker; and it was characteristic of Raeburn's goodness of heart that "to young men who were entering the arduous career of art, he showed himself always a most active and generous friend. Whether acquainted or not, they were welcome to come to him, and were sure of his best advice and assistance. Notwithstanding his extensive engagements and pursuits a large proportion of his time was always spent in rendering them kind offices."

An instance of his kindness is given in the case of one who himself became a distinguished painter. "One morning, taking his usual walk in his garden, he saw a little boy holding up a nis usual walk in his garden, he saw a little boy holding up a piece of paper, to deprecate summary ejectment; on examination it proved to be a well-executed sketch of a Gothic window in the painter's library. That little boy had come over the garden wall; but on recognising his genius Raeburn not only gave him free access, but instruction and encouragement. That it bore good fruit we now know, for that little boy was no other than David Roberts." than David Roberts."

George IV's visit to Scotland, which resulted in the confer-ment of a baronetcy on Sir Walter Scott, was the occasion of the bestowal of a knighthood—an honour then of vastly higher value than now—on Mr., thenceforth Sir Henry, Raeburn, who was also appointed King's painter (or, as it is quaintly called, "Limner") for Scotland. Himself long since appointed, unsolicited, a member of the London Academy, he was desirous to have a similar institution in Edinburgh, and the original suggestions for the production of the continuous suggestions.

have a similar institution in Edinburgh, and the original suggestions for that now existing there unquestionably emanated from him, though the scheme, deprived by his death of the benefit of his powerful advocacy, languished for many years.

Space has compelled us to confine ourselves to Raeburn's disinguished career as a painter. But, as the fourth chapter of this valuable biography abundantly proves, he was a proficient in many other accomplishments, and his mind was eminently versatile. Mr. Andrew may be congratulated on having, in this nicely got up volume, produced a very interesting and desiderated work, and on having, from all points of view, done the fullest justice to the moral, social, and professional qualities of his distinguished progenitor.

THE ILIAD OF HOMER.*

It can be no subject of wonder that the greatest poem of ancient times should have had many translators. Three or more in German (of which Voss's is incomparably the most akin in spirit to the original), one or two in French, an excellent rendering in Italian, and (in part) a fair version in Spanish, are not uncommon books. But it is with English translations that we are primarily concerned. That of Chapman, though it elicited somewhat enthusiastic commendation from Keats, is terribly archaic; Pope's, though containing many brilliant passages (e.g., the well-known "Moonlight Scene" in Book viii), is but the "Englishing" of a very inferior Latin translation; Cowper's, from which Mr. Cordery has, in Book xxiv., borrowed (of course with due acknowledgment) a few expressions, is —well, quelque soit peu dull; and, leaving aside others, there is the well-known rendering by the "Rupert of Debate," the late Lord Derby—himself no unfitting representative of a Homeric hero—of which the whole deserves a qualified praise, and of which the best passages are really very fine.

Mr. Cordery, whose first edition was published several years since, has, therefore, a goodly band of predecessors in a task which, it must be admitted, is one of no common difficulty.

The English language seems, by common consent, to have been considered incapable of representing the metre of the original. We differ from this opinion, believing, as we do, that prejudice (a prejudice which Longfellow's "Evangeline" has done somewhat towards destroying) counts for not a little in this question. Next to the "glorious roll" of the Hexameter, which Voss has so successfully reproduced in the German, comes, perhaps, the "blank verse" so familiar to us all; and we think that Mr. Cordery has, all things considered, exercised a wise discretion in employing it, though he, every now and then, strains, or rather It can be no subject of wonder that the greatest poem of Cordery has, all things considered, exercised a wise discretion in employing it, though he, every now and then, strains, or rather destroys, the rhythm without necessity.

We will quote but an instance or two of this (xvi. 832-3):-

" And bear the women of Troy across the seas To a dark life of slavery in your homes, where

"Bearing Troy's women far across the seas, Reft of their freedom, to thy native land," would have been nearer to the original, while the rhythm would have been less loose.

Again (xix. 285), Briseis, lamenting over Patroclus, tears "Her tender bosom, and neck and lovely cheeks."

The first "and" might well have been omitted.

"Begone, you wretched cowardly brood, begone," (xxiv. 239) is another case. "Coward-brood" would have been a woman mad;" this last struck us, because (in xxi. 460) the "Maenad" occurs in Andromache's wail, and is, in this passage, duly so rendered.

Φίλον ἢτορ (iii. 31) is hardly "false" heart; nor is μαινομένη εἰκυῖα (vi. 389) exactly "most like a Maenad: " rather "like to

Having had our preliminary grumble, let us address ourselves to the far more congenial task of specifying some at least of the beauties with which the work—evidently one of love to its author—abounds. Among these are many of the similes which form so striking a feature of Homer's text. Take the following

"As when a blast of Zephyr drives the deep Billow on billow to an echoing shore, The sea, upswoll'n, advances; and at first Far out the wave is crested, but anon Breaks, thund'ring on the coast, and overarch'd Curls round the headlands, flinging far the foam. Legion on legion thus the Danaans came Endless to battle."

Or this, depicting a combat (xii. 146) in which two Greek sentries keep off the Trojan attack:—

"Like two wild boars, that on a hill withstand,
Bravely a cloud of hunters and of hounds
With tusks oblique in onset to and fro,
They crack the wood about them, root and branch
Uptearing; clear the clatter of their teeth
Rings, till the hunter's dart hath ta'en their lives,
Clattered about them* so the shining mail
Smit by the darts that met them on their breasts."

In both extracts the scene is vividly portrayed, and the sense and spirit of the original admirably preserved.

Here is one more, not less well rendered, and describing Menelaus after the death of Euphorbus:—

"And, as a lion, weening of his strength,
Comes from his cradle in the hills, and springs,
Seizing the fairest of a grazing herd:
He cracks its neck asunder, in firm fangs
Clenching it close, and rends the paunch, and laps
The blood and flowing offal; some space off
All round him hounds and shouting neatherds raise
An outcry, but against him dare not go,
For pale the panic holds them; so the hearts
Of none were bold to face that glorious chief"—(xvii. 61).

Few readers will be content with these meagre extracts; nor is it our wish to spoil more gems than we can help by taking them away from the setting of the context which lends them prominence. We would rather hope that these will but increase the reader's desire to see the entire work; the translation being printed side by side with the original text, as a kind of mute challenge to test the—on the whole wonderfully sustained—accuracy of the former.

Longer passages want of space forbids us to quote. But we must not omit to reproduce one from Andromache's lament (which may truly be called a poem in itself). Describing by anticipation the future lot of her fatherless son, the young

"The orphan hath no friends, in fear he lives
And trembling, and his cheeks are wet with tears;
The child creeps up, and, craving alms of men
Who were his father's comrades in old time,
Pulls at a cloak, or flowing tunic's skirt;
Whereat they pity, and perchance hand down
A slender cup, and suffer him to wet
His lips, but barely moisten the parch'd throat;
Or one, of either parent doubly bless'd,
Thrusts him aside with blow and bitter gibe.
"Begone, with us thy father feasts not now."
Whence, weeping, to the widow runs her child,
And this to thee, Astyanax," &c.—Vol. II. p. 403.

Throughout this work Mr. Cordery seems to have admirably reproduced the nice discrimination of character so marvellously sustained by Homert in his entire poem, and on which Mr. Cordery has some pertinent remarks in his Preface. We cordially thank him for his translation, which we can unfeignedly praise as being conscientious, and eminently readable, displaying not only a scholarly acquaintance with the original, but an enviable mastery of the language into which it has been rendered.

MELITA.*

Modern English novels, whether in one or in three (or more) volumes, may be divided into three categories; one in which things go happily, and the lovers are duly united in the bonds of holy matrimony; another, in which the ought-to-be couple are severed by violent death, or mutual misconception, leading to the union of the wrong halves; lastly, the thoroughly low, and, in their tendency, debasing and immoral books—usually, alast-written by women (however unsexed)—which go to prove that all women are, or ought, if they desire success in life, to be bad, and that, the worse they are, the greater will be the brilliancy of their fortunes.

The story before us, partly founded, we are assured, on fact, belongs to the second of our divisions; for the heroine, from whom the story takes its name, marries the "wrong half," and is, moreover, scarcely the most attractive—though, of course, the most beautiful—of the female characters depicted. The real interest of the tale centres in the fortunes of a Turkish brother and sister, Kiamil Bey, and Adelé Hanum. The former is an exceptionally good specimen of "young Turkey," the latter, the (not unreasonably) discontented spouse of a jealous Turkish Pasha, whose lonely, uninteresting life palls on her the more that she has, at Kiamil's urgent instance, been permitted to receive a somewhat better "education," and to imbibe somewhat more enlightened ideas, than are common among the inmates of the Harem in the dominions of the Padishah.

Needless to say that the Pasha's palace contains an oubliette (probably communicating with the "Hall of Waters"), a suspicious eunuch, and a black female slave who hates her young mistress, that there is an intrigue, and, also, a dénouement—of what kind the reader must find out for him, or her, self. What is to be noted, and noted with much commendation, is the admirable delineation, derived from personal knowledge, of Constantinople and Levant life which has been grafted on a comparatively simple story, and which is so vivid that it will convey many new ideas to most purchasers of the book, and not be easily forgotten by any. At a time when the interest, alike of those who study history, and of those who are engaged in making it, is so greatly occupied with the lands over which the Sultan of Rum bears sway, this little work, showing what manner of people those lands contain, and what is their home life, may fairly claim a cordial welcome.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

SURGEON-MAJOR J. DUNGAN, M.D., Indian Medical Department, Medical Officer in charge of the 1st Punjab Infantry, who has been for some time on sick leave in India, is about to embark on medical certificate for England, and will probably retire from the service while on leave.

THE Secretary of State for India has notified that Officers of the British Service holding the appointments of Adjutant-General or Quartermaster-General of the Madras and Bombay Armies, who would necessarily return to England on the expiration of their term of staff service, should in all cases be treated as General Officers with regard to passage, and that officers proceeding from England to India to take up those appointments are provided with reserved accommodation as for General Officers. The decision will be embodied in the Transport Regulations.

The following General Order has been issued by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, with reference to the transfer of the Punjab Frontier Force to his Excellency's command:—"For upwards of thirty-five years the Punjab Frontier Force has been steadily adding to its laurels; and its list of casualties during that time bears testimony to the gallantry and devotion of all ranks in many a hard-fought action, while the admirable manner in which discipline has at all times been maintained has contributed materially to the high reputation for soldier-like qualities which the Brigade now so deservedly enjoys. The addition of so distinguished a force to the Bengal Army would, under any circumstances, be a matter of congratulation to the Commander-in-Chief in India; but, as a former commandant of the Punjab Frontier Force, it is especially gratifying to Sir Frederick Roberts that this measure has come into operation during his tenure of office. "His Excellency takes this opportunity of assuring the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Brigade that it will be his special privilege, not only to watch over their interests in the future, but also to take care that the many customs and traditions which have so largely contributed to make the force what it now is are interfered with as little as possible. In offering a soldier's welcome to all ranks of the Punjab Frontier Force, Sir Frederick Roberts is sure that he is only giving expression to what is the unanimous feeling throughout the Army of Bengal."

* We say "Homer," because it is sometimes pleasant to cling to an exploded belief, and we are as angry with Vico and Wolf for destroying Homer, as we are with Niebuhr for depriving us of Romulus, Numa, Egeria, Lucretia, and the Tarquins. We wish from the bottom of our Editorial heart that some one would "rehabilitate" the individuality of the dear old poet, restoring him his seven birthplaces, and proving that, in claiming about as many, Mr. Gladstone is, after all, only a plagiarist!

SALARIES AND THE RUPEE.

It is not likely that the writers upon currency will come to any satisfactory conclusion as to how the question of Indian exchange is to be dealt with. They will continue "to agree to differ" to the end of their arguments and their paper. We are told, on one hand, that low exchange benefits India by stimulating trade. Mr. O'Connor, of the Financial Department of the Government of India issues a Minute, giving an opposite opinion. Mr. William Birkmyre, of Calcutta and Port Glasgow, replies to Mr. O'Connor that his Minute is of the "usual official type," and that low exchange must stimulate trade. This method of argument partakes somewhat of the nature of that used by the American traveller in one of Mark Twain's stories, who, describing the pursuit of a badger by dogs, declared that the pursued had escaped by climbing up a tree. "But badgers can't climb trees," said an incredulous listener. "Sir," said the story teller, "this badger had to." Mr. Birkmyre's badger—low exchange must do what he wishes it to do. But he adds, in a note on Mr. O'Connor's Minute:—"It is really time that this question should be viewed in its national bearings, and apart altogether from the hardships it imposes on official classes in India. I defy any of them to show that any additional taxes have been imposed during the many years exchange has been depreciating, to meet the increased drain upon the Treasuries of India for their European requirements. On the contrary, during the period of this depreciation taxes have been repealed; and, although the Income-tax has been reimposed, it was for the purpose of meeting war expenditure on the frontier. I am well aware that the accounts. as presented show a loss of millions by exchange. Thoselosses are purely illusory," This is certainly a very simple way of making the badger climb the There are persons less skilled in financial argument than Mr. Birkmyre, who are under the painful impression that the loss by exchange is not altogether "illusory." To that class of persons—"the Indian official' -he offers the following consolation :- "I cannot but sympathise with the Indian official in the loss he sustains by a low rate of exchange in remitting his salary to Europe; but when he elected to go into the service of India he took the risk of losing or gaining. He has lost, but in no sensecan his loss be considered a national calamity." This may be the opinion of Glasgow, but it will hardly be endorsed in India. The writer, however, allows that the paid servant of the State in India does suffer a loss by the depreciation of exchange, and he is candid enough to allow that there is only one way of remedying this. "If it is the duty of the State to make 1s 6d. in Calcutta worth 1s. 8d. in London it can only be done, I apprehend, at the expense of the State." To this complexion we must come at last. It may startle financial pamphlet writers and theoretical economists to advance the argument that the State should bear any of the burden which a depreciated currency lays upon its servants, but at present there is no other way out of the difficulty. Whilst the doctrinaires are discussing their different plans concerning silver and gold, the unfortunate Indian official finds his pocket being surely emptied in a very unmistakeable manner. The Civilian and the Soldier who have accepted service in India will not accept the assertion that when doing so there was a sort of gambling contract with the State that they were to "take the risk of losing or gaining" by their salaries. Their rates of pay were fixed at a supposed certain valuation with regard to pounds sterling. If the rupee did not represent two shillings, it certainly was never intended to mean eighteenpence. Nor can it be argued that the loss now accrying to these servants of the State is not a national question. It is a very serious one. If India is to be governed and guarded, and the Indian peasant (for whom alone Mr. Birkmyre and other writers feel sympathy) protected and encouraged to "develop the resources" of his country, good men to govern and guard must be found and must be adequately paid. There can be no fencing with the question. The fall of the rupee to the value of one shilling may have all the stimulating effects on trade claimed for it by Mr. Birkmyre, but it will have also to stimulate the Government into the immediate adoption of a remedy to save its own servants from ruin. remedy may not be according to the strictest canons of political economy, but it will have to be a practical one, even if it has to take the name of "increased salaries."

AFGHAN BOUNDARY DIFFICULTIES.

The correspondent of the Pioneer with the Afghan Boundary Commission, writing from Camp Karkin, on June 30th, says The only question now remaining for settlement is the question regarding the point where the boundary is to strike the Oxus, and known briefly as the Khojah Salih question. The boundary has already been settled, and the pillars erected up to Dukehi, a has already been settled, and the pillars erected up to Dukuli, a point to the north of Andkhui, and some twenty miles west of the Oxus. The land between that and the river is almost entirely desert, with the exception of a strip of cultivation about a mile in width running along the banks of the Oxus, and inhabited by Ersari Turkomans, and it is just this strip of fertile land that the Russian Commissioner is now trying to lay claim to. the Russian Commissioner is now trying to lay claim to. The land on the Afghan side of the boundary belongs to the district of Akchah, and on the other side to Bokhara, but both sides are equally inhabited by Ersaris, who apparently occupy the whole of this portion of the left bank of the Oxus. Akchah came into Afghan possession some 37 years ago, and the Russians acknowledge it to be an integral portion of Afghanistan by the agreement of 1873. By that agreement the Afghan Boundary was said to extend as far down the Oxus as Khojah Salih, but the agreement apparently was written without any knowledge of the agreement apparently was written without any knowledge of the country in question, and the consequence is that when the Boundary Commission appeared on the scene, it was discovered that there was no such place on the Oxus as Khojah Salih, but that the district here along the river bank was known by the general name of Khwajah Salar from some old saint of that name who lies buried at a place called Ziarat i-Khwajah Salar. It was also discovered that some little time after the agreement of 1872 discovered that some little time after the agreement of 1873 between England and Russia the local Afghan and Bokhanan authorities met together and formally recorded the limits of their respective districts. The boundary was well known, and there never had been any quarrel about it; and the local authorities therefore simply marked out the frontier between their respective frontier villages, viz., Kham-i-ab on the Afghan and Bosagha on the Bokharan side, and there the matter rested till the present the Bokharan side, and there the matter rested till the present day. Instead, however, of gladly accepting this settlement by the Bokharan authorities, the Russian Commissioner claims the letter of the agreement of 1873, and has been delaying and putting off the completion of the settlement for the last month on the plea of making surveys and inquiries in furtherance of his claim. Ziarat-i-Khwajah Salar lies some twenty miles up the river from the boundary line between Kham-i-ab and Bosagha, but there was never any feraz or post there, as was supposed, in 1873, and all the Russian inquiries have failed, so far as we know, to make out any case for the boundary being fixed at the Ziarat, or any other any case for the boundary being fixed at the Ziarat, or any other place than where it now is. This, however, with the Russians, is of no moment, and, as was to be expected, we now hear that they have advanced their claims to Chuska Guzar, another ferry some forty more miles higher up the river, and, I presume, failing to make out any case there, they will go on claiming the next ferry, and so on. In fact, there seems to be no end to their claims, and one can only suppose their object is to delay the settlement of the frontier by all means in their power, and eventually, if possible, to escape the necessity of defining any frontier here at all, so as to leave a loophole for future encroachment.

The land at Kham-i-ab, having been in Afghan possession for the last thirty-seven years, will, of course, never be surrendered by the Amir, except under compulsion; and, on the other side, as the Bokharans have no claim to it whatever, we can only presume that the Russians are trying to get possession of it for themselves. This belief is strengthened by the fact that Lieutenaut-Colonel Tarkhanoff, the Russian Governor of Penjdeh, was lately summoned here from Penjdeh, and it was supposed that he was brought here on purpose, so that, in the event of Russia being able to get possession of any land on the bank of the river, he might be able to take charge of it as well as of Penjdeh, and thus have a continuous frontier from the Murghab right up to the Oxus. One can quite imagine the intense desire of Russia to obtain a permanent footing, however small, here on the bank of the Oxus. I presume the day is not far distant when the left bank of the Oxus will be taken from Bokhara and permanently annexed by Russia; but still I doubt if the time is ripe for it just yet, and the Russians would get all they want at present if they could manage to force us to surrender a strip of Afghan territory, just sufficient for them to form a frontier station where their troops would be a standing menace to Mazari-Sharif and to all Afghan Turkistan. It is not, therefore, the question of a few miles of land here or there that is of issue, but a vital point in the question of the future Russian advance, involving, in fact, the future fate of Turkistan. There is not the least doubt that any concession in the present case would enable Russia to avoid the annexation of Bokharan territory, and yet at the same time to hold out a visible threat to the Afghans, which all Turkistan could not fail to understand. However, the matter will, I suppose, be brought to an issue now without further delay, and we shall then await the final orders of Government as to the conclusion arrived at.

CHANDERNAGORE.—About a couple of months ago we mentioned that a new paper had been started in the little French territory of Chandernagore, near Calcutta, the object of which paper, judging from its first number, appeared to be abuse of the Government of India, under French protection, but in the English language. We said that it was possible that a hint might be given to the Governor of the place that the "liberty of the Press," as understood by the seditious Natives, should not be altogether unrestricted, and this has brought forth some very indignant writing on the part of the Babus, who, owing everything to the generosity of the British rule, go into French territory to abuse it in safety. "Our skin," says the editor, "is tough enough for any number of arrows, broad or pointed, long or short; but we cannot make black white any more than The Broad Arrow can make us what we are not. We cannot sing Hosanna to the glory of the British Indian bureaucracy. It is idle to intimidate us. We are ready to run any risk." This, as it stands, is, of course, merely laughable as a specimen of Bengali gush, issued from a temporary safe retreat but our remark about the contemptible strength of the French garrison at Chandernagore has been twisted and turned to serve the usual seditious purpose. "We can tell the The Broad Arrow why Chandernagore does not require half-a-dozen Sepoys to keep it in order. It is because while England rules India by English bayonets, France holds her sway in the East by the sympathy of her subjects, and not by means of brute force." This picture of India being held down by armed force is one which certain English agitators at home are very fond of presenting to the imagination of their followers, but it is a false one. It is necessary for many excellent reasons that England should retain a large army in India; but were it four times as large, we could not hold the country if we had no hold also upon the sympathies of the people. The history of the French conquests in India is the history of brilliant achievements, resulting in loss of prestige and power from a lack of that very sympathy. Where England conqu

PERHAPS of all the classes which have prospered under British administration the coolie or wage-earning class, remarks the Pioneer, has shown the greatest advance in material welfare. The coolie has developed an independence of character which was before unknown; and though not much addicted to finery or luxuries, he is often seen nowadays carrying his own umbrella and puffing his own (not the stump of another man's) cheroot. The progress of education and of unbelief is as nothing compared with the progress of the umbrella. The import of British umbrellas into one of the least populous provinces in India reached a total of 50,000 in 1885. What total the consumption of country-made cheroots reaches can only be guessed. From year to year the popularity of tobacco in this form increases among the Natives of the country. The coolie on the road, the shopman squatting amid his wares, the sepoy swaggering through the bazaar—each and all puff their Trichies or Burmahs with the nonchalance of a sahib. The idea suggests itself that umbrellas and tobacco ought to contribute to the revenue. They are luxuries; and the imposition of a light duty on them would not make itself felt.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION OF INDIA.—The Jam-i-Jamshed, in commenting upon the despatch of the Government of India and the reply thereto by the Lords of the Treasury on the subject of the present uncertainty regarding the future relative value of gold and silver, and the consequent difficulties arising in the financial administration of India, says "the inhabitants of this country will be glad if the Government, instead of cutting down the expenditure in certain spheres of usefulness, will see their way to increasing their revenue in a mode which may be the least felt by the people. Experience teaches us that India is not accountry where direct taxes might with advantage be imposed, and it is now admitted on all hands that Government have made a mistake in levying the income-tax upon the people of this country. The Government in their present predicament propose to levy indirect taxes in India, but such taxes should not be as suggested by the Lords of the Treasury, such as to deprive the people of the articles of necessity. The Government of India threaten in their present straitened circumstances to increase the salt tax, but such a proceeding on their part will be deemed most unjust and extortionate by the public at large. It need hardly be stated that salt is one of the articles absolutely necessary for the life of man. The only tax which could at present to levied without being much felt by the people is the re-imposition of the import duty on English piece-goods. The lower classes of the inhabitants of this country prefer Indian piece-goods to English, for the reason that they are both cheap and durable. Such a tax, if imposed, would have to be borne by the higher classes who will not in the least feel its burden. Again, if the import duty was levied, there will be a cry raised by a certain portion of the English community that it is opposed to the principles of free trade. But the same argument could be successfully urged against these oppositionists, who have nothing to say against the imposition of duty o

A DICTIONARY OF ISLAM.

Being a Cyclopædia of the Doctrines, Rites, Ceremonies, and Customs, together with the Technical and Theological Terms, of the Muhammadan Religion.

BY

THOMAS PATRICK HUGHES, B.D. M.R.A.S.

Fellow of the Punjab University, Missionary of the Church Missionary Society, Peshawur, Afghanistan.

"We have at last obtained a real encyclopædia of the Mul ummadan Religion, and we can only hope that the sterling value of the result of so much labour and study will receive its well-merited recognition."—Literary Wo.ld.

"An excellent service has been rendered by Mr. Hughes in compiling this Dictionary of Islam to all those who have dealings with Moslems, Islam, or the literature of the Arabs; and the volume before us, as the work of one man, is a marvel of industry, and fairly to be characterised as a cyclopedia of the doctrines, rites, ceremonies, and customs; together with the technical and theological terms of the Muhammedan religion."—Saturday Review.

"Mr. Hughes' competency for his task can fully be judged only by those as familiar with Muhammadanism as he is himself. He indicates great care and sound judgment. . . . We have read many of its articles with great interest."—British Quarterly Review.

"The work is unique of its kind, and invaluable to all who live in, or love the East."—Daily Telegraph.

"In the 750 pages of his present work he gives an exact explanation of every term, action, and idea of the Mussalman faith, the information being in every case taken from the most esteemed Muhammadan sources, with the comments of the best European scholars. . . . This most useful work will be of undoubted value to he student of comparative religion."—Homeward Mail.

"VOICE OF INDIA."

A MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This addects is now remedied by publishing monratur (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

ing between the fruers and the future, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magarine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be 'subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

'The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette' has acquired a reputation for early and oxclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service Nows, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonical circulates largely throughout India a ments."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marino bureaux of the Frensh, Russien, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE overland mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 10th August; from Allahabad to the 8th August; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 8th August.

It is announced that some time in October next the Viceroy will pay a visit to Poona, where a conference is to be held to consider the best method of converting the Bombay Army into an Army Corps.

THE HON. MR. C. P. ILBERT, who has been appointed Assistant Parliamentary Counsel, will, it is understood, be able to remain in India until the end of the current Legislative Session, as there is necessarily a good deal of business to be wound up, and much of it is important.

MR. ILBERT'S successor is already the object of speculation, and it is believed to be not improbable that Sir Charles Turner, late Chief Justice of Madras, will be offered the Law Membership of the Viceroy's Council. The result would necessarily depend in the first place upon Sir Charles Turner's willingness to return to India.

SIE CHARLES BERNARD is spoken of as the probable successor of Sir C. Aitchison, and Mr. Crossthwaite as Sir C. Bernard's successor in the Chief Commissionership of Burma.

THE members of the Finance Commission have left Simla according to programme.

It is settled that the Hon. Sir Steuart Bayley succeeds Sir Rivers Thompson as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in the spring. Although this has long been accepted by the public as almost a foregone conclusion, it is considered satisfactory to know that the arrangement has been absolutely made.

THE French Consul-General, M. Harmand, is now at Simla on business connected with the furtherance of claims by French subjects in Upper Burma for compensation on account of losses suffered through the annexation.

EXPERIMENTS made on the North-Western Railway with the coal raised in the Salt Range show that it can be used in blocks just as it is cut from the seams, and that there is no necessity for converting it into patent fuel. This fact shows that the value of the Salt Range coal-field is likely to be even greater than was at first anticipated.

A most liberal allotment of funds has been made to the Hurnai Railway, with a view to its rapid completion, and it is now believed that the line will be laid to the Peshin plateau by the end of next March.

THE first report on the prospects of the cotton crop in the Punjab is as follows:—"Condition of cotton crop generally very good. So far a full average crop is expected."

BRIGADE-SURGEON BRADSHAW, Administrative Medical Officer at Quetta, has been promoted to the rank of Deputy-Surgeon-General, and appointed Principal Medical Officer with the troops in Egypt.

Mr. J. B. Pennington, a Madras civilian of nearly twenty-four years' service, is shortly going on furlough for two years previous to retiring.

Cases of decoity are still of frequent occurrence in Upper Burma; but, notwithstanding, trade is steadily increasing.

SKIRMISHING about Ningyan, says a Burma telegram, has been continuous lately. The hettest work was on the 21st July, when the enemy once approached to within thirty yards of our stockades.

A BILL to enable the Bombay Municipal Corporation to raise increased revenues from town duties has been passed by the Bombay Legislative Council.

THE regulations regarding the administrative staff of the Indian Medical Service have been revised.

At the meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, the Hon. Forbes Adam, the chairman, referred to the silver question. He contended that the reduction in the value of the metal had been advantageous to the trade of India. He, however, advocated the issue of a Royal Commission on the currency crisis.

During the official year, up to the end of June, the Indian imports and exports of gold amounted to 102 lakhs and 25 lakhs respectively; while those of silver amounted to 203 lakhs and 14 lakhs.

In their reply to the Finance Committee, the judges of the Calcutta High Court point out that the net profits on process fees in 1884 was twelve lakhs. They also point out that the expenditure on the courts has by no means kept pace with the increase of business, and that it is only with the utmost difficulty that the judicial officers are able to dispose of the business at all. The judicial officers are too few, while the establishments are weak and underpaid.

THE Judges think it their duty to decline to offer any suggestions for the reduction of expenditure.

It is that said that a railway will be made to Mandalay at an estimated cost of some two millions sterling.

THE Simla Brewery Company is about to establish a brewery at Mandalay. An agent has been sent there for the purpose.

WORK on the Lahore tramway is to be commenced immediately, all the shares in the company having been taken up.

An Irishman named Johnston is reported to have recently arrived at Hyderabad, having travelled here from the camp of the Afghan Boundary Commission, viâ Quetta and Bombay. Johnston possesses certificates from some of the officers of the Commission, certifying that he was attached to the Russian Camp, and that he is a native of the British Islands, although he has almost forgotten his own tongue. His history is a very curious one. At the age of five he was captured and taken across the borders by Afghans, amongst whom he resided until about a year ago, when he escaped and joined the Commission as it was marching through Afghanistan. He speaks Persian, Pushtoo and Turki with great fluency, but his knowledge of English is of the most elementary character.

With reference to the announced discovery of coal in the Punjab, the Indian Engineer says:—"We have to express our doubts as to the possibility of turning the field to a profitable account. The very fact of the seam being 20 to 24 inches thick carries with it the conviction that, in this country, it is not possible of mining—even on the scientific principles advocated by a contemporary. In England, circumstances are different, and, where such seams are worked, it is only exceptionally in connection with other minerals, such as ironstone, which is wrought at the same time with the coal—both minerals being sometimes found alternating with each other in thin bands. It is this important condition which induces capitalists at home to launch into mining undertakings of this class. Dr. Warth is evidently not aware of the fact that in this country a miner will not work in a seam which does not admit of operations being carried on in an erect posture or so near that posture as possible. We are informed by those who have had to deal with all kinds and depths of seams, that they have invariably found a persistent avoidance on the part of miners of such of them as induce a disadvantageous working postura. We should be glad to know how Dr. Warth means to conduct his mining operations under conditions so adverse to a successful issue. Had Dr. Warth been an expert in mining matters—which we are informed he is not—he would not have held out the hope of a general mineral fuel prospect for the Punjab Railways on data so scant, or on evidence of such an imperfect kind."

Hotes of the Week.

By the Overland Mail received to-day come complaints from the Indian Press as to the way in which it has been treated with regard to the information about Sir Grant Duff's successor. "The Governorship of Madras," says one paper, "has been the subject of more harmless misstatements, not to say much about ingeniously conjectural leader paragraphs, than any office that has been in the gift of the Crown during these days of appointing and disappointing." First of all, Sir John Eldon Gorst was nominated by Reuter, but shortly afterwards deposed in favour of Lord Harris, who is written of by an Indian contemporary as "the smart young nobleman who had played cricket in England, had worked as Under-Secretary at the India Office, and who, in going to Madras, would have found himself on the paths of his ancestors." The intelligence had, however, reached India by wire that the Honourable Robert Bourke had been offered the appointment; "but his acceptance of the office is doubtful" is the supplementary information given.

The Bombay Gazette, commenting upon this, says that the doubt is discouraging, but hopes that Mr. Bourke may be prevailed upon to go to Madras. "It would be one of his recommendations that he is a brother of the late Lord Mayo, and that he partakes of the bonhommie of that most acceptable of Viceroys. He has filled only one office in the Administration—that of Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs—but he has filled it twice, and his second nomination to it must be taken as a sign of his fitness for responsibility." Then the writer mournfully concludes:—"Much e'se might be said in his favour, but when the favourite of each day is scratched there is small inducement to recount all his performances."

But the doubt no longer exists. Mr. Bourke has, after some hesitation, accepted the Governorship of Madras, and goes direct to his appointment on the 4th of November next. His claims upon his party at home were strong enough to have warranted his nomination to a position much nearer the Cabinet, but he is not a man to push his personal interest before other considerations. What we believe to be the general opinion as to his fitness for the Governorship of Madras we say in another column. In a past Conservative Ministry he possessed the full confidence of his chief, the late Lord Beaconsfield, and Lord Salisbury knows that he is sending to a difficult and delicate position a tried and trusted man, who will amply justify his momination.

MR. BOURKE has had the courage to accept a task from which the boldest of politicians might shrink if even a moiety of the reports be true concerning the confusion and corruption which it is said now reign at Madras. By the very mail to hand a writer, reviewing what are now known as the Madras scandals, says of the late régime under Mr. Grant Duff: "For close on five years maladministration has been the order of the day. Not mere error of judgment deflecting men from the path of wisdom, not mere ignorance pleading forgiveness for a pardonable aberration, but a resolute closing of the eyes to justice." There may be much personal bitterness in this, but the writer is not alone in making statements which, if only partly true, show that the new Governor of Madras has an Augean stable to cleanse rather than a bed of Oriental roses to lie upon.

MAJOR STEWART MACKENZIE, 9th Lancers, who served and was severely wounded in the late Afghan campaign, has been appointed Military Secretary to the Governor of Madras. Mr. Bourke takes with him as Aide-de-Camp Lieutenant Wyndham Quin, 16th Lancers, who saw some service with the Inniskilling Dragoons in the Boer War of 1881. Lord Marsham also accompanies Mr. Bourke as Extra Aide-de-Camp.

THE rumour that Sir Charles Berfard is to succeed to the Lieutenant-Governorship of the Punjab is causing some comments in India. Able and amiable as Sir Charles friends hold him to be, it cannot be held as a fact that he has been a success in Barma, and to reward failure in one Province by a transfer to another on the most dangerous frontier of the Indian Empire will hardly be considered as an act of wisdom. Sir Charles Bernard, like Sir Grant Duff, has theories of his own as to how the world ought to be governed; only the world goes its own way in spite of the theories. Facts upset "fads," and hence—failure.

THE Volunteers in India are sharing the ate of prophets who have no honour in their own country. The Government of India have lately decided that a Volunteer officer in command of a battalion of Volunteers in India is not an officer of "Her Majesty's Forces" or of "Her Majesty's Indian Forces." It is to be hoped that the Government will be able to find out to what force a Volunteer officer should belong before the revised edition to the Volunteer Regulations sees the light, for under present regulations it is difficult to say what they are.

"When," asks a military contemporary, "will some steps be taken to check the inconsistencies and uncertainties of court-martial sentences? By the latest mail from India there comes a report of two courts-martial held in the Bengal Presidency, exemplifying the necessity of reform in the direction we have hinted at. In one instance a soldier is tried for pointing a loaded rifle at a lance-corporal and afterwards 'kicking him on the legs with his boots,' and is sentenced to ten years' penal servitude; in another instance a soldier discharges his rifle loaded with ball cartridge at a comrade and wounds him, for which offence he is sentenced to one year's imprisonment, but recommended to mercy on the ground of his excitable temperament. In the former case five years of the sentence was remitted by the Commander-in-Chief; in the latter the recommendation to mercy was rejected. Surely in both cases there has been something very like a miscarrying of justice. An attempt at murder is punished by a sentence of one year's imprisonment with a recommendation, to mercy—the pointing of a rifle at a lance-corporal and kicking him with boots, entails a sentence of ten years' penal servitude!"

THE following is a List of the Candidates for Her Majesty's Indian Medical Service who were successful at the Competitive Examination held at Burlington House on the 9th inst., and following days. Thirty-seven candidates competed for the twenty-five appointments; thirty-three were reported qualified.

CALCUTTA, AUGUST 22.

An up-country newspaper has published an apparently inspired summary of the work done by the Finance Committee during its three months' session at Simla. From this it would appear that the first and most important work undertaken—namely, the revision of the financial contracts between the supreme and provincial Governments—seems likely to result in a gain to the former from of 40 to 50 lakhs of rupees. It is believed that considerable economies will be recommended in the Public Works and several other Departments of the supreme Government, and it may be found possible to effect a saving in military expenditure by means of financial decentralization and by cutting down or abolishing certain offices. The existing system of travelling allowances is understood to have been strictly examined, and what is known as Simla allowances to have been exceptly revised. what is known as Simla allowances to have been carefully revised. The Committee also inquired into the cost of moving the Government between Calcutta and Simla, and what saving would be effected by permanently locating certain offices at one or the other of those places; and possibly their report may contain a recommendation on this subject. The travelling members of the Committee have now finished their conference with the North West Provinces Government at Names Tell and have gone North-West Provinces Government at Nynee Tal, and have gone to meet the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces. completing their business with him they will proceed this week to Poonah and discuss various matters with the Bombay Government.

The Calcutta Trades Association have addressed a long memo-The Calcutta Trades Association have addressed a long memorial to the Government on the silver question, urging that no time should be lost in facing the difficulty and adopting a remedy. It is not, they say, a matter of so much moment at what exchange value the rupee may be, as that it should acquire a fixed and practically unchangeable value in relation to gold. They think a considerable alleviation of the present critical state of exchange could be effected by the removal of existing restrictions on the local purchase of Government stores. They contend that the present method of selling Council bills is open to serious objections. They deny that Indian trade is benefited by the fall of silver, and they express an opinion that bimetallism would afford Reports of damage from floods continue to come from various quarters, as is usual at this time of the year. In Eastern Bengal a railway station is said to be damaged, and the Dacca State Railway is breached. News from Assam tells of an alarming rise in the river Brahmapootra. It does not, however, seem that it has done much injury as yet. Several parts in the Sylhet district are inundated, and the people are suffering much. Traffic on the Tirhoot State Railway has been stopped for some days owing to a breach, over which passengers and goods have to be ferried. In that district the floods are now subsiding, but the crops have suffered some injury. The rainfall in Darjeeling and Torai has been abnormal, and will probably tend to diminish the outturn of tea from that district; and the same cause will prevent the Behar indigo outturn reaching the original estimate. On the other hand, the jute crop of Eastern Bengal is likely to exceed the average.

The Viceroy leaves Simla about the end of October.

The Vicercy leaves Simla about the end of October. After a tour along the frontier he will probably proceed to Western and Southern India, visiting Baroda, Poonah, Bangalore, and Octacamund. The Government offices close at Simla on the 30th of October and reopen at Calcutta on the 15th of November.

Mr. Ilbert will probably leave India early in November. It is understood that Sir A. Rivers Thompson and Sir Alfred Comyns Lyall, Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal and the North-West Provinces, will be succeeded early next year by Sir Steuart C. Bayley and Sir Auckland Colvin respectively. Mr. Elliott, President of the Finance Committee, is likely to take Sir Auckland Colvin's place as Finance Minister. place as Finance Minister.

BURMA.

MANDALAY, AUGUST 19. A great calamity has occurred. Last evening, at about six o'clock, the river embankment which protects Mandalay burst or was cut northward of the town. The Irrawaddy is in high flood, and the larger portion of the town was indundated. The flood, and the larger portion of the town was indundated. The portion which has been inundated is that which escaped the recent incendiary fires. The depth of water over the inundated district varies from 4ft. to 20ft. A great number of houses were swept away, and probably 50,000 people are left houseless.

Great distress must ensue. An enormous quantity of property, especially of provisions, is destroyed. The great bazaar has 5ft. of water in it. The difficulty of people in obtaining food is greatly increased by the want of a market. The inundation is increasing, and is likely to last some time. The highest floods in the Irrawaddy have yet to come.

dated district, which comprises the chief commercial portion of the town, is about five miles long by two wide. A portion of the inundated district was thinly inhabited, but there has been a heavy loss of life, although the exact numbers cannot be ascerneary loss of fire, atthough the exact numbers cannot be ascertained. Owing to the losses caused by the inundation much distress prevails in Mandalay, and business is almost suspended. Commercial difficulties are increased owing to the principal Mandalay traders being creditors of the late Burmese Government, and their claims for payment have not yet been decided upon by the Government of India.

For some days before the inundations the military authorities feared an attempt by the insurents to out the subankment, and feared an attempt by the insurgents to cut the embankment, and kept patrols to guard it. The civil authorities, however, appear to have neglected keeping the embankment in good order, a duty always carefully carried out by the Burmess Government.

The authorities were unaware of the embankment having given way for some hours after the occurrence. The Irrawaddy Flotilla Company have been very active in relieving the sufferings of the people and have rendered valuable service.

Sir Charles Bernard and Mr. Burgess are both absent at Bhamo. The absence of any civil officer of position or experience is severely felt.

The inundation of Mandalay will for a time greatly increase the difficulty of military operations, as communication with the outposts and the despatch of reinforcements or supplies will be wery difficult.

The former English Residency, lately occupied as a barrack by the 23rd Madras Regiment, and other posts have been temporarily abandoned owing to the inundation.

Desultory skirmishing with the insurgents continues.

It is officially announced that by the 20th of October reinforcements, consisting of two batteries of artillery, four tattalions of British Infantry, three regiments of Native Cavalry, and five regiments of Native Infantry will arrive in Burms. The forces in Native Infantry will arrive in Burms. Upper Burma will then number about 35,000 men, and will be divided into six brigades. Sir Herbert McPherson will assume the chief command.

There is much sickness among the troops at Bhamo. Four hundred, or 25 per cent. of the entire force, are in hospital. At Membu, a very unhealthy station, 450 are in hospital.

Sir Charles Bernard has arrived from Bhamo.

The engineers have cut the embaukment south of Mandalay to let out the water in the town. There is no result as yet. The river is stationary. It is reported from Bhamo that the water is falling there. When the river has fallen nine feet the upper portion of the town will be relieved. The lower portion will continue inundated for a long period. tinue inundated for a long period.

It is useless to attempt to repair the embankment until November. The breach is now 300 yards wide. In 1877 a por-tion of the embankment burst, but the inundation was not then nearly so extensive as now.

The present catastrophe is undoubtedly largely due to inadequate provision for public works. Only 10 lakhs are allowed for the whole province, including railway survey. No funds were available for keeping the embankment in repair. The value of the property lost and the injury caused by the inundation it is estimated will largely exceed 100 lakhs.

It is urgent that public works should be undertaken. The railway which is surveyed near Mandalay should be forthwith begun. It would greatly assist in the pacification of the province, and would prevent great suffering among the people by affording means of subsistence.

Mr. Daly, recently appointed Inspector-General of Police, has arrived and assumed command.

The death of the Myentzein Prince is reported from Yewcon and Kyouksai as having occurred on the 13th from fever. The intelligence is not confirmed, but the report, it is clear, is widely believed. The Myentzein Prince was about fourteen years of age, and his troops were commanded and his affairs managed by his two uncles. Unless his forces are dispersed his death is comparatively unimportant. His younger brother, who was with him, or some other soi-disant Alompra Prince will take his Desultory fighting continues. On the 18th Lieutenant Higgins, of the 21st Madras Regiment, with 130 Sepoys and military police, defeated the insurgents near Yeu, with a loss of 50 killed. On the same day Lieutenant Smith of the Hampshire Regiment, with a body of European mounted infantry and police, defeated the insurgents at Yamoen, driving them from a stockaded position with a loss of 32 killed. Our loss was one Sepoy killed, and two of the Hampshire Regiment and two Sepoys severely wounded.

The water in the inundated district has fallen six inches. A

The water in the inundated district has faited six inches. A large number of corpses have been found.

It is now known on unquestionable authority that strong representations were made some time ago to the Secretary for Upper Burma by the Council of Burmese Ministers, who have been retained in office to advise the Government, as to the urgent necessity which existed to repair the Bund before the floods. This recommendation was, unfortunately, not acted on.

At a recent interview with the Burmese Archbishop I asked At a recent interview with the Burmese Archbishop I asked his opinion of the treaty recently concluded with China concerning Burma, and explained its provisions to him. The Archbishop declared that he thought the rulers had done wisely and justly in making it; during the reign of Mindone embassies had been sent to China every ten years, although Theebaw had not sent any. The Archbishop added, he was not aware of China having sent similar embassies to Burma.

It is essential that some general rules should be established for dealing with insurgents who are captured. The manner in which the amnesty proclamation was administered in certain districts completely nullified Lord Dufferin's statesmanlike policy. Boshway, who now requires a brigade to check him, offered to surrender if his life were spared. This was refused, although, since the conquest of Burma, Boshway does not appear to have committed any crime except that of fighting against us. Boshway's brother surrendered under the terms of the amnesty proclamation, in similar circumstances, and was sentenced to penal servitude for life. If this system continues an early pacification of the country is hopeless. In the Pagan district Captain Eyre, Deputy Commissioner, deals with prisoners in a wiser and more merciful spirit, and his district, extending to 14,000 square miles, shows satisfactory results.

Surgeon-General Farrell has assumed charge of the Military Medical Department, relieving Dr. Mackinnon, who rendered excellent service in organising both civil and military hospitals.
The following officers have been appointed to the command of the three new brigades which are to be formed in Burma in October:—Cavalry Brigade, Brigadier-General R. C. Stewart; 1st Infantry Brigade, Brigadier-General C. J. East; 2nd Infantry Brigade, Brigadier-General W. S. A. Lockhart.

It is to be hoped, now that the Government are about so largely to increase the force in Burma, that an effort will be made to

to increase the force in Burma, that an effort will be made to secure what has hitherto been wanting—namely, good intelligence, power, rapid motion, prompt action, and constant harassing of the dacoits. Without these the work of pacification will be a long and tedious business. It is, indeed, open to doubt whether the end in view might not be more easily attained, not by pouring in troops, but by raising a large, well organised and well-equipped force of miltary police, recruited chiefly from non-Burmese tribes, but with a certain proportion of Punjabees non-Burmese tribes, but with a certain proportion of Punjabees to give backbone, and commanded by specially selected officers. Such a force acting under district officers would be better able to protect the peaceful villagers and follow up the dacoits than would the regular military expeditions. It is in the highest degree important, too, that the lower ranks of the Civil Administration should be largely increased, that the officers should be carefully chosen, that preference should be given to those who have some knowledge of the country and language and that the have some knowledge of the country and language, and that the higher executive posts should invariably be conferred on men who have some experience in Burma, and not, as has been done in some cases, on Indian civilians who are wholly ignorant of the Burmese language and customs.

Another matter of urgency is improvement in communications, roads, and railways, works which will not only materially facilitate the restoration of order, but will also tend to the development of the country.

But whatever be the means adopted, the work of pacification should be pushed on. Delay will have the effect of increasing the difficulty, and of raising troubles with the Shans, the Kach-yens, and other hill tribes, and of opening the door to possible complications with China.

Rangoon, August 22. Intelligence received here states that the steamer Kah-Byoo, with troops, proceeded to a point five days' voyage above Kendat, and captured a stockade, making prisoners the rebel chief and 30 of his followers.

In consequence of unusual floods, the navigation of the river is difficult.

ST. Petersburg, August 22. More particulars are published here about the Russian emissary in Wakham, and the proposal to submit it to Russian domination of the Khan of Tash Kurghan, who is reported to have made the following speech to the assembled deputies, probably in the presence of the Russian agent:—

"We are but a very small handful of people in comparison with the countless soldiers of the great White Czar. We have not enough fighting material wherewith to oppose the troops of Badakshan will not permit them to pass through his territory."

The assembly then decided to despatch an Embassy to the Governor-General of Turkestan.

The semi-official Journal de St. Petersbourg to-day, commenting on the explanations given to the British Parliament on the 19th inst. by the Marquis of Salisbury and Lord Randolph Churchill with reference to the recall of the English members of the Afghan Boundary Commission, says that the words of the British Ministers seem to indicate a spirit of conciliation, of which note should he taken.

BRITISH POLITICS AND INDIAN INTERESTS. (Pioneer.)

What is the moral of the late elections so far as the affairs of What is the moral of the late elections so far as the affairs of India are concerned? Perhaps at the first glance some one will answer—they have no moral for us; they related exclusively tone single domestic question. But is not that in itself a most important fact in its bearing on India? More and more of late years it has come to pass that the whole course of each general election has been determined by some one question of current politics, and this time the melancholy truth has been that the election has been that they have been they ha politics, and this time the melancholy truth has been that the election has hardly deserved that name at all, except that it has indirectly given rise to a new House of Commons, and thus to a new regime. It has really been what the papers have boldly been calling it at home, a plébiscite. Nothing more has been thought about in reference to any candidate coming forward between Cornwall and Caithness than whether he would help to turn Mr. Gladstone out or help to keep him in. And yet the regiment of delegates returned to Westminster to vote on that question are incidentally entrusted with supreme control of all problems of delegates returned to Westminster to vote on that question are incidentally entrusted with supreme control of all problems of administration that can possibly crop up for years to come in any part of the British Empire, except so far as the people in constitutional colonies are in a position to deal with some problems for themselves. Now, a House of Commons of that kind is not a body which can on the face of things pretend to be well qualified to give decisive votes about the affairs of a country so remote as India from the home and understanding of the British Demos. Certainly the House of Commons has not yet been degraded in practice to the level towards which a perpetuation of the present system of politics in England will surely though slowly press it down. There is a prestige about a seat in Parliament still, which still renders the privilege attractive for English gentlemen; and in this way the members pitchforked by a plébiscite into the green benches are better able to discharge the all-round duties of Imperial councillors than the system on which they are elected of Imperial councillors than the system on which they are elected now would seem to promise. But the situation is growing worse and worse. The fortunes of Great Britain are in the hands of the populace. The instincts of the populace have proved by no means discreditable so far, but they are wavering and uncertain, and there will not always be a mad Minister with a scheme of and there will not always be a mad Minister with a scheme of national disintegration in his hand to drive the voters at future general elections by flocks and herds wholesale into the Conservative camp. The Government of England is to be steadied for a little while now under the influence of the singular revulsion of feeling which Mr. Gladstone has unintentionally brought about, but on some other occasion democratic passion will assert itself afresh, and a country depending on the issue of periodical plébiscites, with all its secondary problems settled in the intervals by chance, must certainly be recognised as one which is rapidly divesting itself of the attributes which ought to distinguish the Premier State of a great Imperial confederation like the British Premier State of a great Imperial confederation like the British

Will this process of change go on until the natural unsuitability of democratic institutions at home, to harmonise with Imperial responsibilities abroad, give rise to some convulsion in which the continued maintenance of British rule in India becomes impossible? As has been truly prophesied a long while ago, if India is ever lost to England, it will be lost on the floor of the House of Commons; and if the politicians of India—lightly declaiming about their wrongs without a particle of desire in their hearts for the withdrawal of the British régime—do not learn to look at the whole subject in a new way, the ultimate course of this country's history may yet he found to ultimate course of this country's history may yet be found to hold in reserve for them some very disagreeable surprises. The question may come to be not whether England will lose India, but whether India will lose England—and all the English troops and officials scattered about this land, who are not without their uses for Bengalis and the Hindu population generally. No one at present may be able to foresee definitely how such a loss as that might be brought about; but all philosophical historian are agreed that a state which is on ultra democracy at home he are agreed that a state which is an ultra-democracy at home hancever yet been able to hold great dependencies and exercise benevolent despotism abroad. How are we to guard, as far as that can be done, against the vindication of past traditions in the case that so much concerns us? Surely that is really the problem, if we look at the matter in a statesmanlike way, that everyone interested in the welfare of India ought to be thinking over against the time likely to come round again next year, when the Administration of India may be overhauled by Parliament or the Government at home in a very thorough-going way. And as surely its earnest contemplation—in a patriotic and large-minded spirit—will point to the conclusion that it is only by the gradual disentanglement of Indian affairs from Parliamentary interference disentanglement of Indian affairs from Parliamentary interference that the maintenance of the Government of India on a practical footing can be secured—its strength, consistency, and dignity of purpose safeguarded. Parliament may, indeed, continue to debate Indian affairs, and no particular harm need onsue. Indian candidates may be returned to the House of Commons for such English constituencies as would be willing to give them a mount, and the results may be very satisfactory to all interests concerned; but the supremely important thing to aim at is that the control of affairs in this country should come to be less the sport of Parliamentary majorities and of party catastrophes the control of affairs in this country should come to be less the sport of Parliamentary majorities and of party catastrophes which have nothing to do with India any more than with signs of the Zodiac. The future of India, civilisation of India, the continued well-being of the Indian people, and their steady onward movement in the direction of civilised constitutional control over their own affairs, depends really upon the health and vigour of that organisation which some Native patriots are so insanely desirous of weakening—the Government of India in India. That element of the present organisation which represents the dangerous entanglement of our affairs with the convulsions of the British democracy is—the Government of India in St. James's Park. There is the nervecentre on which at present the diseases of Parliamentary intrigue covernment of India in St. James's Park. There is the herve-centre on which at present the diseases of Parliamentary intrigue operate with such fatal effect. Paralyse that nerve-centre, and the glorious anomalies of the existing Indian régime may be protected for an indefinite time, and may only give way at last to the ultimate development of a constitutional system out

The permanent health of the Indian Government would certainly not be accomplished by the mere abolition of the Secretary of State's Council under conditions that would leave the India of State's Council under conditions that would leave the India Office clerks in a position to dictate in the Secretary of State's name to the Viceroy and the Executive Council. But a clear and general recognition of the true principle that ought to regulate the relations between the Ministry in office at home for the time being and the real rulers of India on the spot, would pave the way for a routine that would be quite beyond the reach of clerkly interference. It is true that a supreme check on the Government of India must always reside in the Ministry for the Government of India must always reside in the Ministry for the time being, for that authority acting in the Sovereign's name could always recall a Viceroy whose policy should be in some way fatally at variance with its own. And the appointments to the Viceroy's Council would necessarily be made from home; but the grand point to obtain would be that while the men to carry on the Government of India would always be selected by the Ministries of the day their measures should not be held light to the tries of the day, their measures should not be held liable to the detailed and vexatious control of a bureau in London, itself controlled by a Parliamentary officer.

BURMA. (Delhi Gazette.)

Lord Dufferin cannot be acquitted of blame in the matter of Burma-not the blame of annexation-but of trusting too much to the competency of one man whose antecedents did not justify the trust. It may be taken for granted that the character of an administrator is best known to his subordinates, and that the one who fails to inspire them with confidence is unfit to rule. who tails to inspire them with confidence is unfit to rule. Mr. Bernard did no! inspire such confidence even when he held the comparatively obscure position of Chief Commissioner of Lower Burma. Complaints about the feebleness of his administration and the spread of dacoity were rife long before the annexation of the upper province was dreamed of. That alone ought to have been sufficient warning to Lord Dufferin; that the man was hardly equal to the experience of breaking in a helf garage market. been sufficient warning to Lord Dufferin; that the man was hardly equal to the emergency of breaking in a half-savage people to the unused yoke of settled government. Upright and honourable he may be—no one has ever breathed a word against the fair fame of the present ruler of Burma—but conquest tasks the powers of something more than a good man; it requires a real king of his species to carry it out effectually. John Lawrence was something besides a believing Christian; he was a man of hard character, who made people bow to his will, and did not indulge in crotchets about the impeccability of Native agency. By all accounts Mr. Bernard has had a fad for pushing Native Burmans to posts of responsibility that has borne most unfortunate results. The reasons for such failure lie on the surface. In a national struggle, such as this has now become, such men are looked upon as traitors to their country, and are hated with an intensity of feeling that does not extend itself to foreigners. Englishmen are murdered, it is true, in Burma, but we have not heard of a case of such revolting atrocities being practised not heard of a case of such revolting atrocities being practised upon them as were experienced by two unfortunate Burmans that were disembowelled and then crucified by their countrymen for having taken office under us! That single case is more eloquent than volumes of despatches about the Burma difficulty. It shows that the opposition in that country must be utterly crushed by force of arms before it will be safe to employ a Burman in a place of trust. The men so employed have the most terrible fates in store for them if they fall into the hands of their countrymen, and must from the nature of the case be forced to play the part of traitors to both sides. That they actually do so is certain, otherwise how would it be possible for bands of marauders to meet and disperse in the suburbs of Mandalay itself before the authorities are aware of their presence? It may be very chivalrous on Lord Dufferin's part to give Mr. Bernard every chance of retrieving the disaster that his failure to realise the bearings of the situation in Upper Burma has created, but war means business as well as chivalry.

A MOAN FROM MANDALAY.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

A subaltern once jolly, now oppressed with melancholy, In a reed-hut near the banks where the Irrawaddy flows. With a large supply of brandy and muddy water handy, Lights a big Burmese cheroot and gives utterance to his woes.

What a beastly hole is Burma, do you wonder that I murmur.

And think that I'm a fool thus to grumble at my lot?

In a place as hot as Hades, where there are no chums nor ladies, And where my constitution's very quickly going to pot.

There's no chance of leave to Ooty, for they tell me its my dooty In this lonesome, sweltering swamp, for at least six months to stop,

And try to crush dacoity—but that is hoity-toity
For it isn't quite so easy to catch Johnny on the hop.

For a Burman's full of cunning, and uncommon good at running When he sees the bayonets glisten at the edge of his stockade. So its precious hard to catch him—though you'll find it hard to match him

At looting a police post, or a peaceful village raid.

"My duties are so various, my food is so precarious,
For days its only biscuit and that tinned Chicago meat, For now the river's rising, it is not the least surprising If we cannot,' says the commissary, 'supply fresh grub to eat'!

As the rains are fairly set in, I just take my daily wettin' As a necessary evil, whether in or whether out, For the hut the Sappers built me has very nearly kilt me With rheumatics, for the water comes in just like a bally

Then to add to all my trouble my monthly bills are double, The Flotilla charges awful for my stores they bring by boat, My boy asks treble pay, too, my syce has run away, too, Though I gave them both 'free rashuns and a brand new burra coat.'

"But I thought that wouldn't matter, for I'd surely get my batta,

And pay my tailor something, at the one and sixpence rate, But nothing half so pleasant, I don't even get the present, For they say I crossed the Frontier just an hour or so too

"It's solemn truth I'm writing. I've had a lot of fighting.
And lived for months in jungles, 'midst mosquitos, fleas, and gnats

And yet still I've got to bear it-Lord, I wish that they could share it.

Those medal hunting loafers who pic-nicked on the flats!

Now I think that I remember, that they told me in November, The Upper Burma Field Force would most surely have an end.

That the country would be pacified, with farms and houses beautified,

And on the kind civilian, Jack Burman would depend.

"That the civil jurisdiction (which at presents utter fiction) Would relieve us of our duties, and the coach would smoothly run,

But now, 'twixt you and me, sir, I fancy ninety-three, sir, Will find that little business only just about begun.

So, unless they soon relieve me (though perhaps you won't believe me),

I shall chuck up my commission, and to England wend my

There I'd rather sweep a crossin' (that I never can have loss in),
Than command a British outpost on the road to Mandalay!!" -Rhymer Rambling.

THE BEST COURSE FOR INDIA. (Englishman.)

The proposed Commission on the affair of India, if it is ever held, will run considerable risk of mistaking the imaginary grievances of India for the real ones. It would be a great advance if Hirdus and Muhammadans could unite in considering for themselves what would prove of advantage, not only to themselves as individuals, but to the country at large. By so doing they would form a commission for inquiring what new measures would conduce to the good of their own country, and what they would recommend for the consideration of the mixed Commission, which may in a few months probably be sitting in London. Moreover, by taking such action, they would do more to prove their own fitness for being admitted to a larger share in the administration than by the most vituperative articles in the vernacular Press, or the most fervid oratory on the part of Young Bengal. But we are not encouraged to hope for much in this direction by what we already know of the labours of Oriental gentlemen in the Calcutta Municipality or in the Legislative Coupsil of Bengal, and in the Municipality, or in the Legislative Council of Bengal, or in the Legislative Chamber of the Vicoroy of India. Doubtless there are other classes of the general population that must not be overlooked. The opinions of non-official Europeans—the merchants, the planters, and the professionals—are of far more value to the British legislature than the crude ideas of Asiatics, or the cutand-dried views of the official classes which have been stereotyped for generations. Half a century ago Lord Metcalfe, the wisest of Bengal Civilians, declared that India would never advance among the nations until it was more largely colonised by Europeans. The experiences of the thirty years that have elapsed since the Mutinies of 1857 have shown the truth of this prediction.

It is the non-official Europeans—the men who alone are capable of forming independent views untrammelled by the prejudices of official caste—that are the best able to advise a British Parliament as to what is best for the future well-being of the people of India. But, while pointing out the political value of the evidence of non-official Europeans, it must be admitted that the greatest reforms in Indian administration have been carried out by British rulers, many of whom belonged to the official classes. Warren Hastings introduced law and order into the Bengal Provinces, which for many years had been ravaged and desolated by the Mahrattas. Lord Cornwallis settled the revenue and administra-"sitting in dharna." The Marquis of Wellesley suppressed the wicked practice of throwing living infants to the alligators at Saugor. Lord William Bentinck abolished suttee, or the burning of living widows with their dead husbands. Lord Dalhousie created a new India by the introduction of railways and telegraphs in a country which before his time had no macadamised roads and no cheap postage. Even the late Sir Cecil Beadon, who was a Bengal Civilian to the backbone, who was bold enough the evil custom which had been presented from a reported abolish the evil custom, which had been practised from a remote antiquity, of consigning the dying and the dead to the merciless waters of the Ganges. Does any one believe that these reforms, or any like them would or could be carried out by Asiatic rulers, unless, indeed, they had been educated, not only in Government unless, indeed, they had been educated, not only in Government schools and colleges, but by foreign travel and European experiences? The days have gone by when the opinions of Hindus and Muhammadans as regards legislation and administration were ignored by British rulers. Never, indeed, was there a time when more consideration was given to their aspirations. But it is desirable that they should be put in proper form and be expressed in moderate language; and then we can predict that no pains will be spared to meet their views. So long as speakers and writers only urge their right to power and place without proving their fitness for either the one or the other, they must not be surprised that they make no impression upon their rulers, and surprised that they make no impression upon their rulers, and that their suggestions are treated as wild and visionary.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION. (Bombay Gazette.)

sense, that the silver question would never have been heard of but for the inconvenience which it represents to the European element in India. But supposing that that were as true as it is untrue? Since when has it been deemed consistent with the principles of government for the State to stand by in indifference to the lot of servants and subjects whose resources are day by day dwindling away, through the operation of causes whose inaccessibility to the modifying influences of Governmental intervention, though it has been proclaimed often enough, is open to serious question? Or supposing that the losses which the Anglo-Indian population, official and non-official, are week by week sustaining may be contemptuously put aside as a "class question," is there one of the classes in England, small and uninfluential though it might be, who would fail to get redress if they alone in the community had to submit to a constant "sweating" of the currency which turned their shillings in the size of the currency which turned their shillings in the size of the currency which turned their shillings in the size of the currency which turned their shillings in the size of the currency which turned their shillings in the size of the currency which turned their shillings in the size of the currency which turned their shillings in the community to the size of the currency which turned their shillings in the community to the currency which turned the currency which turned the currency which turned the currency which the currency which turned the currency which turn rency, which turned their shillings into ninepenny pieces, and threatened unless it were checked to reduce them to sixpences? It requires something like fanaticism to treat this as a class question, but even if it were nothing larger than that it would be too grievous in the burden it imposed upon a class to warrant the Government in leaving it to chance. And, after all, the people who most directly lose by the fall in the rupee are deserving of some consideration at the hands of the State. We Angle-Indians came here to make our living it is true but we

Anglo-Indians came here to make our living, it is true, but we hope we are worthy of our hire, and we cannot be expected to them in coin of good weight and value.

The belief that the matter is as far removed from the opera tions of State intervention as air currents and rainfall is thrust upon us with all the confidence of medieval dogmatism. This, however, is a matter for inquiry and experiment. The action of however, is a matter for inquiry and experiment. The action of Governments, as the history of the silver question only too plainly shows, can influence the currency to the detriment of a community. The most enthusiastic of monometallists would searcely deny that the German Government, in demonetising silver have contributed largely to our present difficulties. Is the State, then, powerful only for mischief in currency matters? It will be difficult to persuade the public that Governments are all-powerful in reducing the value of one of the currency metals, but they are powerless for the curing of evils which have been caused by their own resolutions. What the remedy is is a matter for negotiation and inquiry rather than for dogmatic affirmation. The resources of English diplomacy must be exhausted if we cannot bring the Powers who have done so much for the depreciation of silver to confer with diplomacy must be exhausted if we cannot bring the Powers who have done so much for the depreciation of silver to confer with us as to ways and means of rehabilitating it. And whatever the true solution of the problem may be, it cannot be to the interest of the Empire that it should be divided into two parts, in one of which the standard of currency is in an appreciating, and, in the other part, in a depreciating, metal. The grievance is Imperial, and we shall have to see in the first instance if the remedy can be found within the Empire. But it is too soon to conclude that neither in this way nor by agreement with our neighbours is it possible to obtain relief from a burden which is becoming month by month more serious for the Government of India and for a by month more serious for the Government of India and for a portion, at least, of the community in India.

CHEAP SILVER. (Pioneer.

A correspondent criticising Mr. O'Conor's Note in a Calcutta journal, under the name of "Exchange," affects indignantly to assume that the Note attributes stupidity to Calcutta merchants. assume that the Note attributes stupidity to Calcutta merchants. The Note is obviously addressed to opinions which have been expressed in London, in Calcutta, in Bombay, conspicuously in Mr. Maclean's article on "Boycotted Silver" in the Asiatic Quarterly—everywhere, in fact, where men have discussed the effects of exchange on Indian trade. To endcavour to give to a discussion of this nature a personal turn, or to fasten an invidious charge on Mr. O'Conor in the name of Calcutta merchants is extravagent approach would be repudiated by none discussion of this nature a personal turn, or to fasten an invidious charge on Mr. O'Conor in the name of Calcutta merchants, is extravagant nonsense, which would be repudiated by none more warmly than by Calcutta merchants themselves. It is a great pity that in the examination of questions of this importance, irritating and irrelevant matter should be introduced. It has nothing to do with the subject and hinders us from understanding the points at issue. If "Exchange" can refute the fallacies which he ascribes to Mr. O'Conor's Note, by all means lot him do so. But if he prefers, as he tells us, to leave that task to others, why rush into the discussion at all? The main contention of the Note lies in a nutshell. It is this: that notwithstanding the great fall in gold prices and the comparative firmness in silver prices, the fall in exchange, combined with other factors, has enabled Indian produce to be put on the European markets. But for the fall in exchange Indian trade, in view of the low prices in Europe and the relatively firm prices here, must have collapsed. The appreciation of gold which has contributed to lower the prices of other commodities has also lowered the price of silver; and has thereby provided for the Indian exporter some relief from the effect of the fall in the value of other commodities measured in gold by indirectly lowering f.r him the price of Indian produce. But the fall in the price of commodities has been greater than the fall in silver; therefore exchange has only lessened a loss: it has not given India a direct superiority. The competition of Indian produce, purchased as it has been at relatively firm prices with European produce, the prices of which have fallen with the appreciation of the gold standard, must probably have wholly collapsed if it had not been for the effect of the appreciation of gold on silver, the Indian medium of exchange. Through the operation of this cause for a given quantity of gold a greater quantity of silver could be procured and employed in the purchase

SIR GRANT DUFF'S GOVERNMENT. (Pioneer Correspondent.)

Mr. Grant Duff has abdicated his functions as a Governor. He will see no one. He will listen to nothing. He has allowed himself to be a pliant tool in the hands of the men he ought to rule. No one can approach his Excellency. He is not of our world at all. Salem, Madura, Tinnevelly, Tanjore—all attest the cruel impotence of his rule. The blight of a scandal has fallen upon each. Of Mr. Grant Duff as a man I know nothing. Who does? He may be as full of virtues as a porcupine is of INDIAN quills. To counterbalance his public vices I trust he is. I write of him as the figurehead of our Government—the Right Honourable who has done more to create bitterness and despair than any irresponsible, uneducated autocrat of the East in the days of old.

They tell us our Governor has done much for decentralisation, much to secure for Madras the power and right to spend her revenues upon herself. They tell us he has written able minutes and made scholarly speeches. But what care we for the doctrines of decentralisation and the endless balderdash of literary flux when no man is sure of justice? Will a stone satisfy hunger? We do not care to revel in theories; we do not wish to luxuriate in polished antitheses. What are hopes to us who cannot be heard in self-defence before we see our characters shattered, our fortunes ruined before our eyes, and a barrier raised up in the pathway of promotion for our children? We desire justice. Mr. Grant Duff will not give it us. The issue between him and us is plain, short, simple. The case I have laid out before you at such elaborate length is but an illustration, and the latest, of the procedure that this Government has ever delighted to adopt. Advisedly I opened with the publication of Mr. Crole's papers because I wanted his story to exact for itself Mr. Crole's papers because I wanted his story to speak for itself.
My comments are my own. I had no wish to attempt to sway or influence the public opinion, or to detract from whatever impression a perusal of the papers would per se create upon the public mind by any observations of my own. I reserved until afterwards the right to comment upon the action of the Government. My view may be wholly incorrect. That will not affect the fate of the whole narrative as disclosed by itself to the world at large. But I have a very strong opinion that my views are not incorrect. I have a very strong opinion that my views are not incorrect. I have a very strong opinion that the majority of reflecting beings will agree with me that there is something very rotten in the state of Denmark which calls for speedy and decisive intervention. Our demand is fair and natural. It is absolutely reasonable. The demand is that there shall be a close and public inquiry into the conduct of the Hon. Mr. Henry Sullivan by men whose good faith we can trust. There must be close and public inquiry into the conduct of the Hon. Mr. Henry Sullivan by men whose good faith we can trust. There must be no shirking the real issue. If Mr. Sullivan has in any way been connected with the alleged attempted sale of his or his son's land, there should be no disinclination to publish the truth to the whole world. We are tired of Mr. Grant Duff and his Council. We want men who will rule us as men. We are tired of constant persecution. Mr. Crole's case is the latest illustration of this persecution. We are determined to make a stand upon it. And we shall. We will no longer submit tacitly to seeing the influence of Government wilfully misused to protect some favoured friend, and as wilfully misused to crush some inconvenient foe.

BENGAL.

THE Directors of the Bank of Bengal have reduced the Bank rate on Thursday to 6 per cent.

THE LORD BISHOP OF CALCUTTA will, it is said, commence his visitation as Metropolitan on the 15th instant. His tour will include Delhi, Lahore, and probably Bombay.

THE latest news from the tea districts is that the weather generally has been more favourable for manufacture, less rain having fallen at all the stations with the exception of Darjeeling.

COLONEL M. C. PERREAU, Controller of Military Accounts, Bengal, has proceeded to Simla on leave, Colonel Durand acting for him, and Colonel Woodcock acting as Pay Examiner.

THE MANIPUR FRONTIER.—A road is to be made from Tammu to Lokchas, fifteen miles in length. Roads are being repaired and bridges built by the Manipur authorities in order to secure better communication with Tammu.

THE Englishman announces that a despatch will shortly be sent to the Secretary of State regarding the grievances of the Un-converted Service as represented in the many memorials sub-mitted to Government a few years ago.

THE Englishman hears that Mr. W. W. Daly, the Commandant of the Burma Valley Frontier Police Battalion, is going to Mandalay as Officiating Inspector-General of Police, and expects excellent results to ensue from the appointment, which it says is one of the best that has been made since Upper Burma was taken over was taken over.

THE Simla Argus understands that the sender of the telegram stating that the clerks in the Government offices at Simla sympathised with the object of the public meeting held in Calcutta to protest against the annual exodus to Simla, has been found out. He is a Babu who endeavoured to prevent detection by using a false name.

THE death is announced of Zinath Mahal Begum, the widow of Shah Bahadoor, the last Mogul Emperor of Delhi, and mother of Prince Jewan Bukht, who died at Rangoon recently. The Begum was seven-three years of age, and was credited with having taken a prominent part in the Indian Mutiny of 1857. For some years past she has been in receipt of a pension of Rs. 500 a month from Government, with a free house, having been State prisoner in Rangoon since 1858.

MADRAS.

MAIL.

Information has reached Vizagapatam that the leader in the last outbreak among the Rumpas has been arrested and safely lodged in jail. The majority of his followers, however, have escaped into the jungles, where it is almost impossible to follow them at this present each permit to the same at them at this present season, owing to the unhealthy climate.

The Madras Mail records a fall of twelve and a half per cent. in the value of the shares in the Mysore Gold Mining Company this month, notwithstanding that the mine yielded 2,099 ounces of gold from 954 tons of ore during June. The paper mentioned says the fall is attributed in London to a rumour that the cham-pion reef has been lost, and adds, on the best authority, that the mine prospects never looked better than at present.

MR. GIRDLESTONE, late Acting Resident at Mysore, says he saw not in one but in perhaps fifty places the gold apparent, and that there are thousands of tons of gold-bearing quartz with promise of three ounces and upwards to the ton waiting to be excavated.

THE Muhammandans in Madras, under the auspices of Government, are now eager to join in a Central Association which would be a consulting body for the Government to appeal to whenever a question regarding Muhammadan interests was involved. It is reported that Government mean to place high officials on this Committee to show that they are earnest in their wish in every way. It is well known that the Muhammadans have set up workshops in Madras to help their struggling youths to earn a livelihood, and this Association grants scholarships to youths at different schools.

THE VICEROY'S VISIT TO POONA.—"It is confidently stated atFoona," says the Times of India, "that some time in October Lord Dufferin will pay a visit to the capital of the Decean. A Conference is to be held as to the best method of converting the Contrence is to be held as to the best method of converting the Bombay Army into an Army Corps, and the Duke of Connaught will be present at it. The Viceroy, no doubt, has also financial topics to discuss with Lord Reay. We regret that exigencies of S:ate compel the time of the visit to be in the month of October, for it is the most disagreeable and feverish month of the whole year in Poona. Mr. Cordery, the Resident of Hyderabad, has undergone a painful surgical operation since his arrival in England, and somelittle time will probably elapse before he will be able to leave his bed. His condition, however, is not such as to cause any anxiety to his friends.

IT is said that Mr. E. Hutton, Presidency Postmaster, is likely to remain in temporary charge of the office of Postmaster-General, Bengal, during the absence of Mr. H. M. Kisch, C.S., who proceeds on short leave early next month, and that the Deputy Postmaster of Bombay will be appointed to act as Presidency Postmaster at Calcutta.

THE NIZAM OF HYDERABAD is about to make his debut on the Indian Turf. He has just imported Matchlock, by Musket out of Yatterina, half-brother of the great Martini-Henry, from New Zealand, for whom £1,000 has been paid. The horse is said to be the very best that has left Australia for these shores, and a real clinker over long distances, but requires a very powerful rider to drive him along. He would be no good for sprint races. The horse will doubtless be got ready for November's meeting, when probably he will make his first appearance on an Indian race-course in the Hyderabad Gold Cup.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

EIGHTY-FIVE YEARS OF IRISH HISTORY (1800-1885).*

"When you have a weak case, abuse your adversaries' attorney" is a maxim of world-wide fame—but what is the inference when the phials of wrath are poured out not only upon the legal luminary in question, but upon the judge, the jury, the witnesses, and every living soul connected with the question at issue? This is precisely what has happened as regards Mr. O'Neill Daunt's "Eighty-five Years of Irish History." Pitt, the Prime Minister, during whose incumbency of office the Union of England and Ireland was consummated, is described as a man nay, rather, a fiend—so dead to the nobler instincts of humanity, so callous to the sufferings of his fellow-creatures, so indifferent to the execrations of the civilised world, that he permitted and encouraged the intolerable persecution of the people of Ireland so as to "create and intensify the mutual distrust of the Catholic cruelty, villainy, and rascality of every sort and description, as Mr. Daunt would have it believed, soon overran the land as part and parcel of "Mr. Pitt's infernal policy." That England's Minister could have been inspired with one noble idea, that a solitary spark of patriotism and honour could have illumined the black and treacherous recesses of his godless soul does not come within the pale of the Celtic author's distorted imagination. Nor do others of high station receive more considerate treatment. Lord Castlereagh is painted as a traitor, so base, so low, so utterly contemptible that at least on one occasion a high-minded patriot "desired the noble Secretary of State to get out of his house with all possible expedition on pain of heing kicked down the holl all possible expedition on pain of being kicked down the hall doorsteps by the footman"—poor Castlereagh! Lord Cornwallis is let off more mercifully; he is only charged with stifling his conscience, and "acting" a lie in luring to destruction the Roman Catholics, whom he deluded with soft words, the utterance of which chould have rejied a blush of sharms upon on heavet of which should have raised a blush of shame upon an honest man's cheeks. The judges who convicted prisoners charged with offences which Mr. Daunt considers much in the light of " 'practical jokes" are gibbeted as, if not venal, at any rate biassed. Members Parliament who voted for the repeal are "scamps" who would "vote for anything"—(O shades of the recent "Irish" division)! Peers, if, that is, they were in favour of the Union, "cared nothing for their country, except for the purpose of trafficking upon it." Mr.

Secretary Rice, who, in 1832, delivered in the House of Commons. a most crushing and unanswerable rejoinder to the agitator O'Connell's demand for Repeal, is held up to execration as dabbling in "statistical jugglery." "His miles of figures, his tables of statistics, his carefully-contrived arithmetical legerdemain, made an imposing show in an assembly whose members cared nothing for the merits of the case, and cared everything for their own grass on Triab resources."

their own grasp on Irish resources."

But enough has been said about this holocaust of abuse. Scarcely less moderate is Mr. Daunt's language in regard to the Union. Usurpation, swindle, bribery, corruption, venality, dishonesty, injustice, slavery, et hoc genus omne, are words which meet the eye at every turn. Imagination seems to carry the reader to the region of Bohemia, and the chronicles of Mr. O'Neill Daunt sound, as it were, the revellings of the lowest and basest outcasts of human conjety. Alexel too for the Union. Not applied of human society. Alas! too, for the Union. Not an ill, not a failure, not a trouble, not a discontent is found in unhappy Ireland but it arises from the Union. If population increases, and the means of supporting them are not forthcoming, it might be supposed to be an economic problem of life. Oh! no; it is the Union. The potate crop fails, and an appalling amount of human suffering is the obvious consequence. Some would be tempted to characterise this calamity as a dispensation of the Almighty. Far otherwise. The "blight" may have been owing to a decree from the portals of heaven, but the "famine" was owing to the Union. An illicit distillery is seized—and most people would consider the violation of the law deserved punishment; not so Mr. Daunt; the poor man is merely "eking out his rent," and, of course, the necessity for rent is what?—can there be a doubt? —the Union. And so for page after page, usque ad nauseam, is abuse upon abuse heaped upon the poor Union.

And now let us glance at Mr. Daunt's logic, such as there is;

for, denunciation and inflammatory declamation eliminated, the residue would not fill many pages. It is argued that, as the Union was brought about by force and bribery, it would be the barest justice to undo what has been done by such questionable means; but surely, if old sores are thus to be reopened, if in the annals of a nation the restoring hand of time is never to be permitted to heal wounds, the history of the country must be rewritten—one solitary item in the cup of iniquity must not be the measure of a kingdom's repentance. Stupendous, indeed, would then be the result of such a mighty upheaving; not a family, not a home, not a hearth but what would witness new faces and fresh scenes faces and fresh scenes.

Again, time after time we are told that trade with England is pauperising the country, by promoting the export of food which would otherwise serve to support the people. Did it ever occur to this enlightened patriot's generous mind that the provisions in question are not given to the hated Saxon, but purchased with money, which latter enriches the possessors. Moreover, if this narrow, illogical aspect of the case be sound, how could it happen, as predicted, that if only the Union were repealed, England would reap the advantage of increased trade with a prosperous, happy, and contented nation—a trade which is to leave a wide wake of ruin in its track. There is, we fancy, something rotten in the state of Denmark. state of Denmark.

We have no desire to write a word which can wound the susceptibilities of a single reader, but we cannot refrain from asking whether it is altogether in accordance with the experience of the world that Roman Catholics are prone to extend the hand of fellowship to their Protestant fellow citizens. We have no wish to suppose that the scenes of bygone days are ever likely to be re-enacted in this nineteenth century of grace, but is it not a fact that the religion which places the Perce of Rome at its head is exclusive in its dogmas and of necessity dictatorial in its tenests? Aut Casar, aut Nihii, is the motto of the Catholic Hierarchy. Look, too, at the history of the Land League and its successor, the National League. Does it redound to the credit of the priesthood that when human butchery is to be done, when cruelty, oppression, and tyranny are in the ascendent, the parish priest uses the overwhelming influence of his position, not to quell and stifle the baser passions of the human heart, but rather to lend to murder, rapine, and plunder the sacred sanction of the faith of Christ?

One word more, and we leave Mr. Daunt and "his readings of history" to the verdict of his readers. England's rule is characterised as tinged at its source with the impurity of alien blood. No remedies can be potent, no measures can be efficacious, so long as the foot of the hated foreigner touches the soil of Erin's sons. High-flown sentiments, resounding loyalty, inspiriting patriotism, but, alas, alas! the breath which breathes such touching plaints, thunders forth in tones of fury that a foreign invasion would be welcome if only it broke the shackles of England's rule. Nor can it be forgotten that the hand which rejects with scorn the proferred friendship of a mighty Empire is contaminated with the degrading touch of alien gold. This is Ireland!

EMINENT WOMEN SERIES.—SUSANNA WESLEY.*

We should never have heard of Cornelia, had she not been the We should never have heard of Cornelia, had she not been the mother of Tiberius and Caius Gracchus. Nor, in all probability, would anyone have written the biography of Susanna Wesley, but for the fact that she was the parent "of John Wesley, the founder, and of Charles Wesley, the poet, of Methodism." The "refulgent orb of night" is none the less admired because her radiance is reflected; nor can the virtues of a woman be better brought into prominence than in the persons of the sons whom she has reared.

prominence than in the persons of the sons whom she has reared.

Herself the youngest of twenty-five, and the mother of nineteen, children, Susanna Wesley, née Annesley, was born in 1669. Her fasher, Dr. Annesley, vicar of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, was one of the many conscientious Anglican clergy, who, refusing to subscribe the Act of Uniformity, were ejected from their livings. Notwithstanding the repeated entreaties, coupled with promises of preferment, of his kinsman, the Earl of Anglesey, he remained firm in his refusal, and eventually became, until his death in 1694, preacher at a licensed meeting-house in St. Helen's, City. Samuel Wesley, Susanna's future husband, had, though also the child of an ejected Anglican priest, been brought up by his peace to his mind; so he entered as a servitor at Exeter College, Oxford, being ordained in 1689, and married to Susanna in the same year. He became rector successively of South Ormsby and of Epworth, both in Lincolnshire, was an able writer, † a brilliant preacher, for many years represented the local clergy in Convocation, and, like so many "born and brought up in the boson of Dissent," was decidedly "high" in his theological views (p. 51).

The married life of the Rector and his wife may be described as a constant struggle for daily bread, chequered by extra misfortunes in the shape of fires. The living was worth but little, Mrs. Wesley "always had a baby coming" (p. 26), and her husband, who seems not to have been an extravagant man—he was addicted (p. 161) to no "worse personal extravagance than his pipe, and a little snuff"—was wholly unable to make ends meet, and was during some months a prisoner for debt.

These circumstances, her own frequent illnesses, and the difficulty in which she found herself to provide even clothes for her family, would have cowed most women, but they only served to bring into prominence the sterling metal of which Mrs. Wesley's character was composed.

She threw herself heart and soul into the education of her many children; and her letters to her sons—mainly, though by no means exclusively, of a religious character—were constant while they were (chiefly through the aid of charitable foundations) at school or college. Of her educational plans the account-given (p. 29) by herself is a pattern of clearness, as the system is itself a model of foresight and exactitude. It would be diffi-cult to imagine children thus trained under the eye of a mother -and of such a mother—being otherwise than exceptional characters.

Yet it is impossible not to perceive that this excellent parent vas much less successful with her girls than with her boys: and there are something more than hints of domestic infelicities of a very aggravated character. Nor does Susanna Wesley's later married life seem (p. 135) to have been altogether happy: how far her naturally warm, almost imperious, temper was to blame

Tar her naturally warm, almost imperious, temper was to be some for this it is difficult to judge.

It is on the singular ability which she displayed in bringing up her family, under the most appalling difficulties, on her persistent "pluck," and, more especially, on her admirable letters to ther sons—we have in this little volume but too few of these, and wone to the daughters—that her fame will deservedly rest. For terseness and vigour of expression, and for sound English common sense, it would be difficult to surpass these maternal counsels.§

Mrs. Wesley was no bigot, though inclined to Jacobitism, and it is not a little instructive to read her letters to her husband which she had originated in her regarding a religious meeting which she had originated in her own house during his absence (p. 103, &c.), and to reflect how far these reunions may have been the then unrecognised germ of the future action of her sons. Her letters on this topic are particularly interesting and valuable.

We thank the authoress for a careful and sympathetic bio-graphy of a very remarkable woman. The little work can but add to the widespread reputation of the series in which it finds a worthy place.

Miscellaneous.

It is said that the Indian Table of Precedence is again out of gear, and that it will shortly undergo revision. It is also stated that the title and honour list for the year has not yet been completed, as there are two Indian Princes who have been recommended for the Exalted Order of the Stars, as well as some minor planets, which only wait the signification of the Royal will and pleasure.

MR. T. W. Holdeness, on return from furlough in November, will again take up the appointment of Under-Secretary in the Revenue and Agricultural Department, the North-West Government not being able to provide for him suitably. Mr. C. S. Bayley, who has been holding Mr. Holderness's place for the past fifteen months, goes to Ajmere as Assistant Commissioner, vice Mr. L. W. King W. King.

Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway.-An extra ordinary general meeting of this company was held on the 21st anst. at the City Terminus Hotel, Major-General J. S. Trevor in the chair, to consider a resolution authorising the directors to enter into a contract with the Secretary of State for India in Council for working the railway from Cawnpore to Achnera. The Council for working the railway from Cawnpore to Achnera. The chairman said that the proposal was based upon the terms on which they worked the Rajputana-Malwa Railway, with only three differences of any importance. The first was that the charge for interest on the capital expended on the line, which was to be a first charge before they shared in the profits, was fixed at 4 per cent. instead of 5 per cent., as they had to pay in the case of the Rajputana-Malwa line. The second difference was that they were bound to take over only such members of the staff employed on the Government line as they might need, and only such portion of Government line as they might need, and only such portion of the rolling stock as they might require. In the case of the Raj-putana-Malwa Railway they had to take over the whole of the stock and the staff. These changes would enable them to make a considerable reduction in the expenditure. The last change, which the Government insisted on was that the whole charge for which the Government insisted on was that the whole charge for loss by exchange should be a debit against the capital account, instead of only half the loss, as in the case of the Rajputana-Malwa line. The first two changes in the agreement were obviously to the advantage of the company, and as regarded the third difference, it would only affect their dividends to the extent of £300 in the course of a year, which was represented by less than Id. per cent. on the stock in their dividends. They were asked to take over the line on the 1st of October—that was, after the monsoon was over, and when there was, generally speaking, no further fear of accident from floods. He then mentioned the disfurther fear of accident from floods. He then mentioned the districts traversed by the line, and stated that in its whole course it passed through a fertile and pretty densely-populated country, and possessed all the elements of a large traffic, both passengers and goods. The gross receipts for 1886 were expected not to fall far short of 11½ lakhs. If that was so and they had been working the line, the net receipts would be about 5½ lakhs, or more than sufficient to cover the Government charge for interest, as well as to give the company some little margin of profit for themselves. The main source on which they relied for profit in working the new line was the trade which they hoped to be able to put on it from the Rajputana-Malwa system. In conclusion, he moved a resolution in effect carrying out the object for which the meeting had been convened. Mr. J. M. Mitchell seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. carried unanimously.

QUITE another effect of the oft-quoted fact of the "two hundred and fifty millions" of India, than to fill the wondering ears of English borough voters, is to dwarf in Indian eyes all disasters, however great and tragic in themselves. We republished in a corner of the Pioneer the news telegraphed to the Madras Times, corner of the Pioneer the news telegraphed to the Madras Times, and telegraphed thence to us, of the burning of a thatched theatre at Palamcottah and the roasting alive of about a hundred of the spectators. Such a disaster in any town of England—in any town of Europe—would produce, day after day, in every British newspaper, telegraphed columns of "latest details," of "terrible scenes," and "narratives of survivors." Every illustrated paper would teem with illustrations of the theatre, of the disaster, and the victims. Funds would be started, and every charitable soul in the kingdom would be moved to loosen purse strings on behalf in the kingdom would be moved to lossen purse strings on behalf of the bereaved. Here nothing of the kind occurs; nor does the divergence of feeling result from differences of race. Everything divergence of feeling result from differences of race. Everything is on so large a scale in India. Earthquakes, tornadoes, epidemics, and conflagrations come and go, each affecting, maybe, many thousands; but what are thousands in two hundred and fifty millions, more or less? Reduced to due proportions, the disaster at Palamcottah—comparable in real magnitude to the greatest of all similar catastrophes that have occurred at home—is to the bulk of India as the burning of a single Scotch peasant in a thatched hut in the Highlands would be to Great Britain. The telegram would receive in the English leading newspapers just a casual paragraph in some small print corner; and, due proportion being insensibly observed, such is the position of the Palamcottah disaster in the newspapers of Northern India. Contrasts like disaster in the newspapers of Northern India. Contrasts like these grimly bring home to us at times the vastness of the task that England in India has before her.

How do the Burmans get Arms?—The question whether Burmese and others are allowed to carry arms of precision has, apparently, says the Rangoon Times, been decided by themselves to their own satisfaction, for not only are breech-loading rifles, but Winchester repeaters, with cartridges and implements com-plete, finding their way into the hands of Burmese in the interior. The paper adds: "We believe that these repeaters and implements come from Messrs. Rodda and Co., Calcutta, through the Rangoon Custom House, openly enough, so it seems that the Government approve of the business."

THE Pioneer says: —" It is now an open secret that if Mr. Ilbert had not been thus called away he would in all probability have obtained an extension of service in his present office. The Viceroy's high opinion of the abilities of his colleague at least makes it certain that the proposal would have gone home very strongly recommended."

Efforts are being made at Simla to establish an Uncovenanted Service Association, the objects of which are stated to be as follows in the prospectus:—"The Association is intended to embrace all branches of the Uncovenanted Civil Service, which have interests in common. It needs no lengthy arguments to prove that the first thing necessary to advance or protect those interests is co-operation. Questions daily arise affecting the interests of the service at large, which because they do not concern any individual in particular, are left unnoticed or imperfectly dealt with. To watch for and thoroughly ventilate and discuss all such questions this Association has been formed. But while it is intereded that its association has been formed. it is intended that its special function shall be to deal with all matters in which the Service in general or large sections of it are interested, it will also aid with advice and assistance individual interested, it will also and with advice and assistance individual interests where such assistance can be rendered without prejudice to the general body." It is stated that upwards of 300 signatures have already been obtained of members of the Uncovenanted Civil Service residing at S.mla who wish to join the Association.

§ We will give but one specimen of style. Epworth Rectory was visited by strange noises: the eldest son wrote from Oxford, à propos of this, of a "wraith-vision." To this Mrs. Wesley, by no means an of this, of a "wraith-vision." To this Mrs. Wesley, by no means an unbeliever in the supernatural, made the suggestive and terse reply:

"I do not doubt the fact, but I cannot understand why these apparitions are permitted. If they were allowed to speak to us, and we had strength to bear such converse—if they had commission to inform us of anything relation to their invitable. of anything relating to their invisible world that would be of any use to us in this—if they would instruct us how to avoid danger, or put us in a way of being wiser and better, there would be sense in it: but to appear for no end that we know of, unless to frighten people almost out of their wits, seems altogether unreasonable." The whole matter in a few lines! in a few lines!

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.

THE RIGHT HON. ROBERT BOURKE, who has accepted the Governorship of Madras in succession to Sir Grant Duff, goes direct to his post on the 4th of November next. He carries with him the prestige of being the brother of the most popular Viceroy who ever ruled the destinies of India, which in itself is much in a country where sentiment holds so powerful a sway. But he goes also with other advantages. It is, we believe, no secret that that astute judge of character, the late Lord Beaconsfield, formed a very high estimate of the powers of the hen. member for King's Lynr, and some years ago offered him the important post of Governor of Bombay, which Mr. Bourke, however, declined, preferring to retain his position of Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in which office he enjoyed the entire confidence of his chief. Mr. Bourke's career as a politician has been singularly hopeful. Painstaking, cautious, and fluent of tongue, be has made his mark at the Foreign Office, and it would be difficult to name an Under-Secretary who carried more weight in the House when important debates were on the tapis.

In fact, the general impression in this country is that a member of the Party so rapidly rising in public estimation will be wasted in the quiet arena of Madras life. This may be so from the standpoint of worldly advancementand we do not question that Mr. Bourke's claim upon the Ministry would have entitled him to a more distinguished position than he has chosen to accept. Nevertheless, we are firmly convinced that Lord Salisbury used a wise discretion in sending out the best man at his command to fill the forthcoming vacancy consequent on the retirement of Sir Grant Duff. It would be discourteous on our part to disparage too severely the Administration of thatoutgoing Governor. De mortuis nil nisi bonum is a maxim applicable to the moral as well as the physical world, but it is scarcely ungenerous to assert that his tenure of office has been attended with but a scanty modicum of success. And why? Everyone must, of course, answer the question in his own way, but to us the reason is not far to seek. The worthy knight is a singularly able man; possibly as far as mere cultivated intellect is concerned he stands second to none of his predecessors. Some would urge, and it may be with truth, that he is in this respect facile princeps; but-fatal but !-he is of the doctrinaire school of politicians, and as such his failure is but another instance of how impossible it is to rule mankind in accordance with the tenets of a particular code of thought. The world is an ever-varying, everchanging agglomeration of individuals. To study their idiosyncracies, to humour their peculiarities, to direct their wayward wills, is the art of a statesman. To huddle them altogether in a confused mass of orthodoxy, to make one garment fit every frame, is the act of an enthusiast out of touch with life, whose dreams are not of the "earth earthy," but rather of the heavenly Utopia, which Moore's fertile brain has depicted as the summum bonum of existence.

Thus much for the argumentum ad hominem. Look at the result. Is it an exaggeration to assert that the whole of the Madras Presidency is seething in moral rebellion; not, of course, the rebellion which takes the form of revolt against authority, and outrages on the Queen's subjects, but the inward aversion of the governed towards the governing? At every turn evidences meet the eye. The Press at least, in one instance, was so unruly as to be "boycotted" at Government House. The Crole scandal distresses and perplexes the minds of all those who have at heart the purity of our administration, and the integrity of the Service which enjoys such a splendid heritage of uprightness. The atmosphere, too, is charged with rumours disquieting in nature, though possibly false in fact, and it needs a clear head and strong will to set matters right. For these reasons it cannot but be an occasion for rejoicing that the Prime Minister has sent to Madras a sound, shrewd statesman, ready to listen, willing to receive advice, but withal resolved, it may be hoped, to do the right regardless of consequences. Public confidence has received a rude shock in Madras, and it will need a skilful hand to restore the normal régime of calm contentment, which gives to that metropolis its name and its reputation as the "benighted City."

We are tempted to make these observations in the hope that should they have the good fortune to come under Mr. Bourke's observation he may be induced to give a care to the task that is set before him, remembering that the art of governing is to govern, and that to treat human beings as pieces on a chess-board is to court failure and to ensure want of success. "The proper study of mankind is man," is an aphorism which Statesmen would do well to lay to heart; and especially should Mr. Bourke, in this respect, wrap himself in the mantle of his brother, the late Earl Mayo. This was the secret of his success in the East; he lived in the hearts of the reople. To rule without feeling is but the passing shadow of a cloud, so quickly passeth it away, and the place knoweth it no more.

Many a kindly eye here will watch Mr. Bourke's career with interest. At Madras his coming will be welcomed by all classes, and when the allotted term of his office expires we feel sure that the verdict of history regarding his administration will be that it was a success, justifying advancement to yet higher honours.

Most persons who have followed events in Burma must have felt a curiosity to know something more of the Karens, that interesting people who have figured so often in the Burma telegrams as successfully opposing the dacoits, when the Burman country people everywhere were tamely submitting to their fate. Beyond that they were a nationality separate from the Burmese, that they differed from them markedly in the honesty of their men and the chastity of their women, and that they were ready converts to Christianity, few people up to the other day could have told us much about the Karens. It is well therefore to hear that some light is to be thrown upon this curious question of the existence within one nation of another similar to it in all exof the existence within one nation of another similar to it in all external appearance, yet not intermarrying, and apparently totally different in character. A book upon the Karens of Burma, it is said, is to be brought out shortly by Mr. Donald Smeaton, of the Civil Service in these provinces, who was for several years in the Burma Secretariat. Mr. Smeaton was one of the first persons outside missionery civales to take a sympthetic interest in the outside missionary circles to take a sympathetic interest in the why and wherefore of the Karens, and his book, when it appears, will no doubt deal with the subject in an adequate manner.

HINDU SOCIAL REFORM.

The Hindus of Meerut have submitted a memorial to the Viceroy praying for legislation against the evil of infant marriage.

The Hindus of Meerut have submitted a memorial to the Viceroy praying for legislation against the evil of infant marriage. They say:—

"Your Excellency's memorialists, though fully aware of the evils of unnecessary legislative interference with regard to matters social, do not see why Government should not step in and help the movement against infant marriage. It is urged by those who are opposed to all Government action that it is a work which should be done by the people themselves. But the people in India are an immense mass, whom it might take centuries to practically move. Should the removal of the evil in question be postponed for an indefinite period? Should Government permit such a gigantic evil to go on unarrested in its progress for such a length of time? For the custom is actually speading in several parts. All enlightened and thoughtful people in the country are for the removal of the evil, and any action of Government in respect of the matter which they would support, would have the support of the masses; for, in matters social and religious, they naturally follow the lead of their superiors. Government in the present instance will have the support of all enlightened India. Without even such support, has not Government interfered in a number of matters of social and religious reform? Government has legalised the marriage of Hindu widows, abolished satti, put an end to the custom of throwing away children into the Ganges, fixed the age of majority by the Indian Majority Act. The High Courts are every day interfering with Hindu Law. Is there any reason why Government should not interfere in this matter with a view to put a stop to infant marriage, which is a far greater evil than satti or child-murder under a religious vow? All civilised Governto put a stop to infant marriage, which is a far greater evil than satti or child-murder under a religious vow? All civilised Governments have dealt with the question of marriage, and fixed an age before which no man or woman could be married. In ancient India also the Hindu Lawgivers fixed marriageable ages both for men and women; and it is the opinion of Sanskrit scholars, like the late Pandit Dayanand Saraswat Swami, Diwan Bahadur Bachuneth Bac and others that infinit Raghunath Rao, and others, that infant marriage was unknown in ancient India. Your Excellency's memorialists hold that infant marriage is not enjoined by the authoritative Shastras, and that a legislative enactment on the subject would, therefore, be no interference in a religious matter."

"When maniacs in search of notoriety bicycle round the world into Afghanistan," observes the Indian Planters' Gazette, "they must not be surprised if any British politicals right about face them out of it. Mr. Thomas Stevens has accordingly "written to the Times," saying that the Boundary Commission "did nothing to help him through," and that he "could a tale unfold" of what he saw in Afghanistan that would make London's hair stand on end. It would have been very extraordinary if the Boundary Commission had done anything to help him through. Travelling Commission had done anything to help him through. Travelling gentlemen who risk their lives—without, of course, the slightest intention of doing so—and imagine that the agis of the British flag is over them in the wilds of Cabul, should always be treated as wayward children and deported. We have no sympathy whatever for a man who goes humbugging about over the infernal roads of Afghanistan when he can glide noiselessly along level English lanes between hawthorn and dog-rose hedges.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

CAPTAIN R. H. JENNINGS, R.E., has left Mussoorie, where he has been on special duty connected with the Survey Department, for Simla, to take up the appointment of Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General at head quarters.

WE regret to learn the death of Major Yard, North Lancashire Regiment, at Ziarat near Quetta. Major Yard was suffering from disease of the liver.

THE Government have decided that out-of-India leave under the new Staff Corps Leave Rules, 1886, will commence from date of embarkation, and that officers proceeding on such leave shall be allowed full pay and allowances, and half staff from the date on which they cease to do duty with their corps to the date on which their out-of-India leave begins.

THE following important addition to the Rules of Procedure, The following important addition to the Rules of Procedure, 1886, has been made:—Where a sentence passed by a court-martial has been confirmed, and is found from any reason to be invalid, the authority who would have had power to commute the punishment awarded by such sentence, if it had been valid, may pass a valid sentence, and the sentence so passed shall have the same effect as if passed by the court-martial, but the punishment awarded is the punishment awarded by the court-martial, but the punishment awarded is the same effect as if passed by the court-martial, but the punishment awarded is the same effect as if passed by the court-martial, but the punishment awarded is the same effect as if passed by the court-martial and the punishment awarded is the same effect as if passed by the court-martial and the punishment awarded by a court-martial and the punishment awarded by a court-martial and the punishment awarded by such sentence passed by a court-martial and the punishment awarded by such sentence are passed by the court-martial and the punishment awarded by the ment awarded by such sentence shall not be higher in the scale of punishments than the punishment awarded by the invalid sentence, nor, in the opinion of the same authority, be in excess of the last-mentioned punishment.

A FEARFUL tragedy occurred at Bangalore at the 1st Madras Lancers barracks. Thondray, a horsekeeper of the regiment, seized a sword and cut down Jemadar Adjutant Hoosain Khan, killing him on the spot. The horsekeeper then attacked Havildar Major Sheik Ahmed, cutting him severely across the right arm. The jemadar who was murdered was selected as a model of the Madras cavalry which is now being shown in the Indian and
